HAVING been called upon to superintend a Third Edition of the following Work, I have,—for various reasons,—deemed it my duty to describe, more particularly than on former occasions, its nature and character: in other words, to make the Preface a sort of Introduction, and thereby to familiarize the mind of the Learner, in some degree, with a subject to which he may be supposed to be a stranger; and with a Work differing, in some respects, from the Grammars generally in use. Some slight alterations have, moreover, been made in this Edition, and some additional matter given, of which the Reader ought to be apprized.

It should be borne in mind that, as the study of the Hebrew Language is not commenced generally in childhood, the method usually had recourse to in teaching children, could not well be adopted. With them the memory is, perhaps, the only faculty which we can call into exercise. We can hardly expect them to adopt any method of instruction calling for an extensive use of the reason. With men the case is widely different. To ask them to commit large portions of elementary works to memory—as it is the case with children—would be to require of them a toil to which they could not reasonably be expected to submit. With them the reasoning faculties have, to some extent at least, been exercised. And, when instruction can be imparted by means of these,—as it is the case in studying the sciences,—it is our duty to avail ourselves of them.

In constructing the following Grammar I have, therefore, adopted the Analytical method, endeavouring, as I have proceeded, not only to give the Rules by which the Hebrew Language is governed, but the Reasons of them. This, I have conceived, would be the most effectual method of dealing with this subject with men; and particularly with those for whose use it is principally intended, the Students of our Universities. This, too, as it has occurred to me, would be one of the best means of keeping up the interest in an inquiry but too little encouraged in other respects, and, indeed, of carrying Learners on to an extent, which could not eventually but be delightful to themselves, and profitable to the public.

An experience of some years has convinced me, that the criticism of the Hebrew Bible is not to be mastered in a few lessons, whatever some pretenders may affirm to the contrary. Its language, indeed, is not inferior either in regularity, ease, elegance, strength, or extent, to many others which are cultivated among us with the greatest ardour: while its history, doctrines, prophetic declarations, and morals, are as much superior to any thing to be found in them, as light is to darkness, or as the glories of heaven are to the poor and perishing enjoyments of this state of things. Still, it must be confessed, much time, thought, and diligent inquiry, are indispensable to its right understanding, especially in those parts which are the most interesting, and of the greatest practical moment. To study its language, therefore, as IT IS,—that is, as its OWN ANALOGY, collected from itself, and its cognate dialects, exhibits it,—has appeared to me to promise the best means, both of thoroughly imbuing the mind with a real knowledge of it, and of keeping up that interest in the meantime, which is absolutely necessary to its due acquirement.

Under the synthetical method,—as it has been called,—that is, the mere propounding of certain rules,—which might be true or false, and which in cases innumerable were not true—most men eventually discover, that they can pronounce with certainty on scarcely anything connected with the letter of the Hebrew Bible. The reason is, No foundation has been laid in their own minds, on which they can rely. Of the exact and precise import either of words, phrases, or more lengthened constructions, they have realized no substantial means of judging. They know not how these have naturally, usually, and thence authoritatively, obtained currency; and the consequence universally is, they are compelled either to rest on the authority of some other person,—no better informed perhaps than themselves,—or else to have recourse to ingenious conjecture.

It is not my intention hence to infer, or to have it believed, that I have, therefore, now at length discovered something from which none should in any case presume to dissent. By no means. My only wish is, to recommend INVESTIGATION, and this on grounds the most liberal and extended; and thus to obtain that additional light and knowledge on the contents of the inspired Scriptures of the Old Testament, of which, I think every one must confess, we stand in need. I will only say, that if indeed I have been fortunate enough to have advanced, in any degree, a mode of inquiry in the more elementary parts of the Hebrew language, likely to render good service in this respect, I shall have ample reason to be most thankful to Him, who is the giver of every good and perfect gift. I will only add, the advancement of Divine truth, and of the honour of Him to whom we owe it, has been my sole motive in so far venturing to differ from others who have preceded me in this line of literature.

On the letters employed in giving utterance to this language, nothing need be said as to analysis. These must necessarily be taken as postulates. The easiest method, perhaps, of acquiring a speedy and familiar knowledge of them is, to write them over frequently, as recommended in the following work, pages 11, 12.

The syllables, however, present matter for inquiry; and this, as the Learner will eventually find, of very considerable importance as it respects the construction and variation of the forms of words.

The letters of the alphabet are, here, according to the most authoritative mode of viewing them, all Consonants: as it is also the case in those alphabets which have been immediately derived from the Hebrew, viz., the Syriac, and Arabic. These, to form syllables, are combined with a system of Vowels, placed either above, below, or in the same line with, the consonants: and, in forming such syllable, they universally come first in the order, and, occasionally both first and last: as in the English syllable, ba, or bad, respectively. Now, as words often consist of more syllables than one, a difficulty may arise,—as it is often the case in the English,—as to where a preceding syllable ends, and a subsequent one begins.

Under the synthetical method of teaching Hebrew, as adopted, I believe, in all the Grammars up to my time, the Vowels were said to be, long, short, or most short (Gram., p. 14, note): leaving the Learner to determine for himself, nevertheless, how the syllables in words of any length were to be divided: and, hence, on what principle it was, that these vowels varied when words received any increment, from the formation of the feminine from the masculine noun, the dual or plural from the singular number; or the form proper for the state of construction, in either case. A slight variation of this doctrine was, indeed, proposed by Dr. Gesenius: which however had these defects, that it not only presumed upon a knowledge of the analogy in the Learner, which he could not be supposed to possess, but also left him entirely in the dark as to the particulars just mentioned.*

I thought it right, therefore, to propose a different view, and to designate the Vowels by names which would indicate their properties and powers, as it respected their use in the construction of syllables: and thence, to prepare the mind of the Learner

* The doctrine of Gesenius—and which has been adopted by Mr. Ewald—teaches, that the Vowels are to be considered as either pure, or impure. Pure when no consonant interferes with the sound of the Vowel, if we except that which precedes it, as, אַ, or אָ, ba. Impure, when otherwise, as, אָבָה, אָבָה, אָבָה, אָבָה, אָבָה, &c., ba, be, bad, &c. He further says, that such syllables as אָבָה, אָבָה, אָבָה, differ in length from each other. But, in neither of these cases does he present the Learner with any thing beyond ingenious theory, of which no possible use can be made: and, in the last, he has no means of knowing whether his statement be true or not. I am sorry to dissent from authorities so respectable; the desire to advance the truth is my only reason for doing so.

for all the varieties found to affect the forms of words by the accident of Grammar. The new names proposed by me were, Perfect, and Imperfect, Vowels: not because one Vowel was, as such, more perfect than another: but because the one class had,—when preceded by a consonant,—the property of constituting a complete, or perfect, syllable in Hebrew orthography: the other, that of forming syllables, which were incomplete, or imperfect (see the Gram., Artt. 29. 32. 33. seq.); and which, therefore, required either the addition of a subsequent consonant, or else of an accent, to terminate them.

By this means the Learner is enabled to see at once, where every syllable ends; and consequently, where any subsequent one, contained in the same word, ought to begin (see Gram., Artt. 67. 68.); and, in the same way, whether a Vowel ought to be of the Perfect, or Imperfect, class upon any increment, either syllabic or asyllabic, being attached to a word by the accident of Grammar (see Gram., Artt. 92—102.); and, indeed, to see the entire groundwork, on which the whole of the changes of the Vowels rests. I was myself most agreeably surprised when I found this to be the case. I was astonished to find, that the system which had hitherto appeared to be the most intricate, irregular, and difficult imaginable, was as easy, regular, and obvious, as was perhaps discoverable in any language under the sun. It is true a few anomalies are visible in it, as occasionally noticed in the Grammar; but this cannot be surprising in a language so very ancient as that of the Hebrew Bible is, and upon which so very little attention has been bestowed: but, when we compare these with what is found in most other languages, and in the English in particular, we cannot but be compelled to confess that they are as nothing.

Under this system all syllables, in the Hebrew, are what the Latin and Greek Grammarians would term long: i. e. whether we take such syllable as bā, bād, Heb. בָּ, בַּד, בֵּד, or בַּדָּ; with what I have termed Perfect vowels; or, as bad, bed, Heb., בַּד, בֵּד, &c., or בָּ, bá; i. e. each having an Imperfect vowel, and terminating either in a consonant, or else with an accent without a consonant. In every case the syllable will be long: and, so far, every syllable in any word, equal to one another. The syllable on which either a Tone-accent, or Euphonic-accent, rested, or which involved a quiescent letter, &c., might indeed, when the language was vernacular, have had a greater length of time allowed for its enunciation than any other in a given word.* But, of this we now know nothing; and, from the nature of the case, can know nothing. But this is of no importance. All we want now to know is, how to understand with accuracy and precision, the manner in which words have been derived and varied; and thence the force of the declarations of the Sacred writers.—And, for this, I think enough has been placed within our power.—The Learner cannot do better, in the first place, than to make himself familiar with this system of syllabication; which he will find sufficiently unfolded in our first, and second, Lectures.

The next thing to which my attention was turned was, the Analogy, by which the defects visible in Hebrew words appeared to have arisen: a subject entirely untouched, as far as my knowledge goes, by any Grammarian either Jewish or Christian up to the time in which this work first appeared in 1827. In Mr. Ewald's Grammar, indeed, which appeared in the same year, the same thing was done; but in a manner (according to its Reviewer, Mr. de Sacy),† not very well adapted to the use of beginners.—This the Reader will find, from Art. 72. to Art. 77. of the present work, as to the Consonants; and from Art. 86. to Art. 87. 6. as to the Vowels.

It will be seen that, by the operation of these laws,—which

* In all cases, therefore, the syllables in Hebrew are to be accounted long, whether involving perfect, or imperfect Vowels; as, אַ, אָ, אֲ, אִ, אֵ, אֶ, אֹ, אָ, אֻ, אֱ, אִ, אֵ, אֶ, אֹ, אָ, אֻ, אֱ, &c. Neither the Shēvâ, simple or compound (Gram., Art. 40. seq.), nor the Furtive Pâthakh (Art. 45.), is ever allowed to constitute a syllable. What the different lengths of such (long) syllables were, when the Hebrew was a living language, it is as impossible as it is useless now to ascertain. Nor can the purity, or impurity, of the Vowel sounds be turned to any good account whatsoever.

Some of the Grammars published in England since the appearance of mine in 1827, have adopted this method of viewing the Vowels, without, however, acknowledging the source from which it was taken.

owe their origin entirely to euphony,—every defective form of word in the Hebrew may be satisfactorily accounted for; that all such defects,—governed as they thus are,—are regular and constant: and, therefore, that they present to the Learner any thing but the difficulties which had hitherto been supposed:—that, not only every defective noun and particle may now be reduced to some one measure or other of the term, פֶּקֶד; (taken as a mere measure of words: see Gram., Art. 146. 8. seq.) but also, every defective verb, to that of the regular trilateral one: the Learner having been apprised where, and why, every possible defect can, and does, arise. This the Reader will find discussed and reduced to practice under the various forms of the nouns segolate and otherwise, as well as under those of the different sorts of defective verbs.* By this, much time and perplexity have been spared to the Learner: and, unless I am greatly mistaken, the character of the Hebrew language has been vindicated from that mass of unsightly, and almost unconquerable disorder and difficulty, into which the Grammarians had unhappily thrown it.

The next question which engaged my best attention was, that of the laws by which the Tenses of the Hebrew Verbs were governed. And, I think I may affirm, that in this I succeeded. The results at which I arrived, are those given in the seventeenth Lecture of the present Work; and which appeared to me fully and easily to meet every case occurring in the Hebrew Bible. When I had thus far completed my system, I had recourse to the Arabic Grammars, and Commentaries written on them, by native Grammarians of the East; and was most agreeably surprised to find that my conclusions were those, at which they had arrived long before me. Extracts from these Writers will be found in their proper places, on every particular essential to this question: and which, I think, cannot but afford proof sufficient against every thing short of long-standing and inveterate prejudice, that, in this respect, I have had the good fortune to have fully succeeded.

* Gram., Artt. 148—198. seq. Mr. Nicholson speaks of the Grammar of Ewald (preface, pp. xiv. xv.), as if no other exhibited the forms of nouns, with the variations of the Vowels, analytically. See my Gram., Art. 148. 4. &c.

Under this system we have two Tenses, a Preterite, and a Present, just what we have in the English, the German, the Persian, and many other languages.* This Preterite is (grammatically) taken universally as a Preterite: but is applied also as a Future in strong prophetical and imperative declarations; intending thereby,—according to Arabian usage,—to intimate the highest degree of certainty or necessity, respectively, that such thing shall be, or ought to be done. This, indeed, had long ago been seen by Grammarians and Commentators. The other Tense which I have termed the Present Tense, was,—after the Jewish Grammarians,—termed the Future. But, as it was occasionally found to designate the Past Tense; and, in this case, was often preceded by the particle ׀; i. e. Vaw with Páthakh, it was conjectured, and then laid down as a law, that this particle had the absolute power of converting this Tense into a Preterite: whence it received the honourable appellation of “Vaw conversivum,” Heb., ׀ הִהְפֵּיטוּ ׀. Of the many instances occurring, which militated directly against this doctrine, no account was made; † some even affirming, that these, as exceptions, afforded ample proof of the truth of the rule!

* E. g. Love, pres. and Loved, pret. are the two English Tenses. All the rest are made by auxiliaries: as, fut. I will love; i. e. I will to do so; implying—not expressing—a futurity in the action named. So the German, Ich lobe (praise) pres: Ich werde loben, fut. implying, as before, not expressing by any particular grammatical form, the futurity of action intended. So the Persic, کرد, pret. did. خواهم کرد, I desire, (to) do, fut. The Latin and Greek futures are, apparently, made in a similar way.

† It has appeared doubtful to me, whether the best Grammarians among the Jews ever held this doctrine. All they seem to have taught was, that, as this conjunction usually connected what was in reality a present tense, with the past action of some other verb, or narrative, it had the effect of making this present tense contemporaneous with such action, and thus relatively,—not absolutely,—changing its tense. See Gram., Art. 231. 10.; 233.—5. with the notes, and my Hebrew Lexicon, under the letter ׀, pp. 163. 4., with the notes.

It was well known, moreover, that this Future tense,—as it was called—had occasionally the force of a Present. It was therefore found in all the three tenses, Past, Present, and Future. Various expedients were had recourse to, for the purpose of accounting for this: and among these, those adopted by Koolhaas,* and after him by Schræderus,† and thence, slightly varied by some others, were certainly the most successful; but still, they all fell short of the truth. The system adopted by me,—and shown to be that of the Grammarians of Arabia,—makes this a Present Tense. Present, in the first instance, to the time in which any declaration is made or committed to writing: in the second, to any time or event, introduced into the context: and in this last case, it is identical with what has usually been termed among ourselves, the historical Tense.‡

‡ Mr. Ewald tells us (p. 135 Heb. Gram., Nicholson's Translation), that "the names preterite and future are inappropriate; it appears most correct to call them perfect and imperfect." By the terms perfect and imperfect, he further tells us, that finished, and unfinished, are to be understood, as it respects the action of the verb. Which, however, will not hold; for he himself tells us (p. 137), that the force of this imperfect (unfinished action) "may be conceived" . . . "in an event that has simply happened, and is past." By which he must have meant, is finished. The fact is, these distinctions are both unnecessary and untrue here; the preterite tense, not necessarily implying finished action, nor the present, unfinished. Mr. Ewald, however, is quite right when he makes this Tense (our present) equal to a present or a future, just as the circumstances of the context may require, and as the mind of the writer, viewing things, in either past, present, or future time, with reference to that in which he writes, conceives. This is just what the Grammarians of Arabia teach. If Mr. Ewald had kept simply to this point, and shown that the Tenses (preterite and present) are used both absolutely and relatively, and omitted every thing about finished and unfinished, imaginative, external spheres of thinking, &c. &c., I do not think his Grammar would, on this question, have differed at all from mine. Nor, in fact, does it essentially differ on this question, in Mr. Nicholson's translation, although in Mr. Ewald's original work of 1827 it does. How is this to be accounted for? It is not improbable, I think, that Mr. Ewald might have ploughed a little with my heifer. I have been both amused and gratified in observing the progress of Mr. Ewald's mind on this subject. In his Grammar, as it appeared in 1827, he treats the two Tenses as Aorists (§ 277. seq.), and as capable of being used in the past, the present, or the future, time: very much as Jahn, Gesenius, and others, had done before him. He rejects the notion, however, of the "Vaw conversivum," as adopted by Gesenius (ib. § 284. pp. 538—9. seq.), and adopts that of its having a Relative conversive power only. He tells us, moreover (ib. p. 529), that the Poets often use (what I term) the Present tense, as a present tense, in their more lively manner of exhibiting past things as present to the mind.* This was, indeed, making considerable progress towards the truth. Its only fault was, that it was defective, ascribing to the vivid imagination of the Poets only,—as Mr. Ewald was pleased to style the Prophets, &c.,—what indeed was found to prevail in every other Writer of the Old Testament.

In the Edition, however, of Mr. Ewald's Grammar of 1835, as translated by Mr. Nicholson,† the case is quite different. Mr. Ewald has here entirely rejected the doctrine about the Aorists; and has adopted the whole doctrine respecting the Tenses, as published in my Grammar of 1827; and of this the following extracts will afford sufficient proof. In p. 135 we are told, that "The distinction of tense and mode is still very simple in Hebrew, since the full sense is rather contained in the vivid feeling of the speaker." Here, I remark, no exception is made in favour of "the Poets." It is added, "The conception of the time of an action is first twofold: it is either considered as already finished, done, and therefore as definite and certain, or, as not yet finished and done, as being done merely." These distinctions it is Mr. Ewald's object to apply to the Preterite, and Present tense, respectively. But they are groundless, as Mr. Ewald himself has indirectly allowed a little lower down, where he tells us, that the force of such imperfect (i. e. unfinished action) "may be conceived . . . in an event that has simply happened, and is past:" i. e. completed and finished. His rule, however, is more completely unfolded, as follows (ib. p. 137): "But the imperfect may be used with . . . propriety to denote a happening (the present) in the past, as soon as the thought is engaged in that sphere . . . and thus placing the hearer at once in the time in which it happened:—this the poets especially can do with great ease," &c. Again (p. 138), "Even with the usual present time, the imperfect is always used to express this idea, and not the perfect, as, דִּבְרָה, dicitur, dicunt: . . . but quite as often for the past, the idea of which arises from the connexion of the sentence only;" . . . also permitted for the future in the past, as, יִבְרָךְ, should have reigned, 2 Kings iii. 27. . . . "The future may be prominent . . . as something intended . . . to be put in execution from the point of view of the speaker" . . .

* Gesenius, too, appears to have got thus far, Conant's Translation, London, 1840, p. 113.

prevail,—to some extent,—in perhaps all Languages, and certainly in the Arabic. It furnishes us with a key, moreover, to the expedient had recourse to by the Hebrews,—as well as by the Arabs even now,—by which every variety of Tense, necessary to the purposes of Language, could be formed: and all without calling in anything like a Conversive Vaw, or dealing out,—as it was the case with Buxtorf and his followers,—the never-ending doctrine, entitled, “Enallage Temporum.” (See Gram., Lecture XVII.)

The next thing to be done, and to which my attention was turned, was, to ascertain the use and powers of Apocope, and the terminations said to be Paragogic and Epenthetic, as found as, וָיָא, shall I go? &c. . . . in narration “of the past” (i. e. حكاية of my Gram., p. 339 note, et seq.) Again in p. 166 seq., where Mr. Ewald discusses the subject of the “Vaw consequitivum”—Conversivum of others,—the same doctrine is fully propounded: e. g., “On the one hand, the imagination sets out from what is distant and past, descends into the present, &c.; on the other, it sets out from what is near . . . mounts up into the distant reality, and calmly anticipates their consequences as sure and certain.” Excluding, therefore, Mr. Ewald’s doctrine respecting finished, and unfinished,—which is perfectly groundless,—all the rest is neither more nor less than what had been detailed in my Grammar (Art. 231. 9—14, seq.), and there shown to be the doctrine of the Grammarians of Arabia!

How far Mr. Ewald may have availed himself of these resources it is not, perhaps, for me to say. I cannot help thinking, however, that if he has not actually availed himself of my discoveries, he certainly has succeeded in a marvellous degree in arriving at precisely the results that I had, and of which not a trace is to be found in his Grammar of 1827. In the preface to his “Hebr. Gramm. in vollständiger Kürze neu bearbeitet,” published in 1828 (just one year after the appearance of mine), he says (Nicholson’s Translation, pp. xi.—xiii.), “I have always investigated it (i. e. the Hebrew Language) by means of itself, without knowing the opinions of former Grammarians: . . . it was necessarily indifferent to me, as to the results of my investigations, whether any fact had been observed before or not.” I can hardly suppose Mr. Ewald not to have known in 1828, what my Grammar had put forth for the first time in 1827: nor can I bring myself to believe, that it was a matter indifferent to him, as to the results of his investigation in this respect. The probability appears to me to make for the contrary conclusion in each case. At any rate, I cannot but rejoice in finding authority so respectable for my doctrine of the Hebrew Tenses, as that of Mr. Ewald.

affecting the verbs, and particularly, their Present Tenses. Some light on this subject had been discovered by Dr. Gesenius. Much, however, still remained to be done; which, by the help of the Arabian Grammarians, I trust I have been fortunate enough to have effected. By this it will now be seen,—which could not by the influence of the Accents,—how the leading, and consequent, parts of hypothetical and other similar constructions are tied, as it were, and bound together: and thence, why these apocopated, paragogic, and epenthetic forms, have in innumerable instances been adopted: cases, which up to this time could not be accounted for. By the former expedient we perceive, how every possible variety of Tense was obtained in the Hebrew: by this latter, how Subjunctive, Conditional, and Optative, constructions and expressions were:—the want of which, ignorance had charged upon this Language as a grievous defect! This insight into the principles which regulate the use of the Tenses, and, in some degree, of the modes of the Verbs, has likewise this further advantage, that it enables us to see the exact position in which the Sacred Writers placed themselves, when committing to writing any given portion of Holy Writ; and, consequently, it affords means of ascertaining their intentions, not otherwise available.

In detailing the various forms of the nouns, I have endeavoured to trace them from the simplest, to the most largely augmented forms; and to account for their shades of meaning, as couched under these forms, in the most easy and natural way I could: calling in, at the same time, such assistance from the Sister dialects, as appeared useful to the Student, and referring to such other Treatises on this subject as appeared most worthy of notice; particularly the Onomastica of Simonis and Hiller.

Having so far laid down, and accounted for, the forms and peculiarities of force exhibited in the nouns; I deemed it the most natural way of proceeding, to consider these as the ground-forms assumed in the various inflexions of the Verbs. Verbs, in the state of conjugation, are certainly compound terms, involving the Syntax of the Language to some extent. They cannot, therefore, be fairly considered as containing, in their own right, any claim to originality, as it respects the derivation of this Language. I have, therefore, considered them as compound forms; and these I have endeavoured to deduce from the Nouns by the process either of reduplication, or addition, as found to prevail in the nouns of Language generally. By these means, I think, I have ascertained the precise force of what are termed the Passive conjugations; which I have endeavoured to establish by an appeal to Oriental usage, and the nature of the Context. (See Gram. Artt. 157.—12. 13. seq.; Ib. 18. 19. seq.) In considering the Forms, too, I cannot help believing, I arrived at a most important result,—grounded on the usage of the Arabians,—by which the true force of such passages as, “God hardened the heart, made it fat, closed the eyes, ears, &c.,” has been ascertained. (Gram., Artt. 154. 7—9; 157. 2—7.)

In laying down the Syntax generally, I have endeavoured to ascertain what the nature of each particular case demanded, as in the construction of Propositions; the requirement of words, as depending on one another, whether under the names of Nouns, Verbs, or Particles: and then to confirm the rules so given by citations from the Native Grammarians of Arabia: endeavouring, in this way, to propose Oriental usage alone for the adoption of the Student, and showing how this comported with the nature of each individual case. Such a method of investigation, I have thought, could not but be both safe and interesting. But the greatest advantage held out is this: To accustom the mind of the Learner to inquiry, in the very first stages of his progress in this important line of Literature; and thence to remove, as far as possible, from authority often merely conjectural and false, the first principles of interpretation applied to the Sacred Text of the Old Testament, and to place these on the only foundation that can safely be relied on, viz., that of the nature of things, considered in conjunction with real Oriental usage.

To the Syntax is attached a Lecture on the Rabbinical use of the Accents.* This was thought necessary, not so much to give

* Mr. Ewald, too, has to his Grammar, translated by Mr. Nicholson, added a similar, but still shorter, view of their use. And, in this case, I think, he has also been indebted to me.

currency or support to the authority of those marks, as to enable the Student to see their force and bearing. The rules given on this subject by Buxtorf and his followers were, it must be confessed, very defective, leaving the Learner,—very much as they found him,—with every thing to learn, and nothing on which he could pronounce with certainty. Still, it must be confessed this question involves much that is far from obvious and certain; and this, I think, no length of Treatise, or time consumed in its investigation, will remove. Such as it is, however, the Student ought to be acquainted, to some extent with its laws: and this is all that I have intended to supply him with.

The additions made to this Edition of the Grammar are considerable and extend to several pages. The use of the single Epenthetic γ , is given here for the first time (Art. 235. 3.).

I may now offer a few words of advice on the use of this Grammar. In the first place then, as the whole is made matter of analytical investigation, nothing need be committed to memory at all. To engage the mind, for some time, so as to familiarize it with each particular, will, if I mistake not, tend more effectually to fix the whole in the memory, than any method of learning by rote ever can: not to insist on the very irksome process thus to be avoided, and on the advantage of thus exercising the judgment in philological inquiry.

In studying the Letters of the Alphabet with the vowels and accents, the most effectual method will be, to write them over again and again, until the eye is familiar with them. And, in doing this, it would be well, not only to form a syllabarium, as recommended in Art. 31, or to transcribe large portions from the Hebrew Bible, as in Art. 70; but to proceed to write out the forms of the nouns (Art. 148. seq.), turning back to the places referred to, on every occasion: and thus mixing up the theory with the practice, until the Learner sees, to some extent, the nature and character of these, as found in their simple and augmented forms; in the singular, dual, and plural numbers; and as augmented either by the Paragogic Letters, or the affixed pronouns. And, in doing this, the text printed in a smaller letter in this work, may in the first instance be passed over.

The Learner may, in the next place, pass on to the Verbs,

(Art. 182. seq.) which, according to my views, are nothing more than nouns of one form or other compounded with fragments of the personal pronouns, so prefixed or postfixed as to form their conjugations, and to give at once both the forms and significations found to prevail in them. When he has familiarized his mind in some degree with these, and acquainted himself with the causes of their several inflections, defects, &c., so as to be able to trace them in the general Paradigm (Art. 211.),—which cannot fail to fix the whole effectually in his memory;—he would do well to acquaint himself with the particles, Art. 171. seq., up to Art. 181. And, if he copied these out once or twice, reading the text at the same time, as to their theory; my opinion is, that he would never regret the trouble so taken. In doing this he should, as before, turn back to the laws on which the defects they exhibit are founded; which will at once so interest him, and give him such an insight into the nature of this Language, as no other method can, and such, I think, as he never can forget. The numerals (Art. 181. seq.), and Proper names (Art. 170. seq.), need not detain him long. It will be enough now to read over the Syntax carefully, and to make such notes on the rules, examples, &c., as he may deem necessary. This he should do, in order to familiarize his mind with this part of the Grammar, and to enable him to turn again to it, as occasion may require. And here, as before, let him not be tempted to imagine that he will in a few months, a year, or so, become an adept in this species of Literature. If indeed all he aims at is, merely to be able to make out a Chapter or a Psalm, with the aid of the Dictionary and a Translation,—an undertaking, as far I can see, of no use or value whatsoever,—then he may give himself as little trouble as he pleases in studying the elements of this language. But if he wish to ascertain for himself, what the real drift and scope of the declarations of the Sacred Writers of the Old Testament is, then he will find that a thorough knowledge of the elements is almost every thing: and, that it has been from a want of this that Commentators, Preachers, and others, have so frequently and so fatally erred; and, generally speaking, that at this day, the Scriptures of the Old Testament are so little understood.

The best thing now to do,—in order to save time,—would be to get a copy of Mr. Ollivant's "Analysis of the History of Joseph,"* and carefully to read over that portion of the Book of Genesis, referring constantly to the Grammar as there directed. When this is done, the "Clavis Pentateuchi of Robertson" † had better be obtained, and the whole Pentateuch be read over carefully with its assistance. With this, as with the "History of Joseph," the Dictionary may be had recourse to, as may the Hebrew Concordances, both of the words generally, and of the Particles. ‡ The ancient and modern versions may also be consulted. The Arabic, Syriac, and Ethiopic, words and usages corresponding to those of the Hebrew, carefully considered. And thus gradually the range of study enlarged,—or to use the terms of the Prophet,—the cords (of the Learner) be lengthened, and his stakes strengthened.

In the higher style, as exhibited in the Psalms, Job, the Prophets, &c., the "Lyra Prophetica of Bythner" § may be used: the "Scholia" of the younger Rosenmüller: the "Synopsis" of Poole, or the "Critici Sacri," and such other Works as the Student will find pointed out in these. The Translation and Notes on the Book of Job, as published by myself, will perhaps be found of some service, as will my Sermons and Dissertations on the Rationalism of Germany, and on the Interpretation of Prophecy generally.

On the exegetical interpretation of the Old Testament, let it never be forgotten, the New Testament is the first, the authoritative, and the best, guide. Next to this, the parallel passages in both Testaments should be classed. And, I will venture to affirm, that where this is carefully and honestly done, more real scriptural knowledge will be acquired in one year, than usually is in the whole space of time allotted to the existence of man.

The Edition of the Hebrew Bible, from which the citations have here been made, is that of 1836, printed at the expense of Mr. Duncan, and which the Student will find both cheap and correct.

LECTURES

ON THE

HEBREW LANGUAGE.

LECTURE I.

ON THE ORTHOGRAPHY, SYLLABICATION, &C., OF THE HEBREW LANGUAGE.

1. AS it is proposed to offer, in the present course of Lectures, a comprehensive and practical view of the structure of the Hebrew Language, all discussions relating to General Grammar, Philology, and Antiquities, will be avoided as much as possible; referring as we proceed to Authors who have treated on these subjects. It will also be taken for granted, that the Student is acquainted with grammar as generally taught; and, that he is penman sufficiently good to write down such forms of letters, &c., as shall be laid before him.

2. But, although it is desirable that the Learner should know something of the principles of Grammar as generally taught; yet, he must not hence be tempted to infer, that a system almost entirely at variance with that to which he has been accustomed is unphilosophical or wrong; or, because he cannot at first sight comprehend all its bearings, that it is therefore uncouth, embarrassed, or ambiguous. For it may be true, that the Language of the Patriarchs and Prophets is as consistent in its structure, as the subjects on which it treats are interesting and momentous ; and, that it is as explicit and regular as other languages, which have been cultivated with much greater ardour, while they had infinitely less to offer in return. He must, therefore, allow the Language on which we are now entering, to stand or fall on its own merits ; and, our delineation of it to be judged by the rules of criticism peculiar to itself. We mention this in the outset,—not to depreciate the labours of others who may have taken a different view of this subject,—but to warn the Student, that the idioms of the Hebrew and other Dialects connected with it, are neither to be judged of, nor explained, by those of European languages ; and hence to caution him against that trouble and confusion, into which some have had the misfortune to fall.

On the Alphabet.

3. The system of Orthography found in our Hebrew Bibles, and that which has ever been taught with the greatest success,* presents a succession of consonants, written in a direction proceeding from the right hand of the page towards the left. Two or more of these are found in every word ; while the words themselves are separated from each other by a moderate space. To this system of consonants another is added, consisting of vowels ; and these are placed above, in the middle, or below, the line of consonants, as their several natures may require. To this, again, is superadded another, consisting of Accents, which are also placed either above, in the middle, or below, the consonants, in the same line or rank with the vowels. Before the student can possibly read the Hebrew text, therefore, he must be made familiar with these several parts of Hebrew orthography.

4. We shall proceed, in the first place, to delineate and explain the characters of the consonants ; the number, forms, names, powers, and numerical values, of which are as follows.

* We say, the greatest success ; for, after all that has been said by the advocates for the unpunctuated system, it will be extremely difficult to point out one writer of that school, who has in any degree advanced Hebrew learning.

Number and Order.	FORMS.			NAMES.	POWERS.	Numerical Values.
	Biblical.	Samari- tan.	Rabbinical.

14	נ, and as a final letter	Ⲙ	נ, and as a final ן	נון Nun.	N, as in no, &c.	L.
15	ס	Ⲛ	ס	סמך Sámech.	S, as in Sir ; never as S in those.	LX.
16	ע	Ⲝ	ע	עין Áyin.	The true sound of this letter being unknown, it is usually passed over in silence, as H in humble : we shall designate it thus, H.	LXX.
17	פ or פּ, and as a final letter	Ⲟ	פ, and as a final ף	פה Pé.	PH, when without the point, as in Philip ; P, when pointed, as in pint.	LXXX.
18	צ, and as a final letter	Ⲡ	צ, and as a final ץ	צדי Tsádé.	TS, as in mats, &c.	XC.

21	ש } שׁ }	Ⲥ	ש } שׁ }	שין Shín. Sín.	SH, as in shine. S, as in son , never as S in those.	CCC.
22	ת or תּ	Ⲧ	ת	תּו Tav, or Tav.	TH or T respectively, as in thin or tin.	CCCC.

In these and all future examples, where the Roman vowels will be put to represent the Hebrew ones, á or ā, will have the sound of the Italian a, or a in far; and a, as a in man; é, or ē, as a in wane or ai in rain; e, the same sound shortened: í, or ī, as ee in seen; i, as i in in: ó, or ō, as o in rose; o, the same sound shortened: ú, or ū, as oo in boot; u, as oo in good. The first marked vowel in each case will represent the accented, or emphatical, syllable, e.g. á in fáther, &c.; the second with (-) as ā, ē, &c. will shew that,—as such vowel generally terminates a syllable,—it will be pronounced openly, but not with an accent.

5. The Samaritan and Rabbinical forms of the Hebrew character have been given for the following reasons:—

1. The Samaritan Pentateuch being nothing more than a different edition of that in use among the Jews, the Student will want no other help for reading it, than the forms of the Samaritan character: and,

2. As the Rabbinical commentaries are composed, for the most part, in Biblical Hebrew, he will stand in need of little more than a copy of their alphabet to enable him to read them.*

6. The number and order of the consonants, as given in the table, are so found in the text of the Hebrew Bible. The following are the passages:—Psalms xxxiv. cxix. cxlv.; Proverbs xxxi., from verse 10 to the end; Lamentations i. ii. iii. iv. In Psalm xxxiv. however, the verse beginning with \aleph Vav has either been lost, or both \aleph He and \aleph Vav are found in the 6th verse; and, in the cxlvth, that which should commence with \beth is also wanting. In the ii. iii. and ivth chapters of the Lamentations, \aleph Ayin and \beth Pé are found transposed, which may perhaps be attributed to the copyists.

* Should he wish to make a considerable progress in Rabbinical learning, he will find some of the best books pointed out in Sect. xi. of my Sylloge Librorum Orientalium. Cantab. 1821.

7. As to the forms of the consonants, it is not improbable they were originally hieroglyphical :* but, whether the Hebrew or Samaritan form is the most ancient, a difference of opinion seems to have prevailed as early as the times of Jerome ; and which, as Schultens has justly remarked, has been contested in some instances with an acrimony, which neither the nature of the case, nor the love of truth, could justify : † some maintaining that the Samaritan was the primitive form, and that Ezra adopted the other on the return from Babylon ; others, that the Biblical character, as we now have it, is the same with that in which Moses composed his Autograph. ‡ For my own part I am inclined to believe, with some others, that which of the characters soever we take, as exhibiting the most ancient form, the other is no greater a variation from it, than may be traced in our own black letter as derived from the Roman ; and, by no means so great as that discernible between our hand-writing and the printed letter, from which it has been formed.

8. The letters תרסלהא, when occurring at the end of a line, are sometimes lengthened out thus, תרסלהא, in order to fill up the space.

On the Powers of the Consonants.

9. א Álef, as already remarked, has the power of an unspirated H : that is, it is used for the purpose of enouncing the vowel following it, without any audible aspiration, but with a sound slightly guttural. It appears probable, also, that this was its power in ancient times ; not only, because the same letter has to this day the same power in the Syriac, Arabic, and Ethiopic,—which are nothing more than dialects of the Hebrew,—but because we find it occasionally put for ה Hé, or א Áyin, in the Hebrew Bible itself; and, in the cognate dialects, the Syriac and Chaldee, for י Yód.* Among the Greeks and Latins it was expressed by one or other of the vowels unaspirated, and mostly by Alpha or A.† In writing Hebrew words in Roman letters, we shall form the syllable, in which this letter is found, by representing that vowel only which accompanies it.

10. ב Béth is found either with, or without, a point inscribed, as בּ or ב. In the first case it is pronounced as our B; in the second, as V; and hence, it is sometimes represented by ו Vaw, as בּוּ, occasionally written וּו. In the cognate dialects, it is often changed for פ Pé, or מ Mém; being a letter of the same organ with them. But of this more will be said hereafter.

11. ג Gímél is also written with, or without, the point; thus גּ, or ג. In the first case, all are agreed that it should be pronounced like G in the words gird, give. How it should be pronounced in the second, grammarians are not agreed. Some think it should take the sound of G in ginger; others, that it should be pronounced as G, in the German Gemacht, &c. The usual practice, however, is, to sound it like G in gird, in every case.‡

12. ד Dáleth is also found both with, and without, this point, as ד, and ד. In the first case, it is pronounced like D in dare, do, &c. In the second, some give it the sound of TH in thine, this; others neglect this distinction, and pronounce it like D in every case. It is probable, that it was originally pronounced with the tip of the tongue placed against the roots of the foreteeth, just as its corresponding letter is still pronounced by the Orientals; which will give it rather a softer sound than that of our D. It is also probable that it had two sounds, as it is the case now with the Arabic, where we have د Dál and ذ Dhál; the former pronounced like D dental, the latter like th in thine. Hence we may account for דבר Dāvár meaning a word, and דבר Déver, a pestilence: the root of the former being ذבר Dhábara, scripsit librum, &c., the other דבר Dábara, ulceratum fuit, &c. We also have דבר Dhábr, signifying Scriptura, and דאבר Dhábir, bene discens, et edoctus, sapientiam; of similar import with דבר Dāvár, a word, relation, &c.; and from the second, דבר Dábr, mors, of similar signification with דבר Déver, pestis, &c. This method of viewing the powers of several other letters of the Alphabet, will often explain the apparently conflicting significations, sometimes found to prevail in the same Hebrew root; of which the modern Lexicographers have very properly availed themselves.*

13. It will be unnecessary to offer any additional remarks on the following letters till we come to כ Khéth; and, on this it is only necessary to say, that like ד Dáleth, it probably had two sounds originally, the one more, the other less, aspirated, as noticed in the Dictionaries.

14. ט Téth should be pronounced with the tip of the tongue against the roof of the mouth, just as our own T is, and hence it may be termed cerebral.

15. י Yód is equivalent to our Y, as stated in the table. The Italians and Germans represent this letter by J, which they pronounce like our Y: and, as the first Hebrew Grammars studied in this country, were imported from the Continent, we adopted the word Jehovah, Jehu, &c. which they very properly pronounced Yehovah, Yehu, &c. When occurring at the beginning of a word with the vowel i, it loses its power as a consonant, and takes the sound of the vowel only, as Is-ra-el, not Yis-ra-el. This is also found to take place in the Arabic, as Iktob, not Yektob, for ^كيكتب. See De Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. p. 4, note. i. edit.

16. The sound of כ, without a point, probably partook of the sound of both K, and כ Khéth; which will account for its being represented by the Greek χ, and κ. With the point (כּ) it is universally sounded like our C in carry, as already stated.

17. ש Sámek, and שׁ Sín, have, for many centuries, been pronounced alike, i. e. like S in sin; and, although many Hebrew words are now found written with either promiscuously, it is doubtful whether this is not owing to the copyists; possibly it might be a mere variety of the pronunciation of שׁ Shin, which may have been peculiar to this form (שׁ), even in ancient times. See Judg. xii. 6.

18. א Áyin probably had, like א Dáleth and א Khéth, two sounds originally; one approaching to that of g mixed with h or r, another to that of א Álef; just as it is the case with the Arabs, who have both ع Ghain, and ع Ain. The examples to be found in the modern Lexicons under this letter, as well as the various orthography of proper names found in the Septuagint, may be considered as sufficient proof of this position.* At present, this letter is usually passed over, like the Álef, in silence. The sound of ng in king, given to it generally by the Jews, may probably have prevailed in ancient times. I have observed that the Arabs of Barbary give a nasal sound to their Ain, ξ , and that the Archbishop of Jerusalem, who was some time ago in this country, pronounced the Syriac \s in this way; although the Maronites inform us, that it should be pronounced with a sort of compression of the throat.† We shall designate it in the Roman characters by an H , with a point under it.

19. The sound of ρ Kóph is more guttural than that of \s Cáph, being made by a sudden compression of the throat: it may be compared to the noise made by water when discharging itself from a bottle; it is, perhaps, analogous with the Roman Q. The explanations given in the table will be sufficient for the remaining letters.

20. We now come to the numerical values of the letters. We have given in the Table (Art. 4.) the letters corresponding to the units, tens, and hundreds, up to 400. The remaining hundreds up to one thousand, are thus expressed: the I , final Cáph, is put for 500; L , final Mém, for 600; N , final Nún, for 700; P , final Pé, 800; and Q , final Tsāde, 900. These usages are Rabbinical; numerals in the sacred text being always written at length. One thousand is mostly expressed by the word אלף Élef, a thousand; two thousand by אלפיים Alpáyim; any number of thousands by using the word אלף élef, thousand, or אלפים Álāfím, thousands, with the proper numeral prefixed, as the rules of Syntax may require. Sometimes, as in the notes of the Masora, ק stands for one thousand; but on this subject the Hebrew tables of abbreviations should be consulted.‡

21. The numbers, from ten to twenty, are made by adding such unit to the numeral for ten, as will make the number required. Thus יא will represent eleven, יב twelve, and so on. The number 15, however, is made by טו, i. e. 9 + 6, not יה, i. e. 10 + 5, because יה is one of the names of God. In like manner, 21 will be כא, 22 כב, 32 לב, 42 מב, and so on. On this principle, the number given at the end of Genesis, for the verses found in that book is, א"דל"ג = 1534.

22. Whether this method of expressing numbers formerly prevailed in the Hebrew manuscripts, has been a subject of some dispute, and one which it is now impossible to determine. That the numbers have been expressed in words written at length for some centuries, there seems to be no doubt, but whether this was the case in very ancient times or not, it is difficult to say.*

23. As certain Hebrew letters are occasionally changed for one another, both in primitive words and in the process of derivation, and, as this change mostly takes place in letters of the same organ; † the following classification of them, according to the different organs of speech, has usually been given:—

- 1 Gutturals, א Álef, ה Hé, ח Khéth, ע Áyin.
- 2 Palatals, ג Gimél, י Yód, כ Cáph, ק Kóph.
- 3 Linguals, ד Dáleth, ט Téth, ת Taw.
- 4 Sibilants, ז Záyin, ס Sámek, צ Tsāde, ש Shín, ש Shín.
- 5 Labials, ב Béth, ו Vaw, מ Mém פ Pé.

24. The letters ל, מ, נ, ר, are termed liquids. ‡

25. Four of the letters of the Alphabet occasionally lose their powers as consonants, and are then said to be quiescent or silent. These letters are, א Álef, ה Hé, ו Vaw, and י Yód, which form a sort of memoria technica in the word אֶהְוִי Ēhēvî. Those letters too which occasionally have a point inscribed, have, for the same reason, been formed into the technical term בְּגַדְכֶפֶת Bēgad-kēpháth. The final letters, which are sometimes lengthened, are exhibited in the words אֹהֶל תָּמָר Óhel Tāmár, Tamar's tent: and the finals, which vary in form, as mentioned in the table, are comprehended in the words כַּמְנַפֵּץ Cammēnappéts, Like a disperser.

26. The letters have been further divided into two classes; one containing those which are occasionally servile; that is, are employed in the process of grammatical accident and derivation; the other, those only which are never so employed; the first have been termed servile, the second radical, letters. The servile letters are, however, occasionally radical, though the radical ones are never servile.

27. The servile letters are all comprehended in the following memoria technica, viz. מֹשֶׁה אֵיתָן וְכָלֵב, Mōshé Ēthán Vēcālév, i. e. Moses, Ethan, and Caleb. The remaining letters are termed radical.*

28. The best method the learner can adopt for making himself acquainted with the letters is, to write them over carefully and frequently, till he is quite familiar with all their forms. In doing this, he should strongly mark the difference between those letters which are in some respects similar, such as בְּ Béth, and כֹּף Cáph, גִּמֵּל Gímél, and נוּן Nún, and so on; in order to avoid the confusion which beginners often experience, and to make that pleasant which is to many extremely irksome. If he use a pen, the point should be cut a little oblique, in order to make the horizontal strokes strong and regular; the others, which should be perpendicular, should be made fine and equal. An Oriental reed, however, makes by far the best pen for writing these letters, which should be cut nearly like a pen, with a slit, and the point oblique, as already mentioned.*

* In almost all the printed copies of the Hebrew Bible, we find some of the letters occasionally larger, or smaller, than others: others inverted, or suspended a little above the general line of printing; in one instance, we have a final letter in the middle of a word; in others, a medial letter is used as a final: out of all which the Jews, and indeed some Christian writers, have endeavoured to elicit certain mysteries. But as they are most likely all owing to some accident in the transcription of the MSS., we may be excused in dismissing them without further notice.

On the Vowels.

29. It has already been remarked, (Art. 3.) that the Hebrew vowels present a system of marks or characters arranged sometimes above, at others in the middle, and at others beneath, the consonants: we now proceed to delineate and explain this.

† In these cases, the consonant ך is considered merely as the fulcrum of the accompanying vowels, and in all it is often omitted, the point then resting on the side of the preceding or following consonant. In such cases analogy must determine, whether it stand for a perfect or imperfect vowel. This method of treating the vowels, the Student will find of great importance, when he comes to consider the etymology of this language.

30. It will be seen, from the Exemplifications, which of the vowels-marks are placed above, which in the middle, and which below, the line. From the note appended to the table of consonants (Art. 4.), will also be seen what sounds are given to the Roman vowels, as here made to represent the powers of the Hebrew ones; and, consequently, what powers the Hebrew vowels have.

31. The learner cannot now do better than make out a syllabarium for himself, extending throughout the whole of the alphabet, in the manner of the Exemplifications just given; bearing in mind, that whenever either of the letters contained in the memoria technica, בגדכפת Bĕgadkĕpháth, begins a syllable, the point should be inscribed. The exceptions will be given hereafter. He should also bear in mind, that the consonant must always precede the vowel, as marked in the table: a few exceptions to this rule will be noticed hereafter.*

* The real object of these marks is to show the absence of a vowel: the sound of ě in these examples is, therefore, remarkably short, better expressed by our brî, grî, drî, &c., without a vowel. So in the substitutes, which usually accompany the guttural letters. The final vowel ׀, &c. has been added, in order to facilitate this rapidity of utterance in bĕrî, gĕrî,—bĕhĕ, bĕhĕ, &c., all making one syllable, and no more.

32. By perfect vowels, as given in the first class, is meant, vowels which, being preceded by a consonant, will constitute a complete syllable in Hebrew orthography, as בָּ bā, where both the consonant and vowel are fully and properly enounced, and the syllable is complete. The same is the case, when either of the letters contained in the memoria technica, וְיִהְיֶה Ēhēvī, which occasionally lose their powers as consonants (Art. 25.), follows its homogeneous vowel, (of which more hereafter,) as, וְיִהְיֶה bā.

33. By imperfect vowels is meant, those vowels which are not generally found to constitute syllables without either the addition of another consonant, or of an accent. Such syllable, therefore, must either be like בַּד bad, or בָּ bā, i. e. be ended by a consonant, or by an accent. When, however, a consonant is found to follow a perfect vowel with an accent, as in בַּדָּ, &c.,—which can happen in the end of a word only,—this vowel may also be considered as an imperfect one: i. e. generally, an imperfect vowel, accompanied by an accent, will have the power of a perfect one; and, vice versá, a perfect vowel so accompanied will have that of an imperfect one. Hence it will follow, generally, that no syllable, excepting the last of any word, can have more than one quiescent letter after a vowel; as in קוּם, קָמַתְּ. Such forms as הוֹנֶה, הוֹנֶה, are anomalous, and occur but rarely.

* The usual classification of these vowels has been, 1. Long vowels, 2. Short vowels, and 3. Vowels still shorter than the preceding. We have adopted a different one, for the following reason. These distinctions cease to exist when the vowels are combined with the consonants; for then, the second class of vowels becomes long, either by position, that is, when a consonant follows, or, by being accompanied by an accent. Both these classes of vowels are, therefore, long when reduced to practice; and it is useless to speak of them here in any other point of view.

It can never be necessary to trouble the learner with the five different lengths of time ascribed to these vowels by Albert Schultens and Schræder; although the latter has declared, that it is a law amplissimum usum habens, because it is not easy to discover in what this use consists. In the case of בַּדָּ, and the like (Art. 33.), greater time seems to be afforded for enouncing the last, and accentuated syllable of a word.

34. The last class of signs has been designated "Sheva and its Substitutes;" these Substitutes supplying the place of Sheva, under certain circumstances, as we shall see hereafter.

On the Combination of the Vowels with the Consonants.

35. Considering, then, all the letters of the alphabet as consonants, no difficulty can arise from their combination with the vowels, when the consonant precedes, as is the case in our first exemplifications (Art. 29.); but, when a consonant also follows, some difficulties may arise, which we now proceed to consider.

36. The first difficulty that will present itself to a learner will be, in the concurrence of any of the letters אהוּי Ēhēví, with certain vowels preceding.

37. It has been remarked (Art. 25.), that each of these letters will occasionally lose its power as a consonant, i. e. become silent in the preceding vowel. We now say, this happens only when it is preceded by a vowel which is, or may become, homogeneous with it in sound. In this sense, א may become quiescent after any vowel, as may also ה: ו will be quiescent after Khólém or Shūrék, only: and, י after Khírík, Tséré, Ségól, and occasionally after Kāméts; as אָ בָּ bā, בָּהּ bē, בּוֹ bō, בִּי bī, עָלַיָּךְ hālékā, עָלַיָּ hāláu. The reason of this seems to be, that,—as these consonants (אהוּי) are made up of sounds nearly allied to those of the vowels respectively,—when the vowel happens to precede, both will coalesce, and consequently the power of such consonant will be merged in that of the vowel. When any one of these letters has no vowel, it will necessarily be silent, as in כֶּתֵב Khét, הֵבִיא Hēví; where the כ is in each case silent, and said to be otiose. Whenever any such letter, however, has a vowel following it, that letter will not be quiescent or otiose, although a homogeneous vowel should precede it; as יְהוֹ-וָא Yěhō-vá.

38. A vowel, however, may precede which is not homogeneous with such consonant; which will happen only in the cases of ו and י; and then a diphthongal sound will be formed, as ai, in אֲדֹנָי Ādōnái or Ādōnáy; oi, in גֹּי Goi or Goy; ui, in גַּלְיָא Gā-lúí or Gālúy. Other diphthongs may be formed; but more do not occur in the Hebrew.

39. There are, moreover, a few instances in which two such letters will be found following a vowel which is homogeneous with neither of them, as אֵלַי, and the like; in which, according to analogy, י should form the diphthong ai or ay, and the last letter ו be considered either as a consonant, or as combining with the foregoing in a kind of triphthong, as Ē-laiw, or Ē-laiu, Hā-laiw, or Hā-laiu, but, generally, the י is, in these cases, made quiescent,* and the following ו read as the consonant v, or w; as Ē-lav, or Ē-law, and so on. Indeed, in the case of the diphthong, it is of little consequence whether we consider the concluding letter as a

* It seems to be a general rule, that when a final (:) Sheva, either expressed or understood, comes under י or ו, the diphthongal sound takes place: in other cases these consonants become quiescent, as in אֵלַי or אֵלָי; where it would be contrary to usage to supply a Sheva (:) under the ו, as אֵלַי and אֵלָי.

vowel or a consonant, i. e. whether we sound ױ as i, or y, ױ as w, or v.

On SHEVA and its SUBSTITUTES.

40. Shěvá (ױ) has two situations, one at the beginning of a syllable, the other at its ending. At the beginning of a syllable, (when it is said to be initial,) it is, from the necessity of the case, pronounced like a very short e, as mentioned in the Table (Art. 29.). The only question which can arise here will be, How is it always to be known when this mark begins, or concludes, a syllable? The answer is: Whenever it is found at the beginning of a word, it must necessarily be considered as commencing the syllable; and, consequently, must be pronounced as a short vowel, otherwise the consonant under which it is placed cannot be uttered at all: as in the word בְּבִית Běvá-ith. The same is the case, whenever it follows a perfect vowel unaccompanied by a tone-accent; because, as that vowel must conclude the preceding syllable (Art. 32.), the consonant under which this mark is found, must necessarily commence the next. In this case, therefore, as before, it must be enounced as a very short vowel, as in the word קָטְלוּ Kā-telú; where it is also initial, because it commences the syllable.

41. When, however, Shěvá (ױ) commenced a word, by analogy, (and was therefore audible,) but has, by accident, been preceded by some particle with an imperfect vowel, it will then become final; e. g. גְּבוּל Gěvúl, a boundary; prefixing לְ (for לֵ ,) we shall have לְגְבוּל Lig-vúl, not Ligě-vúl.*

* In this case, however, some consider it as initial, and read Li-gevúl.

42. In the next place, whenever the mark (:) Shěvá follows an imperfect vowel having no tone-accent either expressed or implied, the consonant under which it is found must be taken as the last of the syllable (Art. 33.). In this case, therefore, Shěvá (:) will have no sound, and may be said to be final or quiescent: e. g. קַמְתֵּם Kam-tém, not Kamě-tém.

43. To these rules, however, there are two exceptions of very extensive application; and these arise from the introduction of an accent. For, as it has already been remarked (Art. 33.), the operation of a tone-accent will generally give to a perfect vowel the character of an imperfect one, and vice versâ. In these cases, therefore, Shěvá (:) may be final after a perfect vowel, and initial after an imperfect one; e. g. of the first case, בְּקִרְתָּהּ Bā-khár-tā, 1 Kings iii. 8, תַּגְּלֵנָה Tā-gél-nā, Ps. li. 10; and of the second, וַיְהִי Vā-yěhí, &c. When, however, such accent is purely euphonic, of which more hereafter, this does not necessarily take place; as, מַחְבַּרְתּוֹ Makh-bar-tó, Exod. xxxix. 20, &c.*

44. Shěvá is rarely written at the end of a word. The reason probably is, that, as no vowel usually follows the last letter of Hebrew words, it would be superfluous to express Shěvá, in order to shew this: the mark is consequently omitted. In one case, however, in which the preceding consonant has also a final Shěvá, it seems to have been added to shew, that no vowel has been omitted through negligence; as in the word קָמַתְּ kámt, &c., to distinguish it from קָמַתְּ, &c. It is also found in the letter אֵ, but this may be considered as a part of the letter.

* The instances occurring of this kind are numerous: as הַיְתָה Hā-yěthá, Gen. i. 2; ib. ver. 7, הָרָאִהָ Hā-rā-kiáh; תְּרָאָה Thē-rā-é, ib., ver. 9. So also תִּדְשֵׁל Tud-shé, ver. 11. In which cases, the euphonic accent interferes not with the syllabication. So likewise in many others, wherein the accent marks the tone-syllable, and in which there is no euphonic one; as Gen. i. 2, וְהָיָה Vó-hū, וְשֵׁקֶל Khó-shek, ib. ver. 3, וַיִּזְמַר Vai-yó-mer, &c. The word וְהָיָה Thó-hū, ib. ver. 2, seems to present two accentuations, viz. one with the emphasis on the penultima, the other on the ultima.

45. A part of one of the substitutes of Shěvá is occasionally found under the last letter of a word; but this happens, only when such letter is one of the gutturals, א, ע; or ה, with Mappík. The reason of this substitution seems to be, that, as these letters will not admit of the rapidity of utterance which the other consonants will, this vowel, or substitute, is added for the purpose of affording due time for their enunciation; but here the (·) is dropped, as before, and the mark (-) only remains. This mark, termed Furtive Páthakh, is, however, not to be pronounced after, but before, the letter under which it is placed, as מָשִׁיחַ Mā-shíakh, not Mā-shí-akhá, Messiah, or Anointed. The same is the case, when such guttural letter is followed by any other consonant having a point, or Dāgēsh, within it, accompanied also by Shěvá; as, פָּשַׁחַתְּ Pā-sháāht, חִגְגַּחְתְּ Hig-gáāht; not Pā-sháhāt, &c.

46. Those marks, which have been termed “the Substitutes of Shěvá,” supply, as it has already been intimated, the place of an initial Shěvá, with one or other of the guttural letters א, ה, ח, or ע, for the reason just given, with reference to the Furtive Páthakh. In many cases, therefore, in which analogy would require the insertion of an initial Shěvá (·), with one or other of these gutturals, some one of these substitutes will take its place. If, indeed, a vowel immediately precede, the substitute will be that which is homogeneous with it: i. e. if (-) precede, (-·) will be the substitute; if (·), (··); if (·) o, then (··) will be the substitute. When no such vowel precedes, the substitute most congenial with such guttural, or with the analogy of the word, will be preferred. In the first case, ש will mostly take (-), occasionally (⋆); ה (⋆), rarely (-); ח or ע (-), rarely (⋆); (⋆) is seldom used, unless (ר) Khātúph, i. e. o, precedes, or unless it stands in the place of a ה Khólém, which has been rejected by analogy. In these last cases, however, usage alone can be relied on.

On the Points DAGESH and MAPPÍK.

47. Some notice has already been taken of Dāgēsh (Articles 10, 11, 12, 31.); we now have to shew what its offices are. 1st, It will double any letter, which, from its situation, is capable of being doubled; and, 2dly, it will deprive the letters בּגְדָכָפֿתּ of their aspiration. (Artt. 4. 10.) In the first case, whenever any consonant has this point inscribed, and is, at the same time, both preceded and followed by a vowel; or, is preceded by a vowel, and has a Shěvá; such consonant is to be read as two, e. g. לִמֶּד Limméd, or לִמֶּדוּ Limmědú. But, if such consonant is not so preceded, &c., it cannot be doubled; and, in that case, it is found only in the letters בּגְדָכָפֿתּ, inscribed merely for the purpose of taking away their aspiration, as already noticed. Now, this last generally takes place, when such letter commences a syllable, as כָּפֿ Caph, בֵּן Ben, &c.; in some instances when it ends it, as קָמֶת kamt. It must also be remembered, that whenever any one of these letters is in a situation to be doubled, it will be doubled; and that the aspiration will also be taken away by the influence of this point, e. g. כִּפֶּר Kippér, not kiphphér. Dāgēsh is sometimes found in the first letter of a word (not of the class בּגְדָכָפֿתּ), it then takes the terminating vowel from the preceding word, as שְׁמַעְתָּ Hā-lí-tha-shsham.

48. In the first of these cases, this mark has been termed Dāgēsh forte, in the second Dāgēsh lene; terms, it must be confessed, ill chosen to designate the offices just described. I should prefer terming it Dāgēsh only, in every case; its situation being always sufficient to determine its powers, according to our rule.

49. Mappik is a single point (like Dāgēsh) inscribed in the letter ה only, thus ה̣. Its office is to shew, that this letter, when so marked, retains its power as a consonant, and is to be treated as such, both in the pronunciation and etymology. The Jews consider it also as extending to the letter י, as in יהוּדִי Yēhū-dīy-yá; but this is a useless distinction.

On the Mark רָפֵהּ RA-PHE.

50. Formerly when Dāgēsh was not found in any of the בְּנִדְכָּת letters, a mark called רָפֵהּ Rā-phé, was placed above it, in order to shew that the point had not been omitted by mistake. With the ancient Syrians this was nothing more than a point made with red ink. The Hebrews probably wrote it in the same way: but, as this point might be mistaken for the vowel Khōlém, when printed, or, for one of the accents, the form of it was altered for a short line thus (-), which is still found in the Hebrew manuscripts,* though very rarely in the printed books.

51. Other points are found placed over certain words in the Hebrew Bible, the use of which is now unknown. The accounts given of these by the Rabbins may be seen in Buxtorf's Thesaurus Grammaticus, lib. i. cap. v. art. 6, which need not be detailed here.

52. It will be seen by recurring to the table of vowels (Art. 29.), that Khōlém is given with a ם Vaw for its fulcrum, thus ם̣. The Vaw, however, is frequently left out. But, as the letters שׁ Sín and שׂ Shín, are also written with a point on the left or right side, respectively, a question may arise, as to how the Khōlém is to be represented in the case of its following ψ , or preceding ψ . The answer is: Supposing any consonant to follow ψ Sín, and this ψ to have no other vowel-mark, then will its own diacritical point also stand for Khōlém; as ψ Sō-né. In every other case, ψ will be merely the consonant s, as given in the Table (Art. 4.). In the next place, with respect to ψ Shín: Supposing any consonant to precede ψ Shín, having neither vowel-mark nor Shěvá, then will the diacritical point of ψ Shín stand also for Khōlém, thus, ψ Bósh. But, if the preceding letter have a vowel or Shěvá, ψ Shín will be used merely as directed in the table of consonants. This expedient has been resorted to, in order to avoid the inconvenience of marking these points twice over, which must otherwise have taken place.

* And in these it is sometimes put over a letter requiring Dāgēsh forte by analogy, also over ם̣ and ן̣ when quiescent.

53. It will also be seen in the table of the vowels, (Art. 29.) that the letter \imath Yod has been placed above the point (.) then called Khīrīk Gādól, in order to shew that it is a perfect vowel. This \imath Yod, however, is frequently omitted; and, when that is the case, an accent, as it will be seen hereafter, is sometimes added to make this distinction. But, as this accent is also occasionally omitted, analogy will then be the only criterion, by which the distinction can be known.

54. The learner will also perceive, that Kāméts, and Kāméts Khātúph, have the same form, viz. (τ). How then, it may be asked, are they to be distinguished? I answer; Whenever any consonant follows the mark (τ) having also a vowel of its own, it will be seen (Art. 32.), that (τ) must constitute a complete syllable; this vowel must, therefore, be the vowel Kāméts, as in the word τ Rā-phé. For here, as τ begins the following syllable, the τ with (τ) must necessarily constitute the preceding one: (τ) will therefore be the perfect vowel Kāméts. In the next place, (τ) found under any one of the letters וכלב (Art. 27.), at the beginning of a word, may be Kāméts; because, in this case, a contraction may have taken place; as, בַּחֲלִי Bā-khōlí for בְּחֲלִי, the (τ) here being compensative of (-). But, when the letters וכלב are not servile, this rule will not hold good.

55. The following are the exceptions: 1. Should (τ) Khátéph Kāméts follow (τ), or a (τ) which has arisen out of (τ) by the operation of rules hereafter to be given; then will (τ) be Kāméts Khátúph, and must be read as ō, although an accent accompany it; as פֹּחֲלִי Pō-hol-ká, in which case the (τ) Khátúph, being sustained by an accent, becomes equal to the perfect vowel (í). And, 2dly, when any consonant, following (τ), has no vowel, and the syllable is also without an accent; (τ) will then be Kāméts Khátúph; as, חֹמָה Khok-má, רֶנּוּ Ron-nú, יִבְּצֵה Ik-botz, &c.

56. As to the names of the vowels, &c., they are generally Chaldee or Syriac, whence some have argued that their invention is modern.* But, as this will involve questions of no importance to the learner, nothing need be said on the subject here.

57. Whether the pronunciation, here ascribed to the different consonants and vowels, was that in use in ancient times, it is impossible now to say: nor is it of much importance either to the learner or the critic. That the approximation is near, there cannot be much doubt; and, that the system is generally the same, is, perhaps, sufficiently certain. But, as the Jews differ slightly in their pronunciation in different countries, we have here taken that of the Portuguese Jews, as nearly as it could be obtained; which is generally allowed to be the best.

* The heads of the arguments urged on this question may be seen in the Institutiones Ling. Heb. by Schultens, p. 53, &c., or in the Arcanum punctuationis revelatum, by Capell, &c. Various hypotheses have been offered on the names of the letters: one of the latest, and perhaps most improbable, is, that, as they occasionally present forms not in use in the Hebrew, they must therefore have been taken from some more ancient form of the language!

LECTURE II.

ON THE HEBREW ACCENTS, &c.

58. HAVING given tables of the Hebrew consonants and vowels, with some explanations and rules as to their powers and use; we now come to consider the accents and to give a table exhibiting their forms, situations, and names; to be followed, as before, with some observations on their nature and application. The following table given by Alting and adopted by Schultens and Gesenius, has been chosen as sufficiently extensive and explicit for our present purpose. The word here taken for the purpose of exhibiting the situation, &c. of accents, is cited from Isaiah lvii. 18, and signifies, with its affixes, "And I will heal him." The powers of inter-punctuation which these accents are believed to possess, will be considered hereafter. (Art. 244. seq.)

59. The Hebrew accents are found placed below, above, or on a level with, the line of the consonants. Those which are found below, are twelve in number: their situations, forms, and names, are as follows:—

No.	Sit. and Form.	Name.
1.	וְאֶרְפְּאֵהוּ	סִלּוּק or סְלוּק	Sillák.
2.	וְאֶרְפְּאֵהוּ	אֲתַנַּח	Athnákh.

Those which are placed above the line of consonants, are eighteen in number. Their names, forms, and situations, are as follows:—

No.	Sit. and Form.	Name.
1.	וְאֶרְפָּאֵהוּ	רְבִיעַ Rëvíäh.

18.	וְאֶרְפָּאֵהוּ	מַהְפָּךְ Mahpák superior.

Zarká anterior, and the two last, are found thus in the higher style only.

The accents, written both above and below the line at the same time are four: their names, forms, and situations, are as follows:—

No.	Sit. and Form.	Name.
1.	וְאֶרְפָּאֵהוּ	Mahpák with Mercá.
2.	וְאֶרְפָּאֵהוּ	Zarká with Mercá.
3.	וְאֶרְפָּאֵהוּ	Zarká with Mahpák.
4.	וְאֶרְפָּאֵהוּ	Mūnákh with Mahpák.

One only is found in the same line with the consonants.

וְאֶרְפָּאֵהוּ לְגַרְמֵי Legarmé, or פְּסִיק Pésik, according to its situation.

It should be observed that, as several of these accents have the same form, they can be distinguished by their positions only. The best way to get acquainted with them is, to write them over a few times, first with, and then without, the tables.*

60. These marks are divided, with respect to their offices, into Tonic, and Euphonic, accents.

61. The tonic accent, however situated, can affect only the ultimate or penultimate syllable of any word, as the

* Various offices have been ascribed to these accents. By some they are thought to have been attached to the sacred text, in order to regulate the tone of voice, either in reading or chanting. Others have supposed them to have been affixed for the purpose of dividing it into its several members, as verses, the larger and smaller members of sentences, &c., and to point out the different dependence which these parts have on one another. Others, again, have assigned to them emphasis, parenthesis, parallelism, &c., while others have given them all these offices together. Some, again, have supposed them to be of divine, others of human, origin. In the present work we shall consider their application to the text, as the best grammarians usually have done, viz., as intended to divide the context into its different members, and to determine (for the most part) the tone-accent of the words in which they are found. As to their authority, we cannot allow it to be divine, until better proofs than any hitherto offered shall have been given on that point. As coming from men, who had perhaps made the Hebrew Bible the study of their lives, they are valuable. They may, nevertheless, be rejected, whenever a more convenient division can be discovered.

analogy may require, which it does by directing the emphasis to be placed on that syllable. When this accent is found on any other syllable, the tone-accentuation of such word can be known only from its analogy. In other cases, the accent will point it out.

62. When a word happens to have more than one tone-accent, and both happen to be the same, the first will govern the accentuation; as תְּהִי׃ Thó-hū: but, when they are not the same, the last will; e. g. וְלִמְוֵעַיִם׃ Ū-lēmō-ādím.

63. Generally, all words either being, or terminating in the form of, Segolates (to be considered hereafter), will have the accentuation on the penultimate syllable: all others on the ultimate.

64. The Euphonic accent supplies a sort of secondary accentuation to the word in which it is found; which can never be in the ultimate of any word, nor even the penultimate of those having the Segolate form.

65. Of this accent, modern grammarians count two sorts, Métheḡ מֶתֶגַּח, and Makkáph מַקְפָּה. The former of these has the same form with Sillúk (׳); but, as it can never hold the same situation, the distinction is easily known. The latter takes the form of our hyphen; as in אֶת־כֹּל Eth-kól, and generally deprives the preceding word of its tone-accent. In neither case is their insertion always solitary; for, several Métheḡs are sometimes found in the same word, and several words are occasionally connected by the operation of Makkáph. Particular rules for their insertion will be given hereafter.

66. One mark more it may suffice to notice here, and that is, a small circle sometimes found over a word in the Hebrew context; thus, הִנְּיָא. The word, over which this mark is found, is said to be כְּתִיב Kéthiv, or written; and the mark itself is intended to direct the attention of the reader to some note to be found either in the margin, or at the foot, of the page. For the most part, it directs the reader to a various reading, on the right side of which we find the word קְרִי Kēri, meaning either reading or read.* The readings thus pointed out in the Hebrew Bible amount to about 1000, and are generally preferred to those found in the text. The far greater part of them has been found by Kennicott and De Rossi in the MSS. which they collated.†

67. Having thus far explained the powers of the several consonants, vowels, accents, &c., and given some rules on the subject of their combination, we now proceed to lay down, and analyze, a portion of the Hebrew text, in exemplification of what has been said. The passage we shall first take is, Zephaniah iii. 8, in which we have all the letters of the alphabet, with most of the vowels and other marks. In reading this, the learner should mark each syllable distinctly, with a slight pause; and continue this practice until he is perfectly familiar with all the consonants, vowels, &c.

8 לְעַד l'ehád	7 קוֹמִי Kū-mí	6 לְיוֹם l'eyóm	5 נְאֻם־יְהוָה Y'ehō-vá†—n'ēum	3 חֲבוּ־לִי h—khak-kū	1 לְכֹן Lā-kén.

* For an explanation of these Masoretic marks, the Tiberias of Buxtorfius should be consulted.

† Kennicott's Dissertatio Generalis, § 39. De Rossi Proleg. § xxxix.

‡ This word is pronounced אֲדוֹנָי Adō-nái by the Jews, whenever it is found as pointed above: but, when it precedes the word אֱלֹהֵי in the text, it then takes the points of the word אֱלֹהִים Ēlōhím, thus אֱדוֹנֵי, and is then pronounced Ēlōhím. This is a mere Jewish superstition, derived from a considerable antiquity; it being their opinion, that this name ought to be pronounced by none except the High Priest, and by him only once in the year.

The learner will recollect that he is to read, beginning at the right, and proceeding towards the left, hand (Art. 3.); and that the consonants must precede the vowels (Art. 31.). The numerals are added to shew the order of the words. Let us now proceed to analyze the syllables, &c.

In No. 1. we have Lámed with Kāméts, making the open syllable Lā. After this we have Caph with Tsēré, followed by Nún, making the syllable kén. Here, according to our system of syllabication, we should have had some imperfect vowel under the Caph (Art. 33.), which would have been sufficient to complete this syllable; but the accent Mahpák being added, the anomaly is corrected (ib.).

No. 2. Khéth with Páthakh, followed by Caph with the point Dāgésh inscribed: and, as a vowel follows this letter, it must be doubled; the point is therefore Dāgésh forte. (Art. 47.) The first syllable, consequently, is khak, the second is kū; and this is composed of the second Caph, and the vowel Shūrék. We next have the mark called Makkáph, which is used to connect numbers 2 and 3 together, like our hyphen (Art. 65.).

No. 3. Laméd with Khīrīk followed by Yód, making the open syllable lī; to this is added the tonic accent Pashtá, which may be represented by lí.

No. 4. we have Nún with Shěvá. In this case Shěvá is very slightly pronounced (Art. 40.), but it is not reckoned as a syllable. In the next place we have Álef with Kibbúts, followed by Mem. This syllable, therefore, must be pronounced um, in which u has the sound of oo in good. The whole word will then be něum, in which the ě will be passed over as rapidly as possible. We then have the mark Makkáph, as before, which deprives the preceding word of its tone-accent (Art. 65.).

No. 5. is the word Jehovah, pronounced Yěhō-vá. Here Shěvá is passed over rapidly as before. The point over the left limb of Hé is the vowel Khōlém (Art. 52.); and, as the Vaw following has a vowel of its own, it is not quiescent in the preceding vowel Khōlém, which it otherwise would be (Art. 37.). The first syllable, therefore, including the Shěvá, will be Yěhō, the next Vá, in which the terminating ם will be quiescent in the preceding Kāméts (ib.). Over the Vaw commencing this last syllable, we have the accent Záképh Kátón. In no respect, therefore, can the mark (◌) under this Vaw be a Kāméts Khátúph. (Art. 54.).

Nothing now occurs, worth remark, till we come to No. 11. In the word לֶ־עֶ־סוֹ־פֶ־לֵ־ Lē-ěsóf, then, the first syllable consists of Láméd with Ségól, accompanied by an Euphonic accent (Art. 65.) called Métheg, making a complete syllable (Art. 33.) This syllable, therefore, is open Lē. The Álef following, with Khātěph Ségól which is a substitute of Shěvá (Art. 46.), does not constitute a syllable; and, therefore, it is passed over as rapidly as convenient, in connexion with the following syllable Sóf, which has the tonic accent Pashtá (Art. 59.).

No. 12. The first syllable consists of Gímél with (י) Khōlém (Art. 29.). The next syllable is commenced by Yód, with Khírík Gádól following, and which, by analogy, should be followed by another Yód, as יִ־יִ־ Yím, or ím (Art. 15.): but the second Yód is frequently omitted, as will be seen Art. 53. Khírík thus situated is nevertheless a perfect vowel: and, as the syllable also ends with a consonant, the accent Géresh is added to rectify the syllabication (Art. 33.).

No. 13. אֶ־שֶׁ־וֹ־אֵ־. Here the first letter has an Initial Shěvá, which will therefore be passed over rapidly. In the next place we have ק Koph, followed by (τ), i. e. either Kāméts or Kāméts Khātúph. It cannot be Kāméts, because it precedes a consonant which has neither any vowel of its own, and is accompanied by no accent, (Art. 54.) The first syllable, therefore, will be Lěkov, and the last, tsí, which need not be further explained.

On No. 14. it will be necessary only to remark, that the point placed over the middle of the letter כ is the accent Rěvíáh, not the vowel Khólém, which however follows that letter. A recurrence to the tables will always be sufficient to shew, that this accent is placed over the middle of the consonant, Khólém always on the one side.

No. 19. forms one syllable only : the Khātéph Páthakh (·) found under the כ Khéth, being one of the substitutes of Shěvá, is not counted in the syllabication.

68. The names of the different accents will be found by turning to the table (Art. 59.), with which the Learner will do well to make himself familiar : otherwise, he will occasionally confound them with the vowels, and, in many instances, be unable to determine whether Shěvá begins, or ends a syllable, or whether the mark (τ) be Kāméts, or Kāméts Khātúph. We shall subjoin a passage, for the sake of practice, in which the greater part of the accents is found, and give the syllables in Roman letters, as in the last, in order to facilitate the reading.

69. It will be unnecessary to point out the names of the different vowels and accents found in this extract, as the Learner will easily find them by recurring to the tables. It may be necessary however to remark, that the accent found between the third and fourth words is termed Lěgarmé, not Pěsíik. The distinction consists in this: that when the accent Múnákh precedes the mark (ı) it is then termed Lěgarmé. When any other accent precedes, it is termed Pěsíik. In the word לֵכֶן too, the accent is found over the ל, while the accented syllable is the following one כֶן: but this accent, viz., Tělishá gědólá, is always found on the first letter, see the Table, while the accentuation is regulated by the analogy (Art. 61.). As the word נֶשֶׁם commences with Dāgěsh in the ש, the vowel (ı) terminating the preceding word is so connected with it, as to enable the reader to pronounce the ש twice, as in shshám (Art. 47.).

70. The Learner cannot now do better than to take a Hebrew Bible, and transcribe a chapter or more at a time, in Roman letters, dividing it into syllables as given above; and this he should continue to do until he is quite familiar with the letters, vowels, accents, and syllables. After this he may read, which he had better do aloud, until he finds no difficulty in enouncing every syllable fully and correctly. A little perseverance will accomplish this, which is perhaps the greatest difficulty he will have to encounter: when he has succeeded, he will find his progress both easy and delightful.

LECTURE III.

ON THE GENERAL PRINCIPLES, CONNECTED WITH EUPHONY, WHICH AFFECT THE ETYMOLOGY OF THE HEBREW LANGUAGE.

71. IT is well known that changes take place in the consonants and vowels of all languages, which can be accounted for on no other principles than those of euphony. Certain vowels and consonants would, in some situations, introduce sounds so difficult of utterance and so grating to the ear, that conversation would become painful both to the speaker and hearer. In order to avoid these, certain changes are found to take place in the constitution of words, which at first sight appear to be anomalous, and which give great trouble to the learner until the laws by which they are regulated are understood. In no language is this more apparent than in the Hebrew and its dialects, particularly the Arabic. In the Sanscrit it prevails in a much greater degree; and is found in the Greek to give more trouble to the learner, than anything else brought under his observation. It is our intention to commence our investigation of the principles of the Hebrew language, by detailing the rules under which these apparent anomalies are regulated, for the purpose of enabling the learner to account for the different forms of words as they occur. Because, until he has some knowledge of this subject, he will meet with scarcely any thing but difficulty; and may, after a study of some years, be induced,—as many have been,—to confess that there is nothing certain in this language.

72. It has been remarked (Art. 36, &c.) that the letters contained in the technical word קָטָן , will occasionally lose their power as consonants, or become quiescent in the sound of the preceding vowel, so that the pronunciation of the word will continue the same, whether these letters be written or not; and, the consequence is, they are often omitted; as, פִּגְמוֹד, for פִּוּגְמוֹד visitor; דִּבְרָם, for דִּבְרָיִם words; אוֹתֹת, for אוֹתוֹת signs; שָׁת, for שָׁאֵת elevation; הַגְּשָׁן, for הַגְּשָׁנָה they (fem.) approach; מִלְּכָם, for מִהֲלֵכָם what (is it) to you? יָדַעְתִּי, for יָדַעְתָּה I have known, &c. And, vice versá, these letters will occasionally be inserted when the analogy does not require them: as פָּקוּד for פִּקוּד visiting, קָמָה, for קָמָה stood,* &c.

73. Hence, when Shěvá (:), or one of its Substitutes, happens to be initial, and to precede one of the letters אֶהְיֶה, a contraction generally takes place, by which both (:) and the אֶהְיֶה letter are rejected, and the following vowel drawn back to the place of the rejected Shěvá or Substitute; e. g. שָׁת for שָׁאֵת, אָמַר for אָמַרְהוּ, בָּבִית for בָּהֶבִית, יִפְקוּד for יִהְיֶפְקוּד, יִפְקוּד for יִהְיֶפְקוּד, הָקוּ for הָקוּהוּ, כָּי for כָּיְהוּ, רָי for רָיְהוּ, גָּלַהּ for גָּלַהּוּ, יָמִים for יָמִיְהוּ (pl. of יוֹם day), עָרִים for עָרֵיהֶם (cities, pl. of עִיר), רָאשִׁים for רָאשֵׁיהֶם (pl. of ראש head, where, however, the א is retained.)

74. When any one of the letters אֶהְיֶה terminates a word, and has no vowel either immediately preceding or following, it is often rejected: as, שָׁבִי for שָׁבִיָּה a captive, גַּי for גַּיָּה a valley, נָו for נָוָה a line, עָו for עָוָה a precept, עַד for עַדְיָ or עַדְיָה (passing) yet, ever, eternal.

1. When not rejected, they are said to be otiose (Art. 37.), which may happen either in the middle or at the end of a word: as, הָבִיאתָ thou broughtest, גַּיָּה a valley.

2. Hence it is, that ה, standing as the third letter of a root, and losing its vowel, is rejected: as, יָגַלְהָ for יָגַלְהָה, originally יָגַלְהָה he reveals, יָשַׁלְהָ for יָשַׁלְהָה, &c. This is termed Apocope. The reason of it, as will be seen hereafter, is the removal of the Tone-accent.

75. Any one of the letters ה, ו, or י, when preceded and followed by a vowel, will occasionally be dropped: as, פָּנְדוּתֵיהֶם I visited them; פָּקְדוּם for פָּקְדוּהֶם they visited them; קָם for קָמָה he stood; קָן for קָנָה he understood; שָׂהָ for שָׂהָה a lamb, &c.

76. Either of the letters י, or נ, when initial,† and נ generally

* Hence it is, that the letters ו, י, א (for ה rarely occurs in such situation), have been termed “Matres lectionis,” and are supposed to have been used as vowels at some former period.

† Mr. Stuart has, after Gesenius, given נַד for נָד Judg. xix. 11; פָּהָה for פָּהָה 2 Sam. xxii. 41, &c.; יָשִׁיב for יָשִׁיב Jer. xlii. 10, as instances in which when terminating a syllable (not the last) and having a Shěvá (:), will be dropt: as, לָיְדָת, for יָדָת: bearing a child; יָדָעַת, for יָדָעַת: knowledge; נָגַשׁ, for נָגַשׁ: approach; יָגַשׁ, for יָגַשׁ: he draws near; יָנַפְקָד, for יָנַפְקָד: for יָנַפְקָד: ; אָף, for אָף: anger; אָמַת, for אָמַת: truth. In the latter case, when ן is dropt, the following letter will, when it can, be doubled by Dāgēsh, which may therefore be considered as compensative. ל likewise, in the verb לָקַח, when it ought to take (:) Shěvá by analogy, is dropt: as לָקַח, for לָקַח: take.

1. The reason of these elisions seems to be, that, as the ך would be enounced with some difficulty with an initial Shěvá; and the ן, in each case, on account of its being a nasal, both have been neglected in writing.

77. When the last two letters of any root, and occasionally of derivatives, happen to be the same, one of them is usually dropt: as, סָבַר, for סָבַר: he surrounded; סָבַר, for סָבַר: surrounding; עָמַר, for עָמַר: a people; אָמַר, for אָמַר: a mother; which, however, will be restored (by Dāgēsh) when any augment makes this possible: as, יָסָבַר: they have surrounded; עָמַר: my people, &c. In this case, the rejection probably takes place, in order to avoid an ambiguity which might arise from the operation of a rule hereafter to be considered, under which the Learner or Reader may possibly misunderstand this for a reduplication, introduced for the sake of emphasis or the like.

78. Letters of the same organ are, on account of a similarity of sound prevailing among them, sometimes changed the one for the other: e. g.

1. Labials: בָּן, בָּב, or בָּב: the back; מָרִיא, or מָרִיא: fat; מָלַט, or מָלַט: he escaped.

2. Palatals: סָגַר, or סָגַר: he shut up; רָבַל, or רָבַל: he travelled; כּוֹבַע, or כּוֹבַע: a handle.

3. Linguals: חָטַף, or חָטַף: he robbed.

4. Sibilants: עָלַז, or עָלַז, or עָלַז, he exulted; זָעַק, or זָעַק: he cried out; שָׂחַק, or שָׂחַק: he laughed.

5. Gutturals: פָּאָה, or פָּאָה: he was weak; אָגַם, or אָגַם: he was mournful.

ך or ן having a vowel, is dropt by the aphæresis. For my part, I doubt whether these are not rather infinitives than preterites; and if they are so, the elision comes under the above rule.

79. In a few instances, letters of different organs, but, in some respects, similar in sound, are changed one for another, as,

1. Sibilants for Linguals : זָעַף, or זָעַף he quenched; נָצַר, or נָצַר he watched; בָּרוּשׁ, or בָּרוּת a fir tree; חָרַשׁ, or חָרַת he engraved.

2. Liquids for one another : צָחַץ, or צָחַץ he oppressed; הִצְחִיל he caused to shine; שָׁמַן, or שָׁמַן he opposed; מָוֵט, or מָוֵט tottering; עָכָן, or עָכָר a proper name. So נְבוּכַדְנֶצַּר Nēvūkadnetstsár, or נְבוּכַדְרֶצַּר Nēvūkadnetstsár.

80. The אֶהוּי letters, considered either as consonants or quiescents, will occasionally be changed for one another, particularly when the pronunciation of the word is not materially affected by the change: e. g. בְּלוּאִים, or בְּלוּיִים rags; דּוֹגָג, or דּוֹגָג Dōég, a proper name; הָלַךְ, or הָלַךְ he went; הִרְחַא, or הִרְחַח baldness; מְקוּא, or מְקוּהָ a collection; רֹאשׁ, or רֹאשׁ the head; הָאָם, or הָאָם an animal so called; רֵאשִׁוֹן, or רֵאשִׁוֹן the first; גָּלָה he revealed; for גָּלִי, &c.

81. In like manner, נ is occasionally found in the place of one or other of the אֶהוּי letters: as, נָצַב, for יָצַב he set up; נָאָה, for יָאָה he was beautiful. So in the Syriac, נִקְטוּל, for יִקְטוּל he kills.

82. The letters of a syllable are, moreover, sometimes transposed; as, פָּקַל, for סָכַל he was foolish; פָּשֵׁב, for פָּבֵשׁ a lamb; נָשַׁף, for נָפַשׁ he breathed; פָּצַר, for פָּצַר he broke out; אָקַה, for אָקַה he sighed; גָּאִיוֹת, for גָּאִיוֹת vallies: and, in some cases, a letter is transposed to another syllable; as, עָלָה, for עָלָה wickedness; שְׁלֵמָה, for שְׁלֵמָה a garment.

1. These changes and transpositions (i. e. from Art. 78 to this place) do not otherwise affect the grammar of the language, than point out to the student what roots, &c., are said to be Cognate; that is, are related to one another in their radical letters, and have the same, or very nearly the same, signification. The preceding, as well as the following, will affect the grammatical forms of words.

83. When the ה, of the Hithpāhél species of conjugation, precedes by analogy any of the Sibilant letters (Art. 23.), a transposition, and occasionally a change, of that letter will take place: e. g. In the first case, הִסְתַּבֵּל, for הִתְסַבֵּל he loaded himself; הִשְׁתַּמֵּר, for הִתְשַׁמֵּר he caused to keep. In the second: הִצְדִּיק, for הִתְצַדִּיק, he justified. In this case only is the ה changed to ט.

1. But, when a letter of the same organ with ה (see Art. 23.) follows, both will coalesce by Dāgēsh placed in the radical letter: e. g. הַדְּבָר, for הַדְּבָר, of דְּבַר he spoke; הַיְהִיָּה, for הַיְהִיָּה, of הַיְהִיָּה he was clean; הַתְּמַמִּים, for הַתְּמַמִּים, of תְּמַם he was complete.

2. This coalescence,—which has been termed Assimilation,—is found very generally to prevail; but not without some exceptions, which will be noticed hereafter.

3. In a few instances, this principle of assimilation is also found to extend itself to other letters: e. g. הַזְּכוּי, for הַזְּכוּי, of זָכָה he was pure, הַכְּפָה, for הַכְּפָה, of כָּסָה he covered; הַנְּבִיא, for הַנְּבִיא, of נָבֵא he declared; הַשְּׂמֵים, for הַשְּׂמֵים, of שָׂמַם he desolated, &c.

84. Letters are sometimes added, either for the purpose of facilitating the pronunciation, or for modifying the signification of words: e. g. in the first case: אֶתְמֹל, for אֶתְמֹל yesterday; אֶזְרוֹעַ, for אֶזְרוֹעַ the arm.* In the second: אֶכְזָר, from כָּזַר cruel, &c. Of this kind are the paragogic letters, as well as those used in forming the different species of nouns, conjugations, &c., of which an account will be given hereafter. The first of these cases is termed Prosthesis; the second Epenthesis, Paragoge, Hēēmanthi, &c., according to their different offices and uses.

85. Letters are occasionally dropt (Art. 72. 76.), so also ם and ן in the Syriac, Chaldaic, and Arabic), terminating words in the plural number, when those words happen to be in the state of definite construction,—of which more hereafter. ן likewise, in a very few instances at the end of proper names: as, מְגִדוֹן, for מְגִדוֹן, for the reason given in Art. 76. 1.

On the Contractions which take place in the Vowels.

86. As it may occasionally happen, in combining the vowels with the consonants, that certain sounds may arise either disagreeable to the ear, difficult of utterance, or, from some reason or other, generally avoided by the people speaking a given language; it is of importance to know, in what cases these difficulties are found to arise in the language before us, and how they are obviated.

87. Whenever any vowel not homogeneous with one of the

* Of this sort are the words stablish and establish, special and especial, in English. So in the Greek στάχος ἄσταχος, νῆστις ἀνῆστις, &c. And so, in some of the former cases, as, English, said, for sayed; had, for haved; brand, from burned; ask, Saxon, axian, or acsuan; wrought, for worked.

letters ך, or ך, (Art. 38.) happens to precede such letter, a vowel will be formed from the combination partaking of the sound of both : hence—

1. (-) Páthakh preceding ך will become ך Khólém ; e. g. מוֹת death ; יוֹלֵד, for יוֹלֵד (for יוֹלֵד, Art. 73.) he begets ; יוֹשֵׁב, for יוֹשֵׁב (for יוֹשֵׁב ib.) he causes to reside.*

2. Vav ך, preceded by (⊕) Khátúph, (⊖) Kibbúts, (⊙) Ségól, or (⊘) Tséré, will become ך : e. g. יוֹלֵד, for יוֹלֵד, or יוֹלֵד (from יוֹלֵד יוֹלֵד, Art. 73.) he is begotten ; קוֹם, for קוֹם standing ; מַלְכּוֹת, for מַלְכּוֹת, (probably for מַלְכּוֹת, Art. 73. of מַלְכּוֹת king, and הוֹת or הוֹת being, root הוֹת was,) reigning ; kingdom. So יוֹשֵׁב, for יוֹשֵׁב, root שָׁחָה, for שָׁחָה he was low ; תָּהוּ, for תָּהוּ emptiness ; בָּהוּ, for בָּהוּ inanity, &c.

3. In like manner, ך preceded by (-) Páthakh, will become quiescent in (⊘), the (⊖) disappearing : as, בַּיִת, for בַּיִת a house ; עַיִן, for עַיִן an eye ; גַּי, or by Art. 74, גַּי, for גַּי a valley ; הַיִּטָּב, for הַיִּטָּב (for הַיִּטָּב, or הַיִּטָּב, Art. 73.) it does well.

4. When the vowel (⊙) or (⊘) precedes ך, the contraction will take place in ך perfect : e. g. בְּרִית, for בְּרִית (formed perhaps from בְּרָה eating ; and הִיָּת, or הִיָּת, of the root הִיָּה he was) a covenant ; רֵאשִׁית, for רֵאשִׁית beginning ; אִישׁ, for אִישׁ a man. So מְרִי, for מְרִי rebellion ; שָׁבִי, for שָׁבִי captivity ; חֲצִי, for חֲצִי half.

5. In like manner, when Shěvá precedes any perfect or imperfect vowel, or a substitute of Shěvá follows an imperfect one ; a contraction may take place, in which the Shěvá, or its Substitute, will disappear : as, 1st. שָׂאת, for שָׂאת elevation ; לְתָרָאת, for לְתָרָאת meeting ; יֹאמֵר, for יֹאמֵר he says, &c. 2. לֹאמֵר, for לֹאמֵר saying ; יֹאצֵּל, for יֹאצֵּל he separates ; and (by Art. 72.) יִטָּב, for יִטָּב he prospers.

6. Either (-) or (⊕) preceding a guttural letter, which has (⊕) Kāméts, is frequently changed into (⊙) for the sake of euphony : as, אֶרֶץ masc. אֶרֶץ † fem. one ; הַהָרִים for הַהָרִים the mountains.

* So in the Sanscrit regularly, a and u become ō ; a and i, ē. See the Grammars. From this, and similar cases which will occur, it appears extremely probable that ך, when a consonant, was originally pronounced like our w, as מַלְכּוֹת Malkewth, which would be regularly written מַלְכּוֹת Malkúth : and so of others.

† There is a manifest anomaly in the first vowel of these words, which may be corrected thus : אֶרֶץ, אֶרֶץ, אֶרֶץ, or אֶרֶץ ; אֶרֶץ, or אֶרֶץ. This last would approach the orthography of the Syrians ; the other, that of the Arabs. It has also been supposed to contain an implied Dāgēsh. Art. 114.

On the Changes of the Vowels.

88. Could we suppose Hebrew words to have remained unaltered as to their original forms, or unvaried in pronunciation with reference to the syllable on which the accent is placed; we could also suppose, that no variation would ever have taken place in the vowels. But the fact is, the forms of words vary, in order to express the different shades of meaning of which the root is capable; and, from this, as well as other causes, the accented syllable will not always remain the same: and, consequently, as the pronunciation of the word thus varied must alter, the vowels accompanying it must vary likewise.

89. Hence it will appear, that two circumstances are to be attended to, with reference to the change of the Hebrew vowels. One is, the etymology or form of the word; the other, the situation of the accent.

90. The form of the word can only be understood from rules hereafter to be detailed. The principles, however, upon which the etymology rests, may here be stated; and that will be sufficient for the present.

91. Any augment whatever, prefixed to a word, will not influence our present considerations, as the changes of the vowels do not depend upon this. We have now to do, only with augments post-fixed to words; because it is upon these alone, that such changes depend.

92. These augments, then, may be considered as of two sorts: One, commencing with a vowel, and which may be termed Asyllabic; the other with a consonant, which may be termed Syllabic.*

93. We can readily perceive, that, upon any Asyllabic augment being postfixed to a word, the terminating consonant of such word must be taken in order to enounce it; otherwise it will remain silent; it being contrary to the laws of syllabication, that any vowel begin a syllable (Art. 31.). If, then, we attach the asyllabic augment ׁ־,—which is the mark of the plural number masculine, —to any word, such as ׁ־עַ a people, or ׁ־קַ pure; we must necessarily take the last letter, of either of these words respectively to enounce it: and, if the word have, by analogy, but one such terminating letter, then must the preceding syllable necessarily be perfect; but, if two, imperfect; e. g. רָרִים pure, (root רָרַר , the ר being rejected by Art. 72.) then adding ים , we have רָרִים Bā-rim, pure ones, &c. But taking עַם a people,—which is derived from the root עָמַע ,—(one of the radicals being rejected by Art. 77, we have עַם ,) and adding ים , we shall have עַמִּים Ham-mim, peoples. It will entirely depend, therefore, upon the analogy of the word, whether the preceding vowel is to be perfect or not, due regard being had to the laws of Syllabication.

94. In the next place, if our augment be Syllabic, as כֶּם , (which is one of the pronominal affixes signifying your, and carrying the accent with it,) as Hebrew words in the singular generally end in a consonant; the preceding vowel, in such case, must necessarily be imperfect; because, both this vowel will be without an accent, and it will be followed by a consonant: e. g. בָּרִים כֶּם Bar-kém, your pure one; or, עַמִּים כֶּם Ham-měkém, your people.

95. Hence it will appear, that a perfect vowel will occasionally become imperfect; and, vice versá, an imperfect one, perfect: i. e. in other words, vowels will be changed for their homogeneous perfect or imperfect ones, as the rules of syllabication, considered in connexion with the etymology, shall require.

96. This correspondence, however, in the vowels, is of two sorts; Direct, and Oblique.

1. The Direct correspondence is, that of the several perfect, with the imperfect, vowels, respectively, as (◌◌) with (◌◌), (◌◌) with (◌◌), &c., as given in the Tables (Art. 29.)

2. The Oblique correspondence is, that of the vowels in some respects dissimilar; as, (◌◌) or (◌◌) with (◌◌) or (◌◌); (◌◌) or (◌◌) with (◌◌) or (◌◌); and (◌◌) with (◌◌).

97. Generally, therefore, when any change of the vowels must take place, in order to comply with the laws of etymology and syllabication; those vowels which are either directly, or obliquely, homogeneous with their primitives, will be taken: the directly homogeneous ones generally; the other cases may be considered as exceptions, for which, nevertheless, some cause can generally be assigned.

98. This change of the vowels, moreover, will occasionally affect the penultimate syllable of a word, as well as the ultimate. Let us now consider by what laws the change will be regulated in this case.

99. Generally, upon any augment being made, when the penultimate syllable ends in a perfect, but mutable, vowel, that vowel will be rejected, and its place be supplied, either by Shěvâ, or by one of its Substitutes, according to rules hereafter to be given; but, if that vowel be immutable,* it will necessarily remain unaltered: e. g. affixing םַי to דְּבָרַי a word, we shall have דְּבָרַיִם Dě-vā-rim, words: but, attaching it to בּוֹקֵר visiting, where the penultimate vowel is immutable by analogy, we shall have בּוֹקֵרַיִם persons visiting.

100. In like manner, if the penultimate syllable end in a consonant, and have no accent, its vowel will necessarily remain immutable, whatever be the affix: as, מְקַדְּשֵׁי אֱלֹהִים a sanctifier, מְקַדְּשֵׁי אֱלֹהִים, or מְקַדְּשֵׁי אֱלֹהֵיכֶם sanctifiers, or, your sanctifiers.

101. Again, in all cases, in which the ultimate is immutable, either by analogy or position, the penultimate vowel, if mutable by analogy, will be rejected: but, when both are immutable, no change can take place in the vowels, whatever be the affix. Examples of the first case, מְבַרְכֵי אֱלֹהִים a person visited, מְבַרְכֵי אֱלֹהִים, מְבַרְכֵי אֱלֹהֵיכֶם; of the second, מְבַרְכֵי אֱלֹהֵיכֶם, מְבַרְכֵי אֱלֹהֵיכֶם, fountain, fountains, your fountains.

102. The changes to which the vowels are liable, from the accident of the Grammar, can affect no vowel beyond the penultimate: because, first, the prefixing of any augment whatever to a word does not affect its vowels (Art. 91.); and, secondly, as no syllable, beyond the penultimate, can be affected by the tone accent; neither can it, by any augment whatever affixed to such word: the syllables so situated, will therefore remain undisturbed by grammatical accident.

103. The reason for abridging words, either in the ultimate, or penultimate, syllable (for both seldom occur together) when any augment is affixed, seems to be this: Were words thus to be augmented, in addition to their own primitive vowels, they would become inconveniently long. And, on the other hand, as those vowels, which have been termed immutable, constitute the distinctive character of the words in which they are found, perspicuity forbids that any change should take place in them: otherwise the peculiar forms of such words would be lost; and, with that, the sense intended by writers generally.

On the use of Shěvâ, and its Substitutes.

104. Having laid down the general laws, relating to the changes

* It will be shewn hereafter in what cases vowels are mutable or immutable.

of the vowels, we now proceed to notice a few affecting the use of Shěvá and its Substitutes. To enter into all the niceties usually brought forward upon these points, could be neither necessary nor agreeable to the student: the length and subtilty of the enquiry, would not only be tedious and embarrassing; but, when brought to a close, would probably leave him in possession of less practical knowledge on the subject, than the use of tables and his lexicon would supply. We shall therefore be brief, contenting ourselves with what seems most important, and noticing a few apparent anomalies as we proceed.

105. Shěvá (:) may be either Initial or Final (Art. 40.). It will be initial at the commencement of any syllable, whether that be at the beginning, or in the middle, of a word; final, when at the end of any syllable.

106. By grammatical accident, however, two Shěvás, or Shěvá with a Substitute of Shěvá, may concur as initials: but, as no one of these can stand for a vowel, or constitute a syllable in conjunction with any consonant; some change must necessarily take place when any two of them concur. In this case the first Shěvá, or Substitute of Shěvá, will be changed into some imperfect vowel.

1. Shěvá so situated, which usually happens at the beginning of a word, mostly becomes Khīrik (·), sometimes Páthakh (-) or Sēgól (·): as, 1. וְיָקֵץ, for יָקֵץ he visits; וְיָקֵץ, for יָקֵץ in visiting; 2. וְיָנֵץ, for יָנֵץ wings; and וְיָנֵץ, for יָנֵץ I visit. The use of Páthakh (-), however, is rare, and can be known only from usage: Sēgól will occur only with א,* ה, or ע.

2. One or other of the Substitutes of Shěvá, may concur with Shěvá, or with another Substitute of Shěvá, either in the beginning, or in the middle, of a word; the change will then be, into the imperfect vowel homogeneous with the Substitute; e. g. וְיָנֵץ for וְיָנֵץ men, וְיָנֵץ, for וְיָנֵץ he is turned over. So, in the middle, וְיָנֵץ, for וְיָנֵץ thy work; וְיָנֵץ, for וְיָנֵץ they stand. There are, however, many exceptions: as, וְיָנֵץ it is made, or done, masc., but fem. וְיָנֵץ, which can be known only by usage.

3. But, as the Substitutes of Shěvá are various, it may be necessary here to state, in what cases either of them is generally preferred; because upon this, the operation of the foregoing rule will greatly depend.

* This is regularly the case, in the first person singular of the species Kal, Nipphál, and Pihél, when no guttural letter follows.

4. Generally, when one of the guttural letters commences a syllable, whether in the beginning or in the middle of a word, and ought by analogy to take (:) Shěvâ; Khâtêph Pâthakh (·) is mostly substituted for it; e.g. 1. At the beginning of words: אֲבֵיהֶם their father; אֲחִיכֶם your brother; אֲשֶׁר who, which; עֲשֵׂה make thou. 2. In the middle: גֹּאֲלֹוֹ his redeemer; תִּפְחָדִי fear ye; שֶׁעָדָה she proceeded. (See Art. 46.).

5. There is, however, a considerable number of exceptions to this rule: and, 1st. Several monosyllables, with their compounds, commencing with א, will take (·) Khâtêph Sêgól in the place of Shěvâ; as אֵלֵימֶלֶךְ Ēlîmêlek, a proper name. 2dly, Infinitives and Imperatives of the conjugation Kal, when commencing with א: as אֲכֹל eating, or eat thou; אֲמֹר saying, or say thou. 3dly, The characteristic ה of the Hiphkûl species, in verbs having the middle radical letter quiescent, and receiving some augment: as, הִשְׁבֹּה he restored him or it; הִמִּיתָם he put them to death. The first person singular mostly follows the general rule and takes (·). 4thly, In a few words (·) is found with ע at the beginning of a word: as, עֲזוּזִי strength; עֲלִי a pestil; עֲנֹת affliction; עָרַוְךָ arrayed; עֲנֵי respond ye. 6thly, Khâtêph Sêgól (·) is also found in the middle of a word: as, הָאֲהֶלְךָ towards the tent; יִאֲחֲזֶנּוּךָ they take hold of thee; וַיִּחַמְּרוּ and they become inflamed; וַיִּחַמְתֵּנִי she conceived me. 7thly, In the following we have (·) similarly situated: אֲשַׁרְמָה I rest; תִּשְׁחָדִי thou (fem.) didst bribe. And, 8thly, Generally, whenever a mutable א has been rejected, its place may be supplied by (·) when commencing a word, and frequently when in the middle, whatever be the accompanying consonant: as, חֳדָשִׁים months, from חֹדֶשׁ a month; אֲהָלִים from אֹהֶל tent; חֲדָשִׁים plural of חֹדֶשׁ, holiness, &c. And, 9thly, Some cases occur, in which one or other of these Substitutes is found with a non-guttural letter, and when analogy does not seem to require it: e.g. זָהָב gold, Gen. ii. 12; לָקַחְתָּהּ she was taken, ib. ver. 23; and a few others, which may perhaps be attributed to the mistakes of the copyists.

107. Any guttural letter, originally commencing a word, and having a Substitute of Shěvâ in its own right, by Art. 106. 4. will,—upon being preceded by some particle with Shěvâ, but which by Art. 106. 1. must become an imperfect vowel,—require that such imperfect vowel be homogeneous with that in the Substitute: e.g. עֲשֵׂה making, &c. prefixing וְ, הִ, הֵ, הֶ, &c. which are the personal preformatives of the present tense, we shall have הַעֲשֶׂה he makes; הַעֲשִׂיָה she makes; נַעֲשֶׂה we make, &c. So likewise with other particles: as, פַּ, פָּ, לְ, מְ, וְ; as, בַּעֲבֹד, for בְּעֹבֵד in making; פַּעֲבֹד, לְעֹבֵד, &c.

There are, however, some exceptions, as in the first persons singular of some of the species of conjugation, &c.; e. g., אֶעֱשֶׂה I make, &c., which seems to be derived from עֲשֶׂה as before; all of which, however, will be found in the dictionaries.

108. There are also other substitutions made for the mark Shěvá, which may be termed Euphonic. These take place, for the most part, at the end of words, where two Shěvás, concurring by analogy, would introduce some difficulty into the pronunciation.

The vowels introduced in these cases are, (◌◌), (◌-), or (◌◌). Sēgól is generally used when neither of the consonants concerned is guttural; (◌-) when one or two of them is so; and (◌◌) when the first of them is Yód: e. g. מֶלֶךְ, for מְלֶכֶךְ a king; where the primitive vowel, be that what it may, is generally made to correspond, in sound at least, with the one substituted, for the mere sake of euphony: e. g. סֵפֶר, for סְפֶר a book; נַעַר, for נְעֶר a boy; בַּיִת, for בְּיֵת a house; גַּבְרִית, for גְּבֶרֶת a lady; לִמְדַת for לִמְדָת (fem.) learning. So in verbs: יָגַל, for יְגַל (for יְגַלֶה, Art. 74. 2.), he reveals; יִגְלֵל, by euphony for יְגַלֵל, for יְגַלֵל (for יְגַלֶה, ib.); he causes to reveal; יִחַר, for יְחַר (for יְחַרֶה, ib.), he becomes hot; הִעֲלֵל, for הִעֲלֵל (for הִעֲלֵלֶה) raise thou, &c. Nouns of these forms, termed Segolate, having י for their middle radical letter, will take (◌◌) Kāméts for their first vowel: as, מָוֶת death; מִנְיָן middle, &c. But, more of this when we come to the forms of words.

Particular Rules for the insertion of DAGESH.

109. The guttural letters, viz. א, ה, ח, and ע, to which ק may be added, are, on account of the difficulty with which they are enounced, incapable of being doubled; the consequence is, they cannot receive Dāgēsh forte: and, as they do not come under the rule relating to the letters בְּגִדֵּם (Art. 31.), they are also impervious to the operation of Dāgēsh when termed lene. Dāgēsh, therefore, cannot be regularly inscribed in any one of them.* But, when analogy requires its insertion, either the preceding vowel is made perfect, by way of compensation, as בָּרֶקֶךְ Bā-rék, instead of בַּרֶקֶךְ Bar-rék; in which case it is said to be expressed; or, it is only considered as being so, as, מֶרְאֵה־פֶּתַח měrá-khé-pheth instead of מֶרְאֵת, for מֶרְאֵת (Art. 43. note); where Dāgēsh is said to be implied.

* In a few instances, however, it is found in ק and א; as in 1 Sam. x. 24; xvii. 25; Gen. xliii. 26; Ezek. xvi. 4; Job xxxiii. 21, &c.

110. Generally, Dāgēsh is to be inscribed in any one of the letters בְּגִדְכֶפֶת, whenever such letter begins a syllable, provided, however, the preceding syllable do not end in a perfect vowel, or in one of the letters אֶהָיִ in a quiescent state, or in one of the Substitutes of Shēvā; for then it will not be inscribed in any of these letters. The exceptions are,

1. Should the preceding vowel be perfect, or the syllable end in one of the quiescent letters אֶהָיִ, and two of the בְּגִדְכֶפֶת letters concur in the commencement of the following word, the first will receive Dāgēsh; e. g. בְּפִי * אֶמִּינָה־תָּהֱכֵא Ēmū-ná-thěkā bběphí, Psalm lxxxix. 2. See also Isa. x. 9, Gen. xxxix. 12, &c. Dāgēsh will also be inscribed, should such perfect vowel, or quiescent letter preceding, have a distinctive accent; or, should the preceding word have any accent on the penultimate. A few exceptions are found when the preceding accent is conjunctive.†

2. Should the preceding word end in ׀ with Mappik (Art. 49.), or one of the letters ׀, or ׀, used as a diphthong; Dāgēsh will be regularly inscribed in any בְּגִדְכֶפֶת letter: because, in this case, such letter is considered as a consonant terminating the preceding syllable, as above: e. g. בְּצִדָּה־דָּח תָּשִׂים Bětsid-dáh tā-sím, not thā-sím Gen. vi. 16. See also Gen. xvii. 20, xxvii. 41; Psalm li. 17. Hence it is, that after יְהוָה, or יְהוֹה, Dāgēsh may be used, because the former of these is read by the Jews אֲדֹנָי Ādōnái, the latter, אֱלֹהִים Ēlō-hím. (See Art. 67. note.) There are, however, a few exceptions to this rule. See Isa. xxxiv. 11; Ezek. xxiii. 42; Ps. lxxviii. 18.

111. In the next place, should any one of the בְּגִדְכֶפֶת letters occur, not being at the beginning of a word, but following a final

* Some, however, read this passage without Dāgēsh.

† Exod. xv. 11, 16. Isa. liv. 12. Jer. xx. 9. Dan. iii. 3; v. 11. Ps. xxxv. 10. On the conjunctive and distinctive character of the accents, see the last Lecture in this work.

Shěva (:), it will regularly receive the point Dāgēsh; as, פָּקֹדֶת Pa-kád-tā, פָּקֹדֶת Pa-kádt, except in the following cases.

1. When this (:) stands in the place originally occupied by either (ר) or (ו), Dāgēsh will not be inscribed in the בְּגִדְפֶת letter following: e. g. כִּידְבָרֵי kid-vā-ré-kā, not כִּידְבָרֵי kid-bā-ré-kā: the primitive form of which is דָּבָר dā-vár. So מְלֵכִי , not מְלֵכִי , from מֶלֶךְ or מֵלֶךְ . So also בִּלְוָב Bil-váv, from לְוָב Lē-váv.

2. After an initial Shěvâ (:) which would be pronounced, but which becomes quiescent upon some particle being prefixed (Art. 41.), Dāgēsh will not be inscribed: as גְּבוּל Gěvúl, and, prefixing לְ , לְגְבוּל Lig-vúl, not Lig-búl. So with לְבוּשׁ a vesture, בְּכִי weeping, אֵי a he-goat, &c. as singulars, and דְּבָרִים words, זְכָרִים males, הַקְּבֻרֹת sepulchres, &c. as plurals. Infinitives and Imperatives of the form פָּקֹד , פָּקֹךְ , or פָּקֹךְ , with any augment, will also be excepted; as, רֹדְפֹו Rod-phó, his persecuting, שִׁכְבָּה Shik-vá, lie thou down, &c. where the last radical letter is one of the בְּגִדְפֶת letters.

3. After a final Shěvâ (:) following an imperfect vowel which has arisen out of some one of the substitutes of Shěvâ (Art. 106. 2. &c.); e. g. נַעֲמָדָה Nā-ham-dá, not נַעֲמָדָה , Isa. l. 8.

But, if such Shěvâ itself have arisen out of one of these substitutes, Dāgēsh will be inscribed; as, יַחֲפֹזֶשׁ Yakh-póts, Deut. xxv. 7.

4. The affixed pronouns הִי , כֶּם , כֹּן , never receive Dāgēsh lene: the letters בְּגִדְפֶת preceding וִית ; as, מַלְכֹות Mal-kúth, עֲבָדוֹת Hav-dúth, יַלְדוֹת Yal-dúth. So also נִגְדָה , and נִגְדָה , when receiving any asyllabic augment; the latter in נִגְדָה Neg-dá only, Ps. cxvi. 14; * בִּגְדוֹ Big-dó, 2 Kings ix. 13, &c., to which a few others may be added.

112. Dāgēsh, in its capacity of reduplicating certain letters, is sometimes found at the beginning of words; as, מַזְזֵה pronounced Maz-zé, לְמֹשֶׁה Mō-shel Lē-mór, in which case it is purely euphonic. So also in מִיקְדָּשׁ Mik-kě-dášh, for מִיקְדָּשׁ Mik-dášh, Exod. xv. 17; וַאֲכֶרֶה Vá-ek-kéré-hā, for וַאֲכֶרֶה , &c.

113. And, on the contrary, there are a few instances, particularly in verbs having one of the liquids either for the second, or the two last radicals, in which every letter is written at length; as, צִלְלוֹ Tsil-ló, Job xl. 21; חֹנְנֵי Khon-né-nā, Ps. ix. 14; not צִלְלוֹ or

* Which, however. Ib. ver. 18, has Dāgēsh, חֹנְנֵה .

הַפְּנִי : and others in which it is omitted, contrary to analogy ; as, שְׁלָחָהּ, for שְׁלַחָהּ she sent ; הַלְּלוּ, for הַלְלוּ praise ye ; הַקְּבֹם, for הַקְּבֹם, Exod. v. 14, &c.

114. The following anomalies occur in the vowels, occasionally, when coming in contact with Dāgēsh either EXPRESSED, OR IMPLIED, &c. The vowel (-) coming before a guttural letter, and containing an implied Dāgēsh (Art. 109.) is, for the sake of euphony, often changed into (·) ; as, אָחַד (masc.) and אַחַת (fem.) one ; הַהָרִים for הַהָרִים, or, more commonly, הַהָרִים mountains ; לְהַבֹּת לְהַבֹּת flames ; גְּחָלִים embers ; בְּחָהּ a leader ; הַעָרִים cities ; יִתְנַחֵם he repented himself ; הִתְנַחֵלִי ye become possessed ; הִתְהַרְרִי they became purified ; הֲאֵנִי is it I? &c. In some instances, (-) coming before Dāgēsh forte, is changed into (·) Khīrik ; as, בְּתוֹ his daughter, from בַּת (rather from בְּנַת ; Arab. ^{بنت}), Gen. xxix. 6 ; מְרִגִּים thorns, from מוֹרֵג, 2 Sam. xxiv. 22. In the same manner, תַּבַּת a wine-press ; חֵת consternation ; מֶדָּ measure ; מִסְבָּ circuitous ; מַסַּ tribute ; קַף door-post ; פַּת morsel ; and צַד the side ; change (-) into (·) upon receiving any asyllabic augment. The same takes place with the verb בִּיתַת dying, when found in the conjugation Hiphhīl ; as, הִמַּתָּם ye put to death, for הִמַּתָּם, Numb. xvii. 6, &c. The same is also found to prevail in the following verbs with syllabic augments ; viz. יִלְדְּתִיךָ, for יִלְדְּתִיךָ I have begotten thee, Ps. ii. 7, &c. ; יִרְשְׁתָּם, for יִרְשְׁתָּם ye shall possess, Deut. xi. 8, &c. These all, however, may be considered as arising either for the sake of euphony, out of the etymology, or else from the mere mistakes of the copyists.

LECTURE IV.

ON THE GENERAL USE AND SITUATION OF THE ACCENTS.

115. OF the origin and exact power of these accents, very little can now be said with any degree of certainty. Much labour and learning, indeed, have been bestowed on their investigation; but, after all, the conclusions arrived at are beset with so much uncertainty, that some of the best Grammarians both Jewish and Christian have confessed, that they knew but little on the subject.* We must, therefore, be content with the common rules respecting them; and here, with those only which are generally found to interfere with the vowels of the text.

116. These accents (Art. 60.), as affecting the etymology, are said to have two offices; the one Tonic; that is, having the power to moderate the tone of voice in which any portion of the Scripture is to be read: the other Euphonic; that is, when added either for the purpose of giving a kind of secondary accent to words, or of regulating the syllables. Their further use, as affecting the construction of sentences, will be noticed hereafter.

On the Tonic Accent.

117. The Tonic accent may be any one of those found in the table (Art. 59.), which will always be—either expressed, or implied,—on the penultimate or ultimate syllable † of every word. When on the penultimate, the word is said to be מִלְּעִיל Milhel; when on the ultimate, מִלְּרָחַץ Milrah. The following are the general rules for its insertion.

All words, the penultimate vowel of which is imperfect, and has not a consonant immediately following it, will have the Tonic

* See my reply to Dr. Laurence, entitled, "A Vindication of certain Strictures," &c. Cambridge, 1822, p. 17, &c.

† That is, if the accent be one of those not placed on the regularly accented syllable, it must be considered as giving emphasis either to the penultimate or ultimate, according to the analogy of the word. (Art. 61.)

accent on that syllable. Of this kind are all duals, and segolate nouns; nouns having the feminine affix תְּ (thy) attached to dual or plural forms; and all nouns having terminations peculiar to the segolate forms: as, יָדַיִם both hands, Gen. xxvii. 22; חַיִּיךָ hunting; כֶּסֶף silver; עֵינַיִךְ thy eyes (fem.), Cant. i. 15; מְרֵאִיךָ thy appearances, Ib. ii. 14; בִּצְלוֹת a rose; מְהַלְבֵּרֶת perfumed with incense, Ib. iii. 6, &c.

The reason is obvious; the penultimate syllable is in all these cases incomplete; the addition of the accent is, therefore, necessary for the purposes of syllabication (Art. 33. 43.).

Segolate nouns, having nevertheless the penultimate vowel perfect, will, on account of their peculiar character, retain the accent on that syllable: as, סְתֵר concealment; מוֹת (for מוֹתֵת) death; פְּהוּ (for פְּהוּוֹ) emptiness (See Art. 43. note). Also proper names ending in הוּ: as, זְדוּקְיָהוּ Zedekiah.

2. Nouns receiving a Syllabic pronominal affix, and, at the same time, a vowel of union (Art. 123. 1.), or, having likewise a paragogic וְ Nun, will have the accent on the penultimate of the word so formed: (The pronominal affixes usually termed grave, i. e. כֶּם, כֵּן, הֵן, הֵם, are excepted) e. g. שֹׁפְטֵינִי Judge me, Psalm xliii. 1; נַפְשֵׁנוּ our soul; עֵלְהוּ its leaf, Ps. i. 3; תִּתְחַדְּדֵהוּ thou rejoicest him, Ps. xxi. 7; יַחְשְׁבֵהָ he imputes it, Gen. xv. 6; פְּנֵימוֹ his face, Ps. xi. 7; כַּנְּפֵיךָ thy wings; Ps. xvii. 8; אוֹרִיבֵךָ I rebuke thee; Ps. l. 8; תִּקְרָאֵנִי I have called thee, Ps. cxix. 146; יִרְדּוּ they praise thee, Ps. lxxvii. 6; תִּהְיֶה כֶּנֶף it (the wind) dispelleth it, Ps. i. 4; With the paragogic וְ also of plural verbs: יִשְׁחַרְכּוּנִי they seek me early, Prov. i. 28; יִשְׁרְתּוּנִי they serve thee, Isa. lx. 7; יִלְבְּדוּ they take him, Prov. v. 22.

Verbs terminating (i. e. in the process of conjugation) in the pronominal syllables תְּ, הֵי, נִי, and נָה; as תְּחַפְּזֵת * thou art willing, Ps. xl. 7; בִּשְׂרָתִי I have announced (good tidings), Ib. v. 10; שֶׁחָרְבּוּ we have dealt falsely, Ps. xlv. 18; תִּבְאִינָה they (fem.) shall come, Ps. xlv. 16.

* These cases ought, regularly, to be pointed, דְּחַפְּזֵת, i. e. with (◌) with the second syllable. The Jews, however, seem to have pointed the verbs with (◌), for the purpose of distinguishing them from nouns of the same form; as, שֶׁחָרְבּוּ, instead of שֶׁחָרְבּוּ, and by this means an anomaly has been introduced into the syllabication.

4. Asyllabic affirmatives are subject to the same rule, in the conjugation Hiphhîl: as, הוֹרִי־לִי hope thou (fem.), Ps. xliii. 5; הוֹשִׁיעַהּ it (fem.) brought salvation, Ps. xlv. 4. Also in the surd and concave verbs: as, קִבְּרוּ surround ye, Ps. xlvi. 13; מָטוּ they move, Ps. xlv. 7; likewise when these affixes are joined to the third person singular, and plural, of the preterites of verbs: as, פָּקַדְנִי he visited me; שָׁמַתְנִי it (fem.) hath overwhelmed me, Ps. lxix. 3; אָהַבְתְּךָ she hath loved thee, Ruth iv. 15; סָבְבוּנִי they surrounded me, Ps. xviii. 6.*

5. When the paragogic ה is added to nouns, pronouns, or particles, it exercises no influence on the accent, for the most part. In such cases, therefore, the accent will be in the penultima: as, אֶפְרַתָּה Ephratah, Gen. xxxv. 16, &c.

118. The Tonic accent will have its place on the last syllable of words, in all the remaining cases; which are then termed מִלְרַע Milrah, and are as follows:—

1. All words ending with a consonant preceded by a perfect vowel by analogy: as, גָּדֹל great; מְאֹר luminary; בָּנִים sons; בָּנוֹת daughters. The same is the case when any of the אִתְּנִי letters are thus situated, being then considered as consonants: as, שָׁנָה a year; מַצֵּבָה a pillar; and even ה, preceded by (ו), as, יְהִי־הוּ he is, &c.

2. All words ending in one of the grave affixes: as, דַּמְמַם your blood; אֲבֵיהֶם their father; יִהְיֶינָם ye shall be, Gen. iii. 5.

3. Verbs having no affixed pronoun: as, לָקַח he took; יִקְרָא he is called.

4. Verbs taking the asyllabic affirmatives הִ, וִ, and יִ: as, שָׁמְטָהּ it is quiet; פָּקַדְוּ they visited; סִתְּנִי hide thyself (fem.); and finally, all words not comprehended in any of the preceding rules (i. e. Art. 117.).

On certain Anomalies as to the situation of the Tonic Accent, and on the changes effected by it in the vowels and consonants of words.

119. These generally take place, when the illative particle וְ is

* These particulars are illustrated by tables, Art. 207. 2., &c.

† Usually termed Vav conversivum, but which corresponds to the Arabic is prefixed to verbs; in which case, 1st, the Tonic accent, proper for the penultimate vowel in the past tense (Art. 117. 3.), will be removed to the ultimate: and, 2dly, vice versa, the accent proper for the ultimate in the present (Art. 118. 1.), will be removed to the penultimate: as, 1st, וְהִדְשֵׁתִי so I will consecrate (for וְהִדְשֵׁתִי), Exod. xxix. 44; וְנִאֲסַפְתָּ so thou shalt be gathered (for וְנִאֲסַפְתָּ), Numb. xxvii. 18; וְהִבְדִּילָהּ so it shall divide; וְהִבִּאתָ thus thou shalt bring, Exod. xxvi. 33; וְרָבָה so she shall increase, Isa. vi. 12; וְשָׂמַתָּ therefore thou shalt place, Lev. xxiv. 6; וְשָׁבָה so she shall return, Lev. xxii. 13; וְשָׂמוּ thus they shall place, Numb. vi. 27; וַיָּבֹאָה so thou shalt enter, Gen. vi. 18.

2. This rule, however, is often disregarded: as, וְלָקַחְנוּ so we took, Gen. xxxiv. 17; וְהִלְכְנוּ and we will depart: particularly in verbs having a quiescent letter for the third radical; as, וַיִּירָאָה and thou shalt fear, Lev. xix. 32; וַיְגַלֵּתִי and I will reveal, 1 Sam. xx. 12; וַיֵּלֶךְ and thou shalt go into captivity, Ezek. xii. 3. With some having the medial radical letter quiescent: as, וְנִסְתָּה and thou shalt flee, 2 Kings ix. 3.

3. In the next place, the Tonic accent will be removed from the ultimate to the penultimate syllable of the present tense, when the illative particle ו is prefixed, and when the form of the verb will allow of the change: e. g. וַיִּפְקֹד (for וַיִּפְקֹד) so he is visited. But in the third person plural masc. it will keep its place: as, וַיִּפְקְדוּ (from וַיִּפְקְדוּ). The same holds good also in the form וַיִּפְקֹד: as, וַיִּפְקֹד so he visits.

Corollary. Hence it will follow, that, the Accent being removed from the last syllable, the ultimate vowel will necessarily become imperfect (Art. 33.): as, וַיִּנְגַח and he was struck (for וַיִּנְגַח); וַיֹּאמֶר (for וַיֹּאמֶר) and he said; וַיָּמָת and he died (for וַיָּמָת or וַיָּמָת); and so of others, which is termed apocope. (See No. 9 below.)

4. In the conjugation termed Hiphhil,—as it will be seen hereafter,—the terminating vowel is either (') or (·). Whenever, therefore, the Accent is drawn back, by this or any other rule, the imperfect vowel will be (·) not (·) or (·): as, וַיִּרָם so he raised (from וַיִּרָם, or וַיִּרָם). So וַיִּלְוֶן so he lodged (for וַיִּלְוֶן, or וַיִּלְוֶן), Gen. xxviii. 11, Josh. viii. 9; וַיִּנַּח so he rested (for וַיִּנַּח, or וַיִּנַּח), Exod. x. 14, where (·) is taken on account of the guttural letter following. (Art. 45.)

In one instance, however, we have וַתִּרְצַץ (for וַתִּרְצַץ , root רצץ) and she broke, Judg. ix. 53. An error, perhaps, of the copyists.

5. When, however, the last letter of the root happens to be one of the אָהוּי letters in a state of quiescence, the perfect vowel will occasionally remain: as, וַיָּבֵא and he brings, Gen. iv. 3.

6. In many cases, also, this removal of the Accent is altogether neglected: as, וַיֹּשֶׁב so I sit, 1 Kings viii. 20, &c.

7. In consequence, moreover, of this removal of the Accent, the terminating vowel of the present tense of verbs is changed (No. 3. above), and entirely rejected, together with the consonant following when that is quiescent: e. g. יִגְלֶה for יִגְלֶה (Art. 74.); and, by Art. 108., the former will be יִגְלֶה . This is also termed Apocope.

8. Again, the Accent is occasionally removed from the ultimate to the penultimate syllable, both in the present tense, and in the imperatives, of verbs, for the purpose of strongly expressing prohibition, forbearance, exhortation, wishing, or the like; as, אַל־תִּשָּׁב turn not away, 1 Kings ii. 20 (for תִּשָּׁב); אַל־תִּנְכַּח chastise not, Prov. ix. 8 (for תִּנְכַּח); אַל־תִּוְסַף add not, Prov. xxx. 6 (for תִּוְסַף , where the vowel of the medial radical is also rejected though not followed by a quiescent ה); אַרְיִנֶה I will water thee (for אַרְיִנֶה , the root being ריו , usually רוה , in which case the final radical letter generally returns. In this case the ׳ is doubled because the verb is in the conjugation Pihél). So הִשְׁמֵר observe (for הִשְׁמֵר ; הִבֵּה give, &c. Gen. xi. 3, 4 (for הִבֵּה Gen. xxix. 21.)

9. So in verbs having the third radical letter a quiescent ה : as, יִרְדֵּה let him rule (for יִרְדֵּה); יִמַּח let him be blotted out (for יִמַּח), Ps. cix. 13; יִפְתֵּה declare he foolish (for יִפְתֵּה)* Gen. ix. 27; יִהְיֶה let it be (for יִהְיֶה), Gen. i. 3; אַל־תִּשְׁתֵּה drink not (for תִּשְׁתֵּה), Lev. x. 9; אַל־יִרְאֶה let it not be seen (for יִרְאֶה), Exod. xxxiv. 3; אַל־תִּרְפַּח relax not, (for תִּרְפַּח ; where the verb takes the form of a segolate noun, see Art. 108.); אַל־תִּהְיֶה be not. (for תִּהְיֶה); and so of others. This is termed Apocope. But it may here be remarked, as before, that the common form of the verb, and usual position of the accent, are often adopted: as, אַל־יִרְאֶה lest I should see, Gen. xxi. 16; אַל־יִרְאֶה lest he should see, Job iii. 9.

* See my Hebrew Lexicon under פָּתַח conj. Hiph.

10. The following are imperatives thus subject to Apocope: גַּל reveal thou (for גַּלֶּה in Pihél); הִקֵּה smite thou (for הִקֵּה Amos ix. 1; הִרְבֵּה multiply thou (for הִרְבֵּה, in Hiphhíl, where the form assumed is that of a segolate noun; the first vowel becoming (·), in order to accommodate itself to the sound of the second, Art. 108.), Ps. li. 4. So הִעֲלֵה* cause thou to ascend (for הִעֲלֵה Exod. xxxiii. 12; הִתְחַלֵּל feign thyself (to be) sick (for הִתְחַלֵּה), 2 Sam. xiii. 5.

11. It frequently happens in verbs ending with a radical ח (for ך), and receiving some asyllabic augment, that, not only is the accent drawn back, as in the cases above mentioned (No. 8), but the original radical letter also reappears: as, חֲסַתְּהָ it (fem.) hath trusted (for חֲסַתְּהָ according to the general paradigma, from the root חָסַתְּ for חָסַי), Ps. lvii. 2. So יִשְׁלִיֵּי they are tranquil (for יִשְׁלֵי, root שָׁלַח or שָׁלַי, whence regularly יִשְׁלִיֵּי), Ps. cxxii. 6, &c.; יִיאָרְוּ let them come (for יִיאָרְוּ, root אָרַח, or אָרַי), Ps. lxviii. 32; הִתְחַיֵּי bring ye (for הִתְחַיֵּי, Art. 73.), Jer. xii. 9.

12. In a few instances, moreover, this drawing back of the Accent also takes place in nouns and particles: as, רַבְּתֵי עַם numerous art thou (in) people (for רַבְּתֵי). So רַבְּתֵי בְּגוֹיִם great art thou among the nations; שָׂרָתִי בְּמַדְיָנוֹת a princess art thou among the provinces, Lam. i. 1. In like manner we have לָמָּה, לָמָּה, or לָמָּה why? (for לָמָּה, לָמָּה, or לָמָּה), where, according to Schröderus,—“subest adfectus exprobrantis, vel conquerentis, vel alius similis.” To these he adds, אֲנִי I (for אֲנִי), Ezek. xvii. 22.†

120. Again, the Accent will be withdrawn from the ultimate to the penultimate syllable, in order to avoid the concurrence of two Tonic accents, which would happen when the following word is a monosyllable with an Accent, or a dissyllable with an Accent on the penultima. But here, the penultimate vowel of the former of such two words, will remain perfect: as, פָּתַח צֶיֶר he opened the rock (for פָּתַח), Ps. cv. 41; אֶלְהֵי לִי I will betake me, Cant. iv. 6;

* These Imperatives are probably nothing more than primitive abstract nouns, termed Segolates, enounced with some energy.

† The principles which regulate this retraction of the accent, and the consequent apocope, will be considered in the Syntax.

זֹאת הֲהִיְתָה has this come to pass? (for הִיְתָה) Joel i. 2 ; אִחֹתִי הִיא she (is) my sister, Gen. xx. 2 ; וְנָתַן לְךָ and he will give thee, Deut. xix. 8 ; יִגְלֵ מְאֹד he will exult exceedingly, Ps. xxi. 2.

2. Verbs, receiving any asyllabic augment, and on that account rejecting any of their primitive vowels, will, upon the removal of the accent, by the above-mentioned rule, restore such rejected vowel: as, בּוֹ תִהְיֶה לְךָ * ye shall delude him (for תִּהְיֶה לְךָ), Job. xiii. 9 ; וְנָשְׂבוּ הֵנָּה come hither (for נָשְׂבוּ), Josh. iii. 9 ; וְנָשְׂבוּ הֵנָּה ye will love vanity (for נָשְׂבוּ), Ps. iv. 3 ; בּוֹ חָסְרוּ they trusted in him (for חָסְרוּ regularly, but חָסְרוּ according to the tables for these verbs).

3. Should, however, this drawing back of the Accent, with the consequent change of the ultimate vowel, tend to destroy or obscure the original form and signification of the word, no such change will take place: as, לֵב הַמְעֵלְמוֹת the hidden things of the heart (not לֵב הַמְעֵלְמֹת] with Kāméts Khátúph) ; עָבַר יָם passing over the sea (not עָבֵר).

The Accent will—for the mere sake of euphony—frequently fall on the penultimate instead of the ultimate syllable, in words which conclude a sentence, or a member of a sentence. These accents are, for the most part, Sillúk, Athnák; and, in the higher style, Mercá with Mahpák (Art. 59.).

5. In many of these cases, the removal of the accent will occasion no change whatever in the vowels: as, נוֹשְׁבָה (for נוֹשְׁבָה) inhabited, Jer. vi. 8 ; עָרֵי (for עָרֵי) make bare, Ps. cxxxvii. 7 ; פָּלְאוּ (for פָּלְאוּ) they are consumed, Ps. xxxvii. 20, &c.

6. But, in those persons of the verb which are formed by some asyllabic augment, or have the paragogic ה, and in which the second vowel of the root has been rejected; the Accent, taking that syllable, will restore such vowel: as, תִּקְרָבָה (for תִּקְרָבָה from the root קָרַב she hath approached, Zeph. iii. 2 ; יָכֵלוּ (for יָכֵלוּ, root יָכַל) they were able, 2 Kings iii. 26 ; תִּשְׁמְרוּ (for תִּשְׁמְרוּ, root, i. e. ground-form for the Pres., שָׁמַר ye shall keep, Exod. xxxi. 13. So אֵלְכָה (from אָלַךְ) I will walk, Gen. xxx. 26 ; סִפְּרֵי (from סִפַּר) recount ye, Joel i. 3 ; לָבִי (for לָבִי, from לָבֵן go thou, fem., &c.

* The Dagesh found here in the ל has, perhaps, been introduced for the sake of euphony only, (Art. 112.).

7. When the original final vowel is (-), it will generally become (ַ), when thus accompanying the accent: as, הִלְקָה she departed (from הִלַּקְהָ), Is. xlv. 2. So נִלְקָה (from נִלְקָהָ) it was taken, 1 Sam. iv. 17; וַאֲנִישָׁנָה (from וַאֲנִישָׁנָהָ), and I sleep, Ps. iii. 6: בְּדַעַר (from בְּדַעַרָה) let us know, Is. v. 19; צִעֲרֵי (from צִעֲרֵיָהּ) cry thou (fem.), Jer. xxii. 20; $\text{הִמָּחֵה$ (from הִמָּחֵהָ), Is. xxix. 9.

8. But, when a paragogic ו follows the asyllabic augment ה, or ה־, the Accent usually retains its proper situation, while the second vowel of the root is restored, as in the last article: as, יִלְקְטוּן (from יִלְקְטוּןֹהוּ) they will collect; יִבְהֲלֶינָהּ (from יִבְהֲלֶינָהֹּהוּ) they will be confounded; יִבְנָעוּן (from יִבְנָעוּןֹהוּ) they will expire, Ps. civ. 28, 29.*

121. Primitive segolate nouns of the form פִּקְוֹד, derived from roots having for the third radical letter a quiescent ה, will, upon taking the pause-accent in the penultimate, restore the original vowel to the first radical: as, חֶצֶי (for חֶצֶיָהּ , from the primitive form חֶצֶיָהָ) the half, 1 Kings x. 7; מִרְיָהּ (for מִרְיָהָ from מִרְיָהָ) rebellion, Ezek. ii. 8; יְפֵי (for יְפֵיָהּ , from יְפֵיָהָ) beauty, Is. iii. 24.

122. Apocopated present tenses of verbs having ה־ in the place of the third radical letter ה, will take (ו) for the vowel of the personal preformative, when so circumstanced as to receive the accent proper for the pause on that syllable: as, נִיְהִי (for נִיְהִיָהּ from נִיְהִיָהָ), Psalm xxxiii. 9: וַיְהִי and she was, Lam. iii. 37. So יִחְיֶה he shall live (for יִחְיֶהָ), Is. xxxviii. 21.

123. When any word, having the affixed pronoun ה, happens to be the last word of a sentence, &c., so that the accent proper for the pause will fall upon its penultimate vowel; two methods have been invented, for the purpose of avoiding any disagreeable concurrence which may happen in the vowels.

1. Instead of (:) which should precede this pronoun,—as will be seen hereafter,—(ו) is introduced as a vowel of union; as, וְדְבָרְךָ (for וְדְבָרְךָֹהוּ) thy word, Gen. xlvii. 30; וְנַחֲלֶיךָ (for וְנַחֲלֶיךָֹהוּ) thy inheritance, Ps. ii. 8; וְיִשְׁעֶךָ (for וְיִשְׁעֶךָֹהוּ) thy salvation, Ps. li. 14; וְשִׁמְךָ (for וְשִׁמְךָֹהוּ) thy name, Ps. cxxxviii. 2, &c.

2. The vowel accompanying this pronoun, is occasionally transposed; as, וְהַשְׁמִדְךָ (for וְהַשְׁמִדְךָֹהוּ) thy destruction, Deut.

* The influence and use of this adjunct (ו) will be considered in the Syntax.

xxviii. 24; פִּאֲרָהָ (for פִּאֲרָהָ) he hath adorned thee, Isaiah lv. 5; פִּצְוָהָ (for פִּצְוָהָ) he hath commanded thee, 1 Sam. xiii. 13.

3. The particles אַתְּ, עָם, בְּ, and לְ, having הָ affixed to them, and receiving a pause-accent, are always subject to this rule: אַתְּהָ thee, Deut. xxviii. 48; אַתְּהָ with thee, Gen. viii. 17; עָמְהָ with thee, Gen. xxix. 25; בְּהָ in thee, Ps. ix. 3; לְהָ to, for, or of, thee, Exod. xxxii. 34, &c., for אַתְּהָ, אַתְּהָ, עָמְהָ, בְּהָ, לְהָ, &c.

4. The pronoun הָ is also subject to this rule, even when not in the situation for receiving a pause-accent: as, עֲנָהָ he answered thee, Jer. xxiii. 37; for עֲנָהָ.

5. When a pause-accent falls on an ultimate, or penultimate (·) Páthakh, or, on a penultimate (··) Segol, in segolate forms, such vowel is, for the most part, changed into (·) Kāméts: as, עָמַדְהָ, for עָמַדְהָ, he stood; יָשַׁבְהָ, for יָשַׁבְהָ, he sat, Ps. i. 1, &c.; לַיְלֵהָ, for לַיְלֵהָ, night, Gen. i. 5; הָרֶבֶהְהָ, for הָרֶבֶהְהָ, a sword, Josh. viii. 24; עֹמְדַתְהָ, for עֹמְדַתְהָ, standing, Eccl. i. 4.

6. There are, however, certain exceptions; as, נִי־צָחַק * he laughed, Gen. xvii. 17; עֵרְהָ prey, Ib. xlix. 27; יִצְתְּהָ they shall be set on fire, Is. xxxiii. 12; דִּבַּרְתְּהָ thou hast spoken, Ib. xxxix. 8; בְּטַחְהָ security, Prov. i. 33; אִמְנַתְהָ a nurse, Ruth iv. 16. But these may be errors of the copyists.

7. The pause-accent will sometimes change a terminating (··) into (·) as, הֵלֵךְהָ, for הֵלֵךְהָ, he shall go, Job xxvii. 21; הָשִׁיבְהָ return, restore, for הָשִׁיבְהָ Is. xlii. 22; אֶל־הַלַּיְלָה (for הַלַּיְלָה) tarry not all night, Jud. xix. 20.

124. Makkáph, following a terminating perfect and mutable vowel which precedes a consonant, will change the vowel into its corresponding imperfect one: as, זְכַרְנָה (for זְכַרְנָה remember now; כָּל־מְלָכִים (for כָּל־מְלָכִים) all kings, אֶת־הָעָם (for הָעָם) the people, &c.

2. But, if such final vowel be immutable, no change can take place: as, לְאִישׁ־אַחֵר to, or for, another man, Jer. iii. 1; אוֹת־הַבְּרִית the sign of the covenant, Gen. ix. 12. The reason of this is, the addition of Makkáph deprives the word, to which it is attached, of its tonic accent; and this makes it necessary that the preceding vowel be imperfect, when that is possible (Artt. 33. 65.).

* In some editions, however, יִצְחַק.

On the Use and Situation of the Euphonic Accent.

125. It has already been remarked, that the Euphonic accent, Métheq, may be considered as supplying a secondary accentuation (Artt. 64. 65.), with reference to the accent following it. Monosyllables, therefore, can have no Euphonic accent, unless, indeed, they happen to precede Makkáph; but, even in that case, they must be considered as constituting an integral part of a compound word, according to rules presently to be laid down. Dissyllables may receive an Euphonic accent; but, in this case, a final (:) Shěvá must intervene: as, יְהִי־הוּ he shall be, &c.

Rules for the Insertion of the Euphonic Accent.

126. The third syllable (not ending with a consonant) of any word, reckoning backwards, inclusively, from the tonic accent, will have the Euphonic accent Métheq; as אֶחָד the one, Gen. ii. 11; הַחֹלֵהּ which proceedeth, Ib. v. 14; אֲנִי־שָׂפָה I shall possess it, Ib. xv. 8; מִמָּאֲבֵינֵנוּ from our father, Ib. xix. 32; לְשׁוֹנֵיהֶם according to their tongues, Ib. x. 20; וּמִמּוֹלַדְתֶּיהָ and from thy kindred, Ib. xii. 1.

127. But, if this third syllable end in a consonant, the Euphonic accent will be with the fourth: as, וּמִיָּהֶלְבֵּהֶן and of their fat, Gen. iv. 4; וְאִנִּיתִּי and I remain, 1 Kings xix. 10 (where י, being doubled by Dāgēsh, concludes the syllable; as, וְאִנִּיתִּי).

2. Perfect vowels preceding Shěvá, and having no tonic accent, will, if occupying the third place from any tonic accent, (reckoning the Shěvá), receive an euphonic one: as, הִיאִּי it was, Gen. i. 2; תְּבִלִּי thou (fem.) shalt bring forth, Ib. iii. 16; תִּיבִי Nineveh, Ib. x. 11; הַיָּלֵדוֹת generations, Ib. ii. 4; יִשְׁבֹּץ he shall bruise thee, Ib. iii. 15.

3. In many instances, however, the Euphonic accent is omitted; nor is it necessary it should ever be added, if we except one case, viz. when the figure of (τ) Kāmets precedes Shěvá; for then, this vowel will be either ā, or o, just as the accent is added or not: as, חֵכְמָה she was wise; or, חֵכְמָה wisdom (Art. 55.). In every other case, no difficulty can arise, whether the accent is added or not.

4. In some cases, moreover, the Euphonic accent seems to mark the substitution of an imperfect, for a perfect, vowel: as, גְּבֻלָּהּ (for גְּבוּלָּהּ) thy border, Exod. xxiii. 31; וַיִּירָאוּ (for וַיִּירְאוּ) and they shall fear, Mic. vii. 17; where it is necessary for the completion of the syllable (Art. 33.) It is, nevertheless, frequently omitted, and must, in such cases, be supplied by the reader, particularly before an implied Dāgēsh (Art. 109), &c.

5. The letter י, with Shūrék, prefixed to a word, and situated as above, with respect to the tonic accent, will sometimes be found with the Euphonic accent, and be followed by one of the substitutes of Shěvá, where (:) would be more regular: as, וַיִּשְׁבֶּה and lead thou captive, Jud. v. 12; וַתִּבְקְשֵׁי and be thou sought, Ezek. xxvi. 21.

128. Words, consisting of more than two syllables, the first of which is terminated by Dāgēsh, will receive the Euphonic accent on that syllable: as, וַיִּשְׁמְעוּ and they heard, Gen. iii. 8; מָחָר on the morrow, Ib. xix. 34; הַמַּאֲבָלָה the knife, Ib. xxii. 6.*

2. This will also be found even when the Dāgēsh is omitted: as, וַיִּשְׁוֹרוּ and he felt him, Ib. xxvii. 22; הַמְכַפֶּה which covereth, Exod. xxix. 13, &c. In all these cases, Shěvá is initial; and, consequently, any one of the letters בְּגִדֵּפֶת, which may happen to follow, will retain its aspiration: as, הַמְהַעֲבִים the abhorrrers, Mic. iii. 9. Hence הַלְלִי is to be pronounced Hallélú, not Hallú. Something of the same kind is observable in the words גְּבֻלָּהּ, and וַיִּירָאוּ, just cited (Art. 127. 4.).

129. When any one of the Substitutes of Shěvá happens to be preceded by a vowel, that vowel will receive the Euphonic accent: as, נַעֲשֵׂה let us make, Gen. i. 26; נְאֻמָּן faithful, Numb. xii. 7; אֹהֶלֶה his tent, Gen. xiii. 3; הָאֲדָמָה the ground, Ib. i. 25; צֹעֲקִים crying out, (pl.), Ib. iv. 10; וַאֲשַׁלְּחֶךָ and I would have dismissed thee, Ib. xxxi. 27. This determines that such Substitute is initial.

2. When the substitute of Shěvá, is resolved into its homogeneous imperfect vowel (Art. 106. 2.), the Euphonic accent will still remain: as, נַעֲלֶה thy sandal, Isa. xx. 2: וַיִּירָדוּ and they shall fear, Hos. xi. 10.

130. When any imperfect vowel, at the beginning of a word,

* The Student must not be surprised if he finds the different editions of the Bible vary on these points. הַמַּאֲבָלָה, is probably the preferable accentuation.

precedes a (:) Shévá not accompanied by Dāgēsh forte; it will, for the most part, have the Euphonic accent; as, מְהַבְרִיתוּ its coupling, Exod. xxxix. 20; $\text{הִשְׁתַּחֲוּוּ$ they bowed themselves down, Jer. viii. 2; יִתְפָּרוּקוּ they broke off, Exod. xxxii. 3; מְהִינְיָוִים becoming Jews, Esth. viii. 17. Hence we have יִהְיֶה , תִּהְיֶה , יִהְיֶה , תִּהְיֶה , &c., from the verbs הָיָה become, and חָיָה live. But, in these cases, the accents do not interfere with the syllabication. (See Art. 43.)

131. On some occasions, other accents are found to occupy the situation of Métheg. These are ־ Mūnákḥ, ֿ Kadmá, ֿ Mercá: as, וְהָעֵצִים and the pieces of wood, Gen. xxii. 7; וְאַהֲרֹן and Aaron, Exod. vii. 7; וְהַכֹּהֵן and the priest, Levit. vii. 8; לְמַלְכִּיָּאל of Malchiel, Numb. xxvi. 45. In these cases we have Mūnákḥ or Kadmá in the place of Métheg, followed by Zákēph Kātón. In וַיֵּלְכוּ so they proceed, Numb. xxii. 7, Kadmá is followed by Géresh; and, Ib. xxxii. 39, we have it again, coupled with Métheg, in some editions: as, וַיֵּלְכוּ , which, with many similar examples, is perhaps to be ascribed to the carelessness, hurry, or whims, of the copyists.

2. In the following examples, we have Mercá ֿ in the place of Métheg: as, כִּכְלָבִי like the stars,* Exod. xxxii. 13; וַיִּטְמְנֵהוּ so he hides him, Exod. ii. 12.† In these cases Mercá is found with Tiphkhá for its tonic accent.

3. In a few instances Yérakh ֿ , or Yéthiv ֿ , is found in the place of Métheg; as, מִמַּעֲצוֹתֵיהֶם from their counsels, Ps. v. 11. שֶׁאֲהַבָּהּ whom it (fem.) loves, Cant. i. 7. In the last case, however, שֶׁ stands for אֲשֶׁר , and may therefore take any tonic accent. In numerous cases,—as the student will find,—many of these rules are never applied; and, in many others,—as already remarked,—the printed copies of the Hebrew Bible differ, as do also the MSS. In many, too, neither the syllabication, nor the sense of the passage, is affected by these accents, whence it should seem probable, that they have been added rather for the purpose of regulating the tone of voice in reading or chanting the text.

On the Use and Position of МАККАФ .

132. Learned men are not agreed, whether this mark is, or is not, to be ranked among the Accents. Some have argued that it ought, because it is always found to supply the place of an accent. Others, again, that it ought not; because it is universally found to deprive the word, to which it is attached, of its tone-accent. That it is equivalent, in effect, to an accent, I think, both parties allow: and, if I mistake not, its depriving the word, to which it has been attached, of its tone-accent, seems to make for the hypothesis, that it ought to be considered as performing the functions of such accent. It seems to me, therefore, but a loss of time to argue against its being termed an accent.

Rules for its Use and Insertion.

133. Words immediately connected with each other, either in signification or by grammatical construction, are frequently connected by Makkáph; the former being then deprived of its tone-accent: as, נְאֻמֵי יְהוָה Jehovah's word, Amos ii. 16; טַהֲרֵת לֵב pure of heart, Prov. xxii. 11; וַיִּטֵּשׂ and he pitched (his tent) there; בְּנוֹתָוֹן a little son, 2 Sam. ix. 12; בְּנוֹתָוֹן one son, 1 Sam. xxii. 20; כֹּל־גִּבֹּהַּ every high thing, Job xli. 26; גַּם־לְאִישָׁהּ even to her husband, Gen. iii. 6; כִּי־תִדְבַר עִם־יַעֲקֹב מִטּוֹב לְרָע lest thou speak with Jacob (any thing) from good to bad, Gen. xxxi. 24; וְאֵשֶׁת־קָרָא which he called, Gen. xxvi. 18. So, גַּן־בְּעֵדֶן a garden in Eden, Gen. ii. 8; בָּאֵלֶיךָ come hither, Ib. xix. 9; וַיָּבֹאוּ he came to sojourn, Ib.; וַיְהִי־עֶרֶב and the evening was, Ib. i. 5, &c., to which many others might be added, where two, three, or even four words, are thus connected (see Art. 65.). In all these cases, the last word only in the connexion will have the tone-accent.

2. Since, then, the tone-accent is, in all these cases, taken away; words so connected, ending in a perfect mutable vowel, and followed by a consonant, will generally take the correspondent imperfect one in that syllable: as, כֹּל־גִּבֹּהַּ every high thing, instead of כֹּל־גִּבְהָהּ; בָּאֵלֶיךָ come hither, for בָּאֵלֶיְכֶם; זָכַרְנָא remember, pray, Isa. xxxiii. 3, for זָכַרְנָם; שָׁמְרֵתֶם preserve integrity. Psalm xxxvii. 37, for שָׁמְרֵתֶם (Art. 124.).

3. In the following, and similar cases, the terminating vowel of the preceding word is immutable; as, בָּנוֹת־לוֹט the daughters of Lot, Gen. xix. 36; גִּבְרַת־צֹדֵד great (in) hunting, Gen. x. 9; וַיִּבְּלוּ־אֶתֹו it (the Jordan) shall limit it, Josh. xviii. 23; לִב־דָּוִד David's heart, 2 Sam. xxiv. 10, where לֵב is put for לִבָּב; תַּת־פָּתַח David's heart, 2 Sam. xxiv. 10, where לֵב is put for לִבָּב.

the giving of its (fem.) strength, Gen. iv. 12, הָרָת being put for הָרָתָה. In which cases, the Euphonic accent is often added, notwithstanding the presence of Makkáph.

4. We have, however, Prov. xxii. 15, בְּלִב־נַעַר in the heart of a child. We also have, Gen. xvi. 13, אֶשֶׁם־יְהוָה, and, Ib. 15, אֶשֶׁם־בְּנִי, which, with similar instances, may perhaps be referred to the carelessness of the copyists.*

134. Makkáph is inserted in the following cases:—

1. Particles, which, from their nature, can never have any distinctive † accent, are mostly connected with other words by the mark Makkáph: as, גַּם־לְאִישָׁה even to her husband; בְּתַמ־לִבִּי in the integrity of my heart, Gen. xx. 5, &c.

2. When words are to be construed together, and the tone-accents of which might then concur;—i. e. when the accent of the preceding word is on the last syllable, and the following word is either a monosyllable, or a dissyllable having the accent on the penultimate;—then, in order to avoid this concurrence (Art. 120.), such words are to be connected by Makkáph: as, זֶרְעוֹ־בּוֹ its seed (is) within itself, Gen. i. 11, instead of בּוֹ זֶרְעוֹ. So וַיִּחַבְּקֵהוּ so he embraced him, and kissed him, Ib. xxix. 13, instead of וַיִּנְשָׂתָה לּוֹ, &c.; וַיְהִי־עֶרֶב וַיְהִי־בֹקֶר so evening was, and morning was, Ib. i. 5, instead of וַיְהִי עֶרֶב, &c. The remaining rules, usually given by the grammarians, may all be resolved into one or other of the preceding.

3. In any of these last cases, the Euphonic accent may be appended to the former of such words, according to the rules already laid down (Art. 126, &c.)

* The most complete list of these exceptions is given in the second volume of the Heb. Gram. by Guarin, pp. 320—1, 2.

† That is, are, in signification such, as not to be capable of closing any clause, member, &c., of a sentence. See the last Lecture of this work.

LECTURE V.

ON THE CHANGES WHICH TAKE PLACE IN THE TERMINATIONS OF WORDS, IN CONSEQUENCE OF THE FORMATION OF THE FEMININE FROM THE MASCULINE GENDER, OF THE DUAL OR PLURAL FROM THE SINGULAR NUMBER, AND OF THE STATE OF DEFINITE CONSTRUCTION.

Of the Formation of the Feminine from the Masculine Gender.

135. It should be premised, that, in the Hebrew Language, there are but two genders; viz., the Masculine and the Feminine.

2. The Masculine is generally restricted to nouns being the proper names, or implying the offices of, men: as, דָּוִד David; עֵזָא Uzza; פֶּחָחָה, or פְּחָחָת, a governor; קַהֲלֵת,* a preacher, &c., whatever be their termination.

3. Also to words signifying People, Rivers, Mountains, and Months: as, יִשְׂרָאֵל Israel; יַרְדֵּן Jordan; סִינַי Sinai; נִיסָן Nisán, &c., without reference to their termination.

4. Words ending in any radical letter (not included in No. 5.); also, those ending in ה, preceded by (ו), and others in י, ם, or ן, servile, will also be of the masculine gender: as, דְּבַר a word; מְמִשָּׁל dominion; שָׂדֵה a plain, or field; מְרֵאָה vision; עֵבְרִי a Hebrew; פְּדוּיִם redemption; שְׁלֵחַן a table; קֶרְבָּן an offering.†

* See my Lexicon under this word (p. 525.).

† The exceptions are: אֶבֶן a stone; כַּדָּיִם a bowl; אֲרֵפֶסֶת a viper; אֲשִׁיר or אֲשִׁירָה a step, pace; בְּאֵר a well; גֶּזֶן a corn-floor; חֶרֶב a sword; יָתֵד a stake, post; כֵּל a vessel so called: קוֹס a full cup; כֶּתֶר a talent; מִצְחָה a frying-pan; נֵמָה light; גַּעַל a sandal; קֶלֶח flour; עָב a cloud; עֵשֶׂת a star so called; מַט a bed; מֶסֶת a morsel; צָפוֹן the north; טָאוֹן a quail; תְּהוֹמָה the world; תְּחָוִיר an ass; לֶחֶם bread; מָגֶן a shield; עֶרֶב the evening, which are all feminine. But, as the Hebrew language is not regulated in this respect, as the Greek and Latin are, too much stress ought not to be laid on these considerations. (See Art. 215, et. seq.)

5. Feminine nouns are, all proper names of women, as well as words designating their offices; the names of regions, or cities; and nouns signifying the parts and double members of the body, whatever be their terminating letters; e. g. רָחֵל Rākhél; מִיכָל Mikál; שְׁגָל a consort; מוֹאֵב Mōáb; אֶדוֹם Edóm; חֶבְרוֹן Khebrón; יְרוּשָׁלַיִם Yērūshāláim; בֶּטֶן the belly; אָזֶן the ear, &c. This distinction, therefore, arises from the signification, not from the form of the word; cities and regions being considered perhaps as mothers, and so of others.*

6. Nouns ending in הַ, or ת,† servile, are also of the feminine gender: as, בּוֹקֶדֶת, or פּוֹקֶדֶת a female visitor; בְּהֵמָה a beast; מַמְלָכֶת, or מְלָכוֹת a kingdom. So שְׁנָא for שָׁנָה sleep, &c.

7. Many nouns are occasionally found in both genders; which are, therefore, termed common. These generally are, 1, The names of animals, flocks, birds: 2. Segolate nouns not restricted to the names or offices of men: 3. Others designating parts of the human body: 4. Participial nouns of the form פִּקֵּד; and, 5, The decimal numerals from twenty to one hundred, inclusive: e. g. 1, גַּמְלָה a camel; דָּב a bear; צֹאֵן, and שֹׁהַת a flock of sheep; צִפּוֹר a bird: 2, אֶרֶץ a road; רוּחַ breath: 3, יָד a hand; עֵין an eye; זְרוּעַ an arm; נַפְשׁ the soul: 4, חֲצֵר an enclosure: 5, עֶשְׂרִים twenty; שְׁלֹשִׁים thirty, &c. To these several others of different forms might be added: as,

* The exceptions are, פֶּה the mouth; צַוְעַר the neck; עֲרֵךְ the back; שֵׁר, or שֵׁרֶת, the navel; עַפְעָפִים the eyelids; עֵקֶב the heel; דְּמוּת likeness; שָׂדֵדָה a blasted field; מִנְחָה a meat-offering; מוֹחַ a razor; כִּמְקָה a cucumber bed; and צָבָה an army, which are all masculine.

† I am inclined to believe that this termination is nothing more than a fragment of some ancient form of the feminine pronoun of the third person singular, and which we also find given as the inseparable feminine pronoun of the same person. See the table of inseparable pronouns, Art. 145.

אָרֹן a chest, or ark; גַּן a garden; חַלּוֹן a window; יְצִיעַ a couch; יוֹבֵל a jubilee, &c., which are noted in the dictionaries.*

136. We now come to show, how the noun of the feminine gender is formed from that of the masculine.

1. It will readily be perceived, that the names of certain offices, &c., may apply to either men or women; and that cases may occur, in which it may be necessary to designate the sex of the person, to which such word is applied. The masculine forms have already been pointed out; it will be necessary here only to shew how those peculiar to the feminine are formed from them.

2. Feminine nouns will be formed from the masculine, generally, by adding the termination הַּ or תַּ, and changing the preceding vowels of the ultimate or penultimate syllable, as the analogy of the word (hereafter to be considered), and the rules detailed (Artt. 93, 101) may require; e. g. טוֹב a good man, &c.; טוֹבָה a good woman, &c.; מֶלֶךְ (original form מַלְכָּה) a king, מַלְכָּה a queen; בּוֹקֵד masc. בּוֹקֵדָה, or בּוֹקֵדֶת, fem. a visitor, or visiting.

3. Let us now see, in what instances these different terminations are to be taken. It will be extremely difficult to lay down rules comprehending every possible case: we shall content ourselves, therefore, with the following, given by Albert Schultens.

4. Nouns ending in an immutable† vowel will generally take the termination הַּ: as, בִּקְרָה visited, masc.; בִּקְרָה fem.; טוֹב good, masc.; טוֹבָה fem.; גָּדוֹל great, masc.;

* In these cases, too, the feminine gender might have been ascribed to these nouns, in consequence of their being considered as signifying unintelligent agents. See Art. 215, &c., on the concordance generally.

† What vowels are to be considered as mutable, or immutable, will be shewn in the next Lecture.

גְּדוּלָה fem.; צְדִיקָה just, masc.; צְדִיקָה fem. A few nouns vary the penultimate vowel in forming the fem., as, מְתוּק, fem. מְתוּקָה, sweet: עֲנוּג fem., עֲנוּגָה delightful. This is generally extended, in such words, to their plurals.

5. Participles of the Hiphhíl conjugation are excepted: as, מְבַקֵּד, fem. מְבַקֵּדָה, with some other nouns: as, שֹׁלֵט a ruler; שֹׁלֵטָה, fem., גָּבִיר a master; גָּבִירָה or גָּבִירָתָה a mistress.

6. Patronymics, and nouns originally ending in י, also ordinal numbers ending in י, and falling under this rule, will double the (י) by Dāgēsh, upon receiving this feminine termination: as, מוֹאָבִי a Moabite; מוֹאָבִיָּה (or מוֹאָבִית) a Moabitess. So, אֲרַמִּי a Syrian; fem. אֲרַמִּיָּה (or אֲרַמִּית); פֹּרִיָּה bearing fruit; בּוֹכִיָּה weeping; שְׁלִישִׁי the third, masc.; שְׁלִישִׁיָּה (or שְׁלִישִׁית), fem.

7. Nouns taking a final Shěvá (:) in the penultimate syllable will, upon receiving any asyllabic augment, have ה־ for their feminine termination: as, אָדוּם red, masc., אֲדוּמָה (for אֲדוּמָה) fem.; קָטָן little, masc.; קָטָנָה, fem.; נִסְבָּה surrounded, masc.; נִסְבָּה, fem. So also participles, having ה, for י, for their last radical letter, with an initial (:) in the ultimate (by analogy); as in נִגְלָה revealed, for נִגְלָה; of נִגְלָה, masc. by contraction (Art. 73.).

8. Hence, all segolate nouns will form their feminines in ה־; as, מֶלֶךְ, of מֶלֶךְ, a king, fem. מַלְכָּה a queen; אֶכֶל, of אֶכֶל, food, fem. אֶכְלָה; עוֹלָה of עוֹלָה, wickedness, fem. עוֹלָה; or, by contraction (Art. 87. 1.), עוֹלָה; צֹיֵד, of צֹיֵד, contracted by (Art. 87. 3.) צִיד hunting, fem. צִידָה.

9. Some nouns are found to take both these feminine forms: as, מַמְלָכָה, or מַמְלֶכֶת, a kingdom; מִשְׁפָּחָה, or מִשְׁפָּחַת, a family; (*Pāthákh*s are here taken instead of *Sēgól*s on account of the guttural ח) אֲשַׁמְרָה, or אֲשֹׁמְרָה, a watch or guard. So some participles and infinitives: as, פּוֹקֵדֶת, or פּוֹקְדָה, visiting, fem.; גִּדְּדָה, or לָדַת, bringing forth. To which may be added the patronymics, &c., above noticed, as well as many other nouns, which will be learned best from practice.

137. Nouns not subject to these restrictions will, for the most part, have their feminine forms ending in תָּ or in some equivalent termination: as, עֹטָר a crown; עֹטָרָת fem. (which also has עֹטָרָה).

2. The terminations equivalent to תָּ are: 1, יֹת: 2, יָת: 3, יֵת: 4, אֵת: 5, אִת: 6, יֵת or יֵת: 7, יֵת or יֵת: as, 1, אַחֵת sister, for אַחֵת; but, on account of the guttural ח, אַחֵת, which, by Art. 87. 1, will become אַחֵת, or אַחֵת: 2, גִּלְתָּ, for גִּלְתָּ, and by Art. 87, 2. גִּלְתָּ exile: 3, תְּבִנִית a pattern, for תְּבִנִית, and by Art. 87. 4. תְּבִנִית: 4, מוֹצֵאת for מוֹצֵאת finding, by Art. 87. 5: 5, חַסֵּאת for חַסֵּאת sin, (by the same Article); 6, תָּת for תָּת giving, (primitive form תָּת, the נ being rejected by Art. 76.). So, אִמְנָת truth, for אִמְנָת or אִמְנָת: 7, לָת, for לָת bringing forth a child, (primitive form לָת, and, rejecting the medial ד, for the sake of euphony, we have לָת). For the same reason we have אַחַת, for אַחַת one, fem.; בַּת a daughter, for בַּת or בַּת (Art. 144.): but זִמְרָת a song, has the regular Chaldaic or Syriac termination.

On the Inflection of Nouns.

138. Three numbers are recognised by Hebrew Grammarians, in the inflection of Nouns: viz. the Singular, the Dual, and the Plural.

On the Formation of the Dual Number.

1. The dual number is formed from the singular, by adding the termination יָם: as, יוֹם a day; יוֹמַי two days; מֶלֶךְ (of מֶלֶךְ) a king; מְלָכַי two kings; מַלְכָּה a queen; מְלָכָתַי two queens: שְׁנַיִם two, and, by contraction (Art. 87. 3.), שְׁנַיִם; and fem. for שְׁתַּיִם, שְׁתַּיִם (for שְׁתַּיִם), by the same rule: from שָׁנָה, masc. and שְׁנַתָּה fem. (now obsolete.) See also my Lexicon (p. 609). From this contraction it should seem that, the original dual termination was יָם־.

2. All feminine nouns ending in הַ־, change ה to ת upon receiving any increment whatsoever; as also, when put in construction with any other noun, of which more will be said hereafter: hence we have מִלְּבָתַיִם as above.

3. The dual number is, for the most part, restricted to things which are double by either nature or art, as the double members of the body, folding doors, &c. It is never found in the conjugation of verbs.

4. A few instances occur, in which a dual termination is added to a noun already in the plural number: as, חֲמַתַּיִם two walls, Isa. xxii. 11; לְחַתַּיִם two tables, Ezek. xxvii. 5.

The changes of the preceding vowels will be regulated as before (Art. 93, &c.): these will be particularly considered in the next Lecture.

On the Formation of the Plural Number Masculine.

139. Nouns of the masculine gender are made plural by attaching the asyllabic augment יָם־ to the singular: as, טוֹב good, masc., טוֹבַיִם plur.; מֶלֶךְ (of מְלֶכֶךְ or מְלֶכֶךְ) a king, plur., מְלָכַיִם; גּוֹי a nation, plur., גּוֹיִם (for גּוֹיִים by omission, Art. 75.) nations; נָכְרִי a stranger, plur. נְכָרַיִם (for נְכָרַיִים by contraction and omission, Artt. 75. and 72.). So יְהוּדַיִם Jews, (for יְהוּדַיִים).*

* So שָׁנַיִם pl. of שָׁנִי scarlet, Isa. i. 18; חֲפָצַיִם, of חֲפָץ free, Isa. lviii. 6; פְּנִימַיִם, of פְּנִימִי inner, 1 Chron. xxviii. 11; for שְׁנַיִם, &c.

The ם added to Hebrew masculine plurals, as well as the ן of Syriac and Chaldaic ones, seems to me to have been applied for the purpose of filling up the hiatus, which would otherwise have happened. Such is the Tamween (س, َـ) of the Arabs; which, according to them, is always cut off when the

2. In many instances, however, words of this kind are written fully; as, לְוִיִּים Levites, sing. לְוִי; כּוּשִׁיִּים Cushites (vulgarly Ethiopians); כִּתִּיִּים Chittim, Isa. xxiii. 12; יְהוּדִיִּים Esth. iv. 7; viii. 7; כַּשְׁדִּיִּים Chaldeans, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17, &c.; where the marginal reading is generally of the contracted form.

In one instance א is inserted in the place of Dāgēsh: as, עֲרַבְיִים for עֲרַבִּים, or contr. עֲרַבִּים Arabs, 2 Chron. xvii. 11.

3. We sometimes have the Chaldaic termination ו־ן: as, מְלָכֵינוּ kings, Prov. xxxi. 3; אִיָּנוּ (for אִיָּנוּ) islands, continents, Ezek. xxvi. 18, &c.

4. The terminating letters ם, or (Chaldaic) ן, are always omitted, when the noun is in the state of definite construction with the following word (Art. 143.), or, when any affixed pronoun is attached to it: as, מְלָכֵינוּ אֶרֶץ kings of the land; מְלָכֵיהֶם their kings; of which more will be said hereafter. The first of these forms, i.e. with ם or ן, final, is termed Absolute; the second is termed, that of Construction.

5. In some cases, moreover, when such plural words are not in the state of construction, these letters are omitted: as, חוֹסֵי כּוּ, for כּוּ חוֹסֵים, those who trust in him, Ps. ii. 12, &c.

6. We occasionally find the termination ם־ or ם־ instead of ם־ or ם־: as, גְּבֵי locusts, Amos vii. 1, Nah. iii. 17: מְלָכֵינוּ windors, Jer. xxii. 14; שְׂרָיִ princes, Judg. v. 15; הָרָיִ mountains, Zech. xiv. 5; דְּוָרֵי net works, Isa. xix. 9; מְשֻׁפָּי (men, &c.) uncovered, Isa. xx. 4; and frequently, יְשָׁדֵי the Almighty; אֲדֹנָי Lord, &c. But, as this diphthong (־) is only another form for ם־ (Art. 87. 3.), we may perhaps conclude, that this termination is nothing more word is placed in the state of definite construction, as is also its substitute the final ן of the dual and plural. ويجب تجريد المضاف عن التنوين وما يقوم مقامه وهونون التثنية والجمع &c. Hidayat-oon-Nahwe, p. 57 Calcutta, 1803. The Moolla Jāmi considers this termination as the index of a complete word; which, when lost in the state of construction, is supplied by the following word. Comment. on the Kāfia, p. 199.

than a contraction for יָ, and therefore, perfectly equivalent to it in all respects; but, not necessarily containing any thing superlative, as some have thought. This termination has also been supposed to designate collective nouns; but, as most plural nouns may be considered as collectives, there does not seem to be any necessity for this distinction here.

7. There are, moreover, several passages, in which יָ has been thought to be a plural termination: as, ראש השלשי head of the captains, 2 Sam. xxxiii. 8, which in the parallel passage, 1 Chron. xi. 11, is ראש השלישיים. So הפרי והרצים the captains and the runners, 2 Kings xi. 4, 19. Of this kind some suppose הַפְּנֵעֵי, Gen. xii. 6, xiii. 7; פְּרִתֵי וּפְלִתֵי, 2 Sam. viii. 18, xx. 7, 23, &c. to be; while others believe the terminating (י) to indicate nothing more than a patronymic or gentile noun.* To these some other

* I am very much disposed to believe, that the plural termination attached to Hebrew nouns and verbs, is nothing more than a fragment of some word originally used to designate plurality. In the Malay, Sanscrit, and some other languages, the plural number is still formed by adding some word or words signifying much, many, or the like; or, by repeating the same word: as, in the Malay, Orang bāniak, or Orang orang, many man; or man man. So in Sanscrit. See Yates's Gram. p. 59. It should, however, be borne in mind, that all generic nouns, implying whole classes, may be taken as plurals as to sense: and that, in such cases, they will imply a larger plurality, than their several plural forms will.

In the Coptic and New Zealand also, the syllabic ni or na, which is prefixed for the purpose of designating the plural number, seems manifestly to be derived from the word nau or na, which in both these languages means great, much, or the like. In the Hebrew we find words, derived from the root הָיָה or הָיָה being, signifying substance, &c.: as, הֵן wealth; הָיָה a great misfortune, calamity; or הָיָה a great deep, a bath. In the Arabic ي is, inordinate affection; كأوية lust, a great deep, abyss: and hence, perhaps, הָיָה Jehovah, Being, or great Being, emphatically, וְהוּא, or הוא, as well as הָיָה אֱשֶׁר אָדָהּ, Exod. iii. 14. So in the Sanscrit Bhūvān, literally and etymologically, Being, applied to God, or any great man, from the root bhū, be. Now, if we can conceive a noun of the primitive form הָיָה, i.e. הָיָה being, substance, or the like, thus to be used; we shall have the forms הָיָה by Euphony, (Art. 108.), and הָיָה by contraction (Art. 87. 3.). Writing then הָיָה, in the form proper for construction but in one word, and striking out the first הָ by Art. 73., and the last by Art. 74; we shall have הָיָה, for the contracted plural form, to which the Euphonic ם or ן may be added or not: and without the (י) Khīrīk, הָיָה passages might be added : as, פְּלִילִי, Job xxxi. 28, compared with Ib. v. 11 ; הַזֵּי 1 Sam. xx. 38 ; הָרִי Gen. xl. 16 ; עֲפָי 2 Sam. xxii. 44 ; Ps. cxliv. 2, Lam. iii. 14, &c.

In all such cases as these, הִי may, according to our hypothesis, be a plural termination, the Euphonic ה being cut off : but, as it will be hereafter seen, that (י) is also the termination of patronymic or gentile nouns, the context alone must be our guide in ascertaining the sense in such passages.

8. Dr. Gesenius is of opinion, that the termination הִי is, in some cases, nothing more than an Arabism for the singular הִי : as, שָׂרִי for שָׂרָה a field, Deut. xxxii. 13 ; Ps. viii. 8. So חוֹזֵי for חוֹזֶה a seer, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 19, &c., but this is unnecessary.

9. Some have supposed, that הִן, and י without the Euphonic ה, are occasionally used as plural terminations : as, יְשׁוּרְהֵן Yeshūrūn for Israel. הַחֲבָרוּ שָׁמַיִם, to be read הַחֲבָרוּ שָׁמַיִם (by Art. 87. 2.) augurs, i. e. dividers of the heavens. Isa. xlvii. 13. So תוֹרְתַי (רַבּוֹ) רַבּוֹתֵי הַמִּצְוֹת the multitude of my law. Hos. viii. 12. יְדֵעוּ Ps. cxix. 79 ; שָׁנְאוּ 2 Sam. v. 8 ; בָּנֵי 1 Chron. vi. 11, &c. In most of these and similar passages, however, we have a various reading in the margin, which supplies the more usual plural termination, הִי.

On the Formation of the Plural Number Feminine.

140. The termination used to designate the feminine a plural form noticed above. Again, taking הָיָה, the segolate form proper for construction, and striking out the two ה Hé's as before, we shall have הָיָה, which is the termination proper for the state of construction likewise. The termination הִי, or by contraction י, (Art. 87. 2.), might, for the sake of distinction, have been taken for the plural of verbs, from the cognate root הָיָה, having the same signification : for, taking the segolate, or primitive form, הָיָה, or הָיָה, we shall have הָיָה by contraction (Art. 87. 2.) ; and, writing הָיָה, for הָיָה, as before, we shall have the plural terminations for some parts of the verb, as also for some nouns above noticed ; which, as they probably are real ancient forms of nouns in the plural number, stood in no need of correction by the Masorets.

The plural termination of the feminine nouns, may have also arisen from this root : for if we take הָיָה of the form הָיָה, and change the final ה into ת, — which occasionally takes place, — we shall have, by contraction, הָיָה, Art. 87. 1 ; and, for הָיָה, הָיָה, as before.

plural is, דורות,* which, like the preceding דור, &c. is asyllabic: as, דור a generation, דורות (or Art. 72. דורות) generations.

2. When the feminine singular ends in הַ, תַּ, or תַּ, &c., these terminations are rejected, in forming the plural: as, בּוֹקֵדָה, or בּוֹקֵדָת, visiting, (fem.) בּוֹקֵדוֹת, plural.† The same may be said of the Chaldaic termination תַּ; as, תְּהִלָּת, praise, תְּהִלוֹת, praises, Ps. ix. 15, &c.

3. Feminine nouns ending in יַ, and וַ, take the same termination, וַ in the plural, with this additional consideration, viz. that י, in the first case, is doubled by Dāgēsh: as, עֵבֶרִית a Hebrew woman, plural עֵבֶרִיּוֹת (the singular being עֵבֶרִיָּת, or עֵבֶרִיָּה): and, in the second, by prefixing י, and preserving the homogeneous imperfect vowel corresponding to ו: as, מַלְכוּת, a kingdom, מַלְכוּתֹת, kingdoms, as if the singular had been a contraction of מַלְכוּיָה.

4. Nouns ending in יַ are sometimes found with plurals, formed by the addition of the plural terminations יַם and וַת: as, הַנֵּיִת a spear, plural הַנֵּיִתִים, and הַנֵּיִתוֹת; זְנוּת fornication, plural זְנוּתִים, &c.

5. Nouns, ending in תַּ; as, דֶּלֶת a door, have the pl. דֶּלֶתוֹת; קֶשֶׁת a bow, pl. קֶשֶׁתוֹת bows; שֵׁפֶת (for שֵׁפֶה) a lip, pl. שֵׁפֶתוֹת lips.

141. The plural of a considerable number of masculine nouns, is found with the feminine termination וַת; while, on the other hand, many feminine nouns are also found with the masculine termination יַם in the plural: as, 1st, אָב a father, pl. אֲבוֹת; אוֹצֵר a treasure, pl. אוֹצְרוֹת; and, 2d, אֶבֶן a stone, fem.: pl. אֲבָנִים; אֵלֶּה a fir tree, אֵלִים fir trees; all of which the Lexicons will supply as they occur.

* See the note to the preceding article.

† In other words, the feminine plural is formed from the masculine singular, not from the feminine singular.

2. Nouns of the common gender, are sometimes found with two plural forms : as, שָׁנָה a year, pl. שָׁנִים, and שָׁנוֹת, years: so יָמִים, and יָמֹת days, for יָמִים; or יָמֹת; pl. of יוֹם for יוֹמִים, a day. A few others have the masculine, added to the feminine, form of the plural : as, בְּמָוֶה a high place, pl. בְּמֹוֹת and בְּמֹוֹתִים. Others again, are found only in the plural number : as, פְּנֵים the face, חַיִּים life; נָשִׁים women. Others are used in the dual only : as, רְחָיִם a mill; מֵאֻנְגִּים balances, &c.

142. Generic nouns signifying the whole species, must, even in the singular number, be understood as plurals, when the context requires it : as, עוֹף fowl or fowls; בֶּן child or children; צֶאֱוֹן flock or flocks.

2. Hence, nouns signifying Metals, Liquids, Virtues, Vices; to which may be added Proper names, are generally found in the singular number only : as, כֶּסֶף silver, זָהָב gold, יַיִן wine, יֵצֶהר oil, חָכְמָה wisdom, נְבִלָה foolishness, שִׂנְאָה hatred, מֹשֶׁה Moses, צִפְרָה Zipporah, יִשְׂרָאֵל Israel, &c.

3. We have, nevertheless, תְּבוּנֹת understandings, אַהֲבִים loves, חַסְדִּים graces, בְּעֵשִׁים angers, חָכְמוֹת wisdoms, &c.; but, in these cases, the signification is intensitive. See Art. 223. 3.

4. Nouns implying age are mostly found in the plural number : as, נְעוּרִים childhood, עֲלוּמִים youth, זְקֵנִים old age, &c. We have, nevertheless, יְלָדוֹת for childhood, and עֲלָמִית for youth, to which some others might be added.

5. Words ending in יָת and יֵת, generally denote the state in which any person or thing is said to be. Hence יְלָדוֹת will signify the state of childhood: these words therefore need not be put in the plural number. In the other case, the word שָׁנִים is probably understood; we shall therefore have נְעוּרִים, for שָׁנִים childish years; and so of others, which will account for the apparent anomaly.

The nouns generally found in the dual number have already been pointed out (Art. 138. 3.).

On the Changes found to take place in Nouns when put in the Definite State of Construction.

143. By the definite state of Construction is meant, the juxta position of two or more nouns, not meaning the same thing, when the latter is added for the purpose of defining, or otherwise qualifying, that immediately preceding it: as, יְדֵי יְהוָה יְדֵי Jehovah's hand, יֵשֶׁבֶט בַּרְזֶל a rod of iron; יָמֵי שְׁנֵי-חַיֵּי אַבְרָהָם the days of the years of the life of Abraham.

2. Now, as such words are added for the purpose of presenting some one definite idea, the whole combination seems to have been considered as presenting one compound word only; and, hence, the governing tone-accent has been supposed to rest on the last so construed; and thence, the vowels of the preceding word have been contracted or rejected, as far as the analogy would allow.

3. Hence, nouns having perfect and *mutable vowels in their ultimate, and penultimate, syllables, will generally change that in the ultimate, to its homogeneous imperfect one, and reject that in the penultimate: as, דְּבַר יְהוָה Jehovah's word, (from דָּבַר); תּוֹרַת יְהוָה Jehovah's law (from תּוֹרָה).

4. All feminine nouns, however, ending in הָ will change the ה, to ת; probably for the purpose of rendering the character of such words more susceptible to the ear, than they would be with the ה remaining (Art. 138. 2.).

5. Exceptions:—All masculine nouns singular ending in הָ† will take ה־, when preceding others in the state of construction, as מִקְנֵה אַבְרָם Abram's stock. Not unlike this, מַעֲשֵׂר, constr. מֵעֵשֶׂר, tithe: מְרֻבֵּץ, constr. מְרֻבֵּץ, a resting place for cattle. מִשְׁעָן, מִשְׁעָן, support, with a few others of the same form. Some make הַזֵּיוֹן, constr. of הַזֵּיוֹן, which so interferes with the form of the word, as to set all analogy at naught. Segolate nouns

* These will be distinguished when we come to treat of the forms of nouns.

† This terminating vowel seems to have been taken, in order to avoid the confounding of these nouns with feminines ending in הָ.

are subject to no variation in the singular number: as, מֶלֶךְ אַשּׁוּר the king of Assyria.*

6. Segolate nouns, having ו, or י, for their middle radical letter, will undergo a contraction when preceding other nouns in the state of construction: as, תוֹךְ הַגֶּן the midst of the garden (from תוֹךְ, of תוֹךְ) by Art. 87. 1.; בֵּית יַעֲקֹב the house of Jacob, † הֵי בָּעֵר (for הֵי) sufficiency of burning, Isa. xl. 16. (Art. 87. 3.).

7. All dual, and plural, nouns, ending in יִם and יִם respectively, will take the termination י, and reject, or otherwise contract, the preceding vowel, whenever it is perfect and mutable; e. g. דְּבַרֵי יְהוָה Jehovah's words (sing. דְּבַר); עֵינֵי יְהוָה, (sing. עֵין or עֵין, dual עֵינִים) Jehovah's eyes. In these cases, the terminating ם, of the dual and plural, may be considered as euphonic, as also the ך in the Chaldaic, Syriac, and Arabic (Art. 139. 4.).

On the termination י, occasionally found in this situation, see Art. 139. 6.

8. From the examples already given, it will be seen that this construction may, generally, be translated by the genitive case in other languages; but, as one or other of the particles is also occasionally introduced for this purpose, as well as to form combinations equivalent to the different cases of the Greek and Latin grammars; the Student is referred to the Syntax for further information on this subject.

ON THE PRONOUNS, SEPARABLE, AND INSEPARABLE.

144. The pronouns are, in the Hebrew, as in other

* The reason of this will be shewn hereafter. Art. 148. 2.

† Hence, perhaps, the termination י in plural masculine nouns, as דְּבַרֵי is for דְּבַרֵיהֶם, see Art. 139. 7. note.

languages, 1. Personal, 2. Demonstrative, 3. Relative, and, 4. Interrogative; with which, 5. the Reflective, pronouns, and the Definite Article, are sometimes classed. We shall at present consider the Personal Pronouns only.

The Personal Pronouns.

1. These are termed Separable, and Inseparable. When Separable, they are to be considered as representing the person to which they belong, in the nominative case: when Inseparable, they exhibit only a fragment, or part, of the Separable pronoun, combined with some other word. When attached to verbs, they may be said to represent either the objective, or some other oblique, case; but, when attached to nouns, they stand for the correspondent possessive pronoun: there being no other way of expressing the possessive pronominal sense in in Hebrew:

2. The Separable personal pronouns are as follows :

		SING. COM. GEN.
1 Person.	{	אֲנִי, or אֲנֹכִי	I.
		PLUR.
		אֲנַחְנוּ, rarely נַחֲנוּ, and once אֲנִי..	We.
		SING. MASC.
2 Person.	{	אַתָּה, rarely אַתָּ (for אַנְתָּ, &c.) ..	Thou.
		PLUR.
		אַתֶּם, (for אַנְתֶּם).....	You.
		SING. FEM.
		אַתְּ, rarely אַתִּי (for אַנְתְּ, &c.)..	Thou.
		PLUR.
		אַתֶּן, rarely אַתְּנֶה (for אַנְתֶּן, &c.)	You.

3 Person. {	SING. MASC.	הוא He.
	PLUR.	הם, occasionally הן They.
	SING. FEM.	היא, anciently הוּא.
	PLUR.	הן, occasionally הוּן.

3. In a few instances thou, is used in the masculine gender : viz., Num. xi. 15, Deut. v. 24, and Ezek. xxviii. 14. is used as a feminine in Ezek. xiii. 20 : is also used as a feminine, Cant. vi. 8, Ruth i. 22, Zech. v. 10 : and is as a masculine, 2 Sam. iv. 6, Jer. L. 5. is also occurs as a masculine, Ruth i. 15. We also have is, for is, 1 Kings xvii. 15 ; and is, for is throughout the Pentateuch, if we except eleven instances noted in the Masora. This is usually ascribed to an archaism, grounded on the supposition, that in ancient times the pronouns were all considered as being of the common gender.

4. is is probably a foreign word : Egyptian, perhaps, where we have is, there being no trace of it in any of the sister dialects of the Hebrew. Gesenius finds it, however, in the Phœnician.*

5. The Inseparable pronouns are abbreviated forms of the pronouns given above : they are invariably found attached to some preceding word, whether that be a noun, verb, or particle.† The following is a table of their forms when so attached to nouns or particles : we shall give those for the verbs hereafter.

For the 1 Pers. {	SING. COM. GEN.	FOR NOUNS SING.	FOR NOUNS PLUR.

* Lehregebäude, page 200, note.

† This may be considered as an illustration of the general principle of abridging and compounding words in Hebrew, and as confirming, in a great degree, the remarks offered in the note, Art. 39. 7. above.

2 Pers.	{	SING. MASC. FOR NOUNS SING. PLUR.
		אֶתָּהּ, or אַתָּה.. יְ, or יָ... כָּה־, or יָ... יָ... יָ thy, or thine.

		PLUR.
		הֵן, or הֵנָּה.... הֵן, הֵן, יוֹ, הֵן... יָ... , their, theirs.

6. It is to be observed, that in affixing these abbreviated pronouns to singular nouns, it will be necessary, when such word does not end in a vowel, to take that form of the pronoun which is here preceded by one ; thence called the Vowel of union. In this case, an accent will accompany it, as given in the table. But, when the preceding word ends in a vowel, no such union-vowel can be introduced : in such case, that Abbreviated pronoun is taken, which has no preceding Vowel of union.

7. Nouns ending in ך, will drop that letter, upon receiving the affixed pronoun of the first person singular : as, גוֹי a nation ; גוֹי my nation, for גוֹי.

8. The words אָב a father, אָח a brother, אָמָא a father-in-law, and פֶּה the mouth, will take ך when either construed with a noun following, or when receiving any one of the above pronominal affixes : as, אָבִי קְנַעַן, the father of Canaan ; אָבִיךָ, thy father. But, as two Yods (׃) would, in these cases, concur in the first person, as אָבִי, one of them will be dropped by the rule (No. 7.) : as, אָבִי (the root being אבִי, or אבִה) my father ; and so on of the rest. Some other words ending in ך, for ך, may take the affixed pronouns in the same way : as, פְּרִי fruit ; פְּרִיהֶם their fruit ; or they may take it with a vowel of union: as, פְּרִיָם, or פְּרִיָו, their (masc. and fem.) fruit.

9. Here, however, the masculine form of the pronominal affix is sometimes taken, when the sense seems to require the feminine; and, vice versa; see Gen. xxxi. 9, Ruth i. 8, 9, 11. 13, Ezek. xiii. 19, 20, 21, Jer. ix. 19. So also הוּי, for הָ, פְּמֹהוּ, for פְּמֹהָ, Exod. xi. 6, twice. In the same manner we have מִמְּנִי, for מִמְּנִיהָ, Jud. xi. 34; ׀ for ׀, as, נְשָׁבְלָם, for נְשָׁבְלָו, Cant. iv. 2, vi. 6. So Exod. ii. 17, 2 Sam. xx. 3, twice, Ps. cxix. 152. So הָם, for הֵן, Exod. i. 21, Num. xxxvi. 6, twice, Job xix. 15, Ezek. xxiii. 45, 47, Ezra x. 3, 44, Zech. v. 9, xi. 5: מוּ, as a feminine in לְמוּ, Lam. iv. 10. These apparent discrepancies, however, will be accounted for, in some degree, in the Syntax, Art. 215, seq.

10. On the contrary, ׀ occurs for ׀: as, לְאַרְבַּעַתָּן, for לְאַרְבַּעַתָּם, to them four, Ezek. i. 10, twice; and again, verr. 16, 18. Also in בְּלִקְתָּן, Ib. verr. 9, 12, 17, in their going; הֵן also, occurs as a masculine, רַבְעֵיהֶן their four (sides), Ib. ver. 17; and again, in verr. 18, 24, 25. Also with a paragogic ה; as, בְּנֵיהֶיהָ their bodies, Ib. ver. 11.

11. In affixing these pronouns to nouns, it must be remembered that they are not made to agree, either in number, gender, or person, with the nouns to which they are attached, but with those to which they refer, and which generally precede them in the context.

12. Such of these inseparable pronouns as commence with a consonant, and make a syllable independently of any part of the preceding word, are termed Syllabic; these are, that of the first person plural, נִי; those of the second, כָּה, ךָּ, כָּם, and כָּן; of the third, הֵי, הָ, הֶם, and הֵן. Such as do not constitute a syllable in themselves, but require the addition of a letter from the preceding word, have been termed Asyllabic; see Art. 92, &c. Of these are the remaining pronouns, viz., ׀, ׀, ךָּ, ׀, ׀, ׀, and ׀.

13. Of these inseparable pronouns, כָּם, כָּן, הֶם, and הֵן, are termed grave (Art. 117. 2.), because they always have the tone-accent. The others are, by way of contradistinction, termed light.

14. It is of importance to bear these distinctions in mind; because the changes of the vowels of the preceding word, will, in a great measure, depend upon them: e. g. if to רַבֵּר a word, I affix ׀ my, mine, the ׀, of רַבֵּר, must be taken in order to enounce this vowel : as, רִי-בְּרִי. But, by our laws of syllabication, the preceding ב must have a perfect vowel ; (ר) will, therefore, remain unchanged. And, as the first (ר) is not immutable, and as the accent is with the affix, this vowel will become (י) ; and we shall have רִי-בְּרִי, dēvā-rí ; where the asyllabic affix exerts a considerable influence on the ultimate form of the word. But, if I take a syllabic affix, let it be כֶּם your, we shall then have כֶּם-רִי-בְּרִי your word. In this case, the ר, of רִי-בְּרִי, closes its last syllable ; and, as the accent is removed, the (ר) preceding this letter originally, must, by our laws of syllabication, become (-) ; and we accordingly have כֶּם-רִי-בְּרִי. But, if we take הָ, which is also syllabic, we shall not have הָ-רִי-בְּרִי, but רִי-בְּרִי-הָ ; because, although the affix הָ is syllabic ; still, as the accent accompanies the preceding syllable, it must remain perfect (Art. 33.), and we accordingly have רִי-בְּרִי-הָ. The same holds good in all other cases (Artt. 93. 94.)

15. Any word, preceding one or other of these affixes, may be considered as in the state of construction with it, and therefore subject to all those changes in the vowels, to which words so situated are (Art. 143. 3.). The only difference is, that, instead of the latter word (here the pronoun) being written at length, it has been abbreviated.

16. The following examples will shew the application of these Inseparable pronouns to nouns both singular, and plural ; masculine, and feminine. No example of the dual is given, because it will always take the affixes proper for the plural : as, עֵינַיִם two eyes, עֵינַי my eyes, &c.

3	masc.	תּוֹרוֹתֵיהֶם, or, poeticè, יְיָ-יְיָ their laws.
3	fem.	תּוֹרוֹתֵיהֶן their laws.

17. Nouns ending in ה־ take the affix ה־ instead of ו־, or ה־, in the third person singular masculine, rejecting first their final letter ה : as, עֵלֶה a leaf; עֵלְהוּ his leaf; שָׂדֵה a field; שָׂדֵהוּ his field. In like manner they reject their final letter, when they receive the feminine affix of the same person, which is either ה־ or ה־ : as, שָׂדֵה a field; שָׂדֵהָ her field; מִתְּרָה an accident; מִתְּרָהָ her accident, Ruth ii. 3; מְרֵאָה an appearance; מְרֵאָהָ its appearance.

Anomalies.

18. שֵׁנוֹ his flock (of ¹sheep), Deut. xxii. 1, from שֵׁן, or שֵׁן. The affix ה־ is occasionally found attached to other nouns: as, פִּילֵגְשָׁחָה his concubine, Judg. xix. 24; מִמָּהוּ his yoke, Nah. i. 13; אִוְרָהוּ his light, Job xxv. 3. And also with plurals: as, גִּבּוֹרֵיהֶוּ his heroes, Nah. ii. 4.

19. The following examples are also anomalous. 2 Pers. masc. חֲלֶכְךָ Ps. x. 14.—2 Pers. fem. שְׁלֵשְׁתֶּיךָ thy third part, with י inserted, Ezek. v. 12; נָתַתְּךָ giving thee, Ib. xxiii. 28; כֻּלָּהּ the whole of it.

Of the first person plural, מוֹרְעָתֵנוּ our acquaintance, Ruth iii. 2; קִימָנוּ our substance, Job xxii. 20. Of the second fem. זִמְרָתְכֶנָּה your baseness, Ezek. xxiii. 48.

Of the third masc. כֻּלָּהֶם all of them, 2 Sam. xxiii. 6. Of the third fem. כֻּלָּהֶנָּה the whole of them. So Gen. xli. 21; קִרְבָּנָהּ for the midst of them.

With Nouns Plural.

20. 1 Pers. sing. עֲדוֹתַי, for עֲדוֹתַי, my testimonies, Ps. cxxxii. 12. The union vowels of the affix of the 3 fem. sing. are sometimes contracted: as, אֲחֵי־וָתַי, for אֲחֵי־וָתַי, (Art. 87. 3.) thy sisters, Ezek. xvi. 52, &c., in which case the ם Yod is dropped. This sometimes takes place with the masc. pronoun: as, מַכּוֹתַי, for מַכּוֹתַי, thy strokes, for מַכּוֹתַי, Deut. xxviii. 59. So מַלְאֲכָיָהּ thy messengers, Nah. ii. 14. It. 2d fem. בְּסֹתוֹתַי־כְּנָה your pillows. Of the 2d. masc. תַּנְמִילוֹתַי his benefits, Ps. cxvi. 12, of the Chaldaic form: אֲלֵיהֶמָּה their entablatures. 3d. fem. אֲתֵיקוֹרָהּ its galleries; גִּילְתֵיהֶנָּה their bodies, Ezek. i. 11, &c.

21. The affix קָם of the 2d pers. plur. masc. is, in one instance, preceded by (־);* as, תַּפְּזוֹתַי־קָם your dispersions, Jer. xxv. 34. These may all perhaps be errors either of transcription, or of the press.

22. The ם, which precedes the affixed pronouns in the plural numbers of nouns, is frequently dropped: as, דְּרָקָה, for דְּרָקָה, thy ways, &c., by Art. 72. But, many of these anomalies will come under the rules detailed in Art. 139. 7, and will, therefore, be rather apparent than real; others, perhaps, are the mere mistakes of the copyists.

N.B. The demonstrative and other separable pronouns will be given when we come to treat on the particles.

LECTURE VI.

ON THE PARTS OF SPEECH IN GENERAL, AND ON THE NOUN IN PARTICULAR.

145. HAVING laid down and exemplified the general principles of syllabication, the terminating syllables adopted for the state of construction, the duals and plurals masc. and fem., as found to prevail in this

* In some editions regularly ם.

Language; we may now consider its different parts of speech, shew what their primitive forms apparently were, and how they seem to have been derived from one another.

1. The Hebrew language is, like all others, found to consist of nouns, verbs, and particles,* so arranged in sentences as to convey to the mind such ideas, or notions, as are intended to be communicated by any Speaker or Writer. Of these, the third person singular masculine of the verb has generally been taken as the Root, or theme, from which the others have been derived. For my own part, I believe the noun ought rather to be considered as the Root; not only, because the learner may by this means be enabled more clearly to see how the conjugations of the verbs are carried on, but also, because he can ascertain, with a much greater degree of precision, the force of all those nouns which have hitherto been considered as branches of the verb. Again, there are whole classes of the verb, which do not exhibit the root fully in the third person singular masculine of the preterite: and these comprehend all those, which have either ׀, or ׀, for the middle radical letter; which are found complete in the noun, but defective in the verb. In some others, indeed, the noun appears in a defective form; but, in such cases, it is not found complete in the verb. Again, the variation found to prevail in the last vowel of the preterite, is more naturally accounted for in the noun than in the verb; and, it is the fact, that a noun having the same vowel is very often found to exist. Besides, the participial and other nouns, which have no tenses in themselves, are much better understood when considered as derived from the primitive nouns, than as derived from the verbs. Add to this, the circumstance, that a verb in the state of conjugation either is, or must be considered as, compounded with a pronoun; and, therefore, in a state unfit to be taken as a primitive word. It is when found without these pronouns, as well as every other adjunct, and in its simplest form, that we can fairly consider any word as a root;* and, this we contend, is the more natural way to proceed. Induced by these considerations we give the noun the first place in the etymology.

* The Arabian, and Jewish, grammarians comprehend in these, all the other parts of speech, generally, of the grammars of Europe.

On the Nature, Signification, and Forms of Words generally.

146. Words are nothing more than sounds, simple or compound, which have been adopted in order to represent the ideas conceived in the mind of one person, to that of another. Whether any of these were first im-

* The school of Basra hold the same opinion, with reference to the Arabic. See Ebn Farhât on this subject in M. de Sacy's Gram. Arabe, vol. i. p. 229, note. M. de Sacy himself thinks, it will come to much the same thing, whether we consider the infinitive form as the root, or whether we take the third person singular of the masculine preterite, because the one may be termed the logical root, the other the etymological one, Ib. p. 197. But why, it may be asked, are we to have two forms of the root for the same word? And why may not that, which is termed the logical root, be also considered as the etymological one? If the one presents a form more simple than the other, which is the fact, Why, I want to know, may not the less simple be considered as derived from the other? I must confess,—whatever the school of Koufa may think of it,—that of Basra appears to me to have reason on its side in this question; and to their opinion I am therefore compelled to subscribe; which M. De Sacy has also done at p. 128, note a, of his second vol. See also the Mikhlol of Kimkhi, fol. ۸۳۷ verso, cited hereafter, Art. 182, 2, note. I use the small edition of 1545. parted to man by the Creator, or whether he had only the powers given sufficient for appropriating such sounds to the purposes of life, it is impossible now to say: nor is it very important; for, in either case, their adoption will be traced to the appointment of the Deity, either mediately, or immediately. From what is revealed in the Scriptures, however, I am inclined to believe, that it was an immediate appointment, as far at least as the necessities of society at first went; leaving to man's ingenuity the further extension and cultivation of this power, as the increasing wants or refinements of life might suggest. If then the boon was immediate, nothing can be more probable, than that the use of words would be regulated by some analogy; which, it is likely, would also have been the case, had unassisted reason been left to shift for itself. In any case, therefore, we might expect to find, that some analogy had been resorted to in the construction of language, whether we originally possessed the skeleton of it as given by inspiration, or, as made by man for his own use. Things must have had names; and these must have been such, as would generally be allowed and understood, whether we can now see their suitableness or not. Actions, and events, must likewise have had names; and, whether we can now see the reason why certain words, or sorts of words, have been adopted for these purposes, or not; it must be next to certain, that there once was an immediate cause both for their adoption and forms.

2. If, then, this be the true state of the case, it may be worth while to consider, in the next place, how the primitive significations of words would, in process of time, be varied, in order to meet the necessities which would daily arise. Let us first take the word לָלַךְ walking, going, proceeding. This, we can suppose, was the name given to that sort of action, by which a person removes himself from one place to another. If, then, we add another word, or words, the whole may now mean, proceeding towards, either as a friend or an enemy:—from, with, &c., with the additional notions of co-operation, resistance, haste, delay, or the like. This action might, in the next place, be applied to the mind, and then signify its progress, improvement, general conduct, conversation, &c., and, in such acceptations is this word used. Hence Enoch is said to have walked with God, וַיִּתְהַלֵּךְ חֲנוּךְ אֶת-הָאֱלֹהִים, Gen. v. 22. Again, it might be applied to any thing, in the sense of progress; and this might be understood to intimate, either increase, or decrease: as, וַיִּלְךְ הַלֹּךְ וַיִּגְדַּל, Gen. xxvi. 13. So, he proceeded, proceeding and becoming great, i.e. gradually. And, Ib. viii. 3, &c. וַיִּשְׁבוּ הַמַּיִם הַלֹּךְ וְשׁוֹב וַיִּחְסְרוּ and the waters returned proceeding and returning, so they decrease, &c. And, accordingly, this word is often used in the sense of proceeding gradually.* Again, let us take the word עָלָה rising, mounting up, &c. This, with certain adjuncts, may signify, to become superior to, or, to get the upper hand of, another; to conquer him, to humble him; also to excel in state, dignity, power, &c.: the being conversant upon, or about, any thing: being near a place or thing, before, it, or, as we say in English, over against it: also, over, and above, implying excess; being incumbent upon, as a duty, &c., all of which might arise out of the primitive word, by considering it either in its proximate or remote bearings: and such are the acceptations, in which, in one form or other, it is actually found.

* So also the Persian رفتہ رفتہ, going going, for gradually. So Virgil, Vires acquirit eundo.

3. If then we can conceive, how words would thus be made to vary from their primitive significations, in consequence of their different bearings, as just noticed; we shall find no difficulty in seeing, how the cause, beginning, continuation, completion, consequence, &c. of any action, may likewise be intimated by such words, as also the ability, duty, right, will, endeavour, custom, occasion, permission, or notification, &c. which may also be intimated, or implied, by their various forms; and this in their more remote significations, according to the Grammarians and Commentators,* has actually taken place in very many instances in the Hebrew; as, indeed, it has, in a greater or less degree, in all languages; which however is nothing more, than what the necessity of the case absolutely requires.

4. The law, or necessity, by which this variety has been brought about, has, for the sake of convenience, been termed Tropology; and this, again, has, for the same reason, been divided into Metonymy, Irony, Metaphor, and Synecdoche. METONYMY respects cause, and effect; subject, and adjunct: IRONY, contrariety: METAPHOR, comparison: SYNECDOCHE, distribution, as to the whole with reference to its parts, the genus to its species, the material, to the thing composed out of it, &c. For a full account of which, the reader is referred to the second volume of the Philologia Sacra of Glassius, or the work of Storr; books which every student of the Hebrew Language ought to have at hand.

5. Let it be remembered, however, we are not to recur to these figures, for the mere purpose of reconciling any passage of Scripture, with our own preconceived notions. It must appear clearly from the context, considered in conjunction with the character of the writer we may be consulting, whether such figure has really been used, or not; otherwise, we shall make the sacred writers talk like madmen; and shall, perhaps, extract from the same writer, nay the very same passage, the most incongruous, and discordant notions.

6. When, therefore, we have to ascertain the meaning of any given word, or phrase, we must carefully consider whether the primitive, or some derived, signification is to be taken. When the primitive and literal acceptation of such word will answer our purpose; our work is done, and we need proceed no further: but, when this is not the case, we must try in what way our principles will help us: e.g. We find in Job ii. 9, the following passage, which has given considerable trouble to the Translators, and Commentators: בְּרַךְ אֱלֹהִים וּמָת, which in our authorised version is, "Curse God and die." The word, about which the principal difficulty is found here to have arisen, is בְּרַךְ. The best explanation I can give is this: בָּרַךְ, used as a verb, seems first to have been applied to camels, kneeling down to receive their burdens.* Hence, perhaps, arose the idea of submission in kneeling, when receiving something from a superior: and hence, also, that of receiving a blessing; and, actively, giving or bestowing one: also, to ask or receive a blessing on departing, &c. To this קִלְקָלָה, lightness, is opposed, as implying a curse, Gen. xxvii. 12, &c. In the next place, אֱלֹהִים may signify either a false, or a true

* See the Sihâh of Jauhari and the Kāmoos under this word, which give الزِّيَادَةُ وَالنَّمَاءُ increase, and السَّعَادَةُ happiness, &c., as its meaning, &c. See also Gen. xxvii. 36, Jos. xv. 19, &c.

God: either God, or an Idol. In the passage in question, it is impossible that curse can be meant. (See my note on the place.) False God, or Idol, must, therefore, have been intended by the sacred writer. There is no necessity here, therefore, for having recourse to a contrary signification.* Storr (p. 37—8.) has taken it in the sense of bidding farewell, and hence of forsaking and giving up. Parkhurst, with some of his school, has taken it as an irony here, which is hardly necessary.—What has now been said, is intended to refer to un-augmented words generally. On the augmented ones we shall have something to offer hereafter.

7. With reference to the forms of Hebrew words, the student will readily perceive, that, if the root in its simplest form, which is constant, will always represent a certain class of words; then, upon any augmentation being made, either in its vowels, or consonants, or both; other forms will be produced, which may, severally, represent words of other classes, each having meanings, or shades of meaning, peculiar to themselves: and, such is actually the case.

8. If then this be the fact; we can adopt certain words representing the various forms found to prevail: and these we can use,—like the formulæ of Algebra,—to designate whole classes of other words having the same forms. Thus, פֶּֿֿֿ, may be put for any word, having the vowel Páthakh only, between its first and second radical letters. In like manner פֶּֿֿֿ, פֶּֿֿֿ, פֶּֿֿֿ, may represent any others, having a Khólém, Tséré, or Khúrík,

* Words, however, will occasionally have contrary significations: so ذَلَلٌ, is taken to signify baseness, in a bad sense; and humility, in a good one. See the Moallakah of Antara by Menil and Wilmet, p. 135. The same is the case with many other Arabic words. See also the Notæ Miscellanæ appended to the Porta Mosis by Poccocke, cap. ii.

in the same place, respectively; and these are the forms of primitive nouns, generally, having an abstract signification.* In the next place, פִּקֹּד, פִּקֹּד, פּוֹקֵד, &c., or, with one or other of the letters הָאִמְנָתִי added, as, פִּקֹּדָה, מִפְּקֹד, &c., may represent other classes of words, and may each be severally put down as a formulæ for such class of words. And, again, as the roots of words, in Hebrew, always consist of three letters, the servile letters, or vowels, being constant; these formulæ can always be applied.

9. In the Rabbinic grammars, dictionaries, and commentaries, the word פִּעֵל, with its variations, is taken as the common measure of other words; but, as great inconvenience arises from the use of this word, on account of the medial ע , we have, with Schroëderus and others, taken פקד, not that it is entirely unexceptionable, there being one of the בגדכפת letters, both as its initial and final letter; but because it is sufficiently easy of application for our purpose.

* This is also true of Arabic words of these forms: as, ^سفهم comprehension, ^سعلم knowledge, ^سحسن beauty; where the adscititious s tanwīn, may be considered as equivalent to our Hebrew euphonic Segol. We must carefully bear in mind, however, that, although words of this form will generally be abstract in sense, they will not necessarily always have an active signification. For example, ضَرْبٌ زَيْدٍ, will mean Zaid's striking, i. e. either the striking which he receives, or gives; passively or actively, objectively, or subjectively, as the context may require. In such cases, the abstract noun ضَرْبٌ striking, may be considered as equivalent either to a passive, or active participle; and then, the abstract may be said to occupy the place of a concrete noun: as, in Gen. xxxi. 42, יִצְחָק יָרָא the fear of Isaac, i. e. the object of Isaac's fear, his God; which, in the parallel passage, is אֱלֹהֵי אָבִי, my Father's God. So also again in ver. 53, Ib., where it is similarly explained. In Rom. ii. 26, iii. 30, the Gentiles are, in like manner, termed ἀκροβυστία, and the Jews περιτομή, i. e. uncircumcised, and circumcised, respectively. These considerations will occasionally affect the verbs, so that the active form will have a passive sense and vice versa, of which examples will be given hereafter. See Viger on the Greek Idioms, Cap. v. § i. Ed. 1813. Hence the various acceptations of δικαιοσύνη in the New Testament. See also Storr, p. 201, &c. This usage prevails more or less, perhaps, in all languages: and, till within a few years, nobody questioned its propriety in our own. But, no sooner had this infinitive or abstract noun been mistaken for an active participle, than such phrases as Zaid's striking, in a passive sense, was supplanted by the barbarous, Zaid is being struck.

147. It will appear from what has been said (Artt. 75. 76. 77. &c.) that primitive nouns originally consisting of three radical letters, may frequently be found with two only; and there are cases, to be noticed hereafter, in which we have but one. Making these allowances, therefore, the forms of all nouns will be, either Simple, Augmented, or Compounded.

2. The simple forms, as already noticed (Art. 146. 8.) will consist of the radical letters (supposing none of them to have been dropped, as just mentioned) accompanied by one or two vowels.

3. The augmented forms of nouns will exhibit one, or other, of the simple forms, augmented either by the reduplication of its middle radical letter by Dāgēsh, or by the addition of one, or more of the letters, found in the technical term דגש , or, by both taken together.

4. Compounded words are those which are formed by the combination of one, or more, words, simple or augmented, written together as one, contracted however, or abridged, as the rules may require.

5. The simple forms may be divided into two classes, the first of which may, from their peculiarities, be termed Segolate; the second, Primitive, nouns, only.

6. By Segolate nouns is meant, nouns which, in addition to their primitive vowel, generally introduce an additional (◌◌) for the sake of Euphony (Art. 108.). In the other class of Primitive nouns, this does not take place.

7. We shall first consider the different sorts of Segolate nouns, and then proceed to the others, whether simple, augmented, or compounded; giving, at the same time, the forms which they severally assume in the plural number,—when in the state of construction, whether singular or plural,—and when having any one of the pronouns attached to them.

148. The forms of the primitive Segolate nouns are the following: viz. I. פִּקֹּדִי; the alternate form of which is, פִּקְדוֹ, or פִּקְדוֹן: II. פִּקְדוֹן, alt. פִּקְדוֹן: III. פִּקְדוֹן, alt. פִּקְדוֹן*: IV. פִּקְדוֹן, alt. פִּקְדוֹן: V. פִּקְדוֹן, alt. פִּקְדוֹן: all these are generally abstract in signification; and, in the first or leading form, have the accent on the penultimate (Art. 117. 1.).

2. Now, as the pronunciation of these leading forms of words would, in many cases, be exceedingly difficult; an additional vowel, (◌) Sēgól, for the most part, is introduced, for the purpose of obviating this difficulty (Art. 108.): e. g. instead of saying פִּקְדוֹן, (where it would scarcely be possible to enounce the ד), by introducing (◌) we shall have פִּקְדוֹן: and, again, in order to avoid the concurrence of two dissimilar vowels, the former will also become (◌): and then we shall have פִּקְדוֹן, instead of פִּקְדוֹן. Hence we have מֶלֶךְ, for מֶלֶךְ, a king; סֵפֶר, for סֵפֶר, or סֵפֶר, a book; and so of the rest. In some cases, however, where no difficulty of pronunciation would arise, the primitive form is retained: as, נָחַל a valley; חֶסֶד sin; נָרְדִי nard; קִשְׁטָה justice, which last also occurs with (◌): as, קִשְׁטָה, Ps. lx. 6; and again, in the alternate form, קִשְׁטָה, Dan. ii. 47, iv. 34.

3. In all cases, in which this class of words will, by the accident of Grammar, receive any asyllabic augment, no necessity will exist for this Euphonic vowel; and then, either the primitive, or the alternate form, of the word will be used: as מֶלֶךְ his king; מְלָכֵי kings (in construction); and, מְלָכִים (from the alternate form מְלִי) kings, when not in the state of construction. So also in the feminine form, מְלֻכָּה a queen, which in the plural number will take the alternate form מְלֻכוֹת, from מְלֻכָּה, as before. The (-) becomes (ר) Kāmets, by Artt. 97. 136. So also שֵׁכֶם his shoulder, from שֵׁכֶם shoulder; קִדְּשׁוֹ his holiness, from קִדְּשׁוֹ. The accent being removed, causes the first vowel to become imperfect (Art. 33. &c.) In the singular number, however, none of these segolate nouns undergoes any change when placed in the state of definite construction; excepting those only which have either ו, or י, for their middle radical letter (Art. 143. 6.).

* As the vowels (◌) and (◌), (◌) and (◌), may here be considered, respectively, as identical; the number of the forms will be reduced to four: viz. I. פִּקְדוֹן, alt. פִּקְדוֹן: II. פִּקְדוֹן, alt. פִּקְדוֹן: III. פִּקְדוֹן, alt. פִּקְדוֹן: IV. פִּקְדוֹן, alt. פִּקְדוֹן. See also Hoffmann's Syr. Gram., p. 239, &c., Halle, 1827.

4. As we have already laid down the rules relating to the formation of the feminine gender of nouns (Art. 135.), of the dual and plural number (Artt. 138, 139, &c.), of the state of construction (Art. 143.), and have given tables of the inseparable pronouns, as affecting the forms of the nouns (Art. 145. 5.); it is now our intention to shew in each form, as far as it may be necessary, in what way the vowels are affected by these circumstances. We have chosen this method of detailing what has usually been termed the mutationes punctorum, because it appears to be the only one likely to be of any service to the Student. In the grammars of Buxtorf, and others of his school, it was customary to give a considerable number of rules on this subject, with examples; and then to leave the Student to make his way as well as he could. But, as the analogy of the syllabication, and of the forms of words, are the only sure guides; little use could be made of those rules, until the Learner had become familiar with these; and, when this was done, the rules themselves were almost useless. In some of the more elaborate grammars of modern Germany, the analogy is first taught, and then the nouns are divided into a certain number of declensions. This, however, seems to be labour thrown away; for, when the Student is once made acquainted with the general laws of syllabication, and the forms of words, a further classification of these forms, must rather tend to confuse than to instruct him. But, supposing this not to be the case, still the labour is greatly multiplied; and, as far as I can see, for no useful purpose.

I was agreeably surprised to find, upon turning over the Rabbinic grammars of D. Kimkhi, and of some of those who succeeded him, that, under the forms of the nouns, the changes of the vowel-points were in all cases given; which, indeed, had appeared to me the most rational way of proceeding. In conformity with this principle, then, it is my intention to proceed to the classification of the nouns, beginning with those termed Segolate, and giving all that appears to be necessary for the information of the Student; adding, at the same time, such notes on the different forms as the circumstances of each case may seem to require. Having already given a classification of the forms of the Segolate nouns, we shall now proceed to exemplify them.

Tabular View, exhibiting the Grammatical Accidence, as to the vowels, forms of construction, plurals, &c., of the First Species of Segolate Nouns, of the equivalent forms פִּקֹּד, פִּקֹּדָה, or פִּקְדָּה, Art. 148. 2.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.	STATE OF CONSTRUCTION.
Primitive.	Usual Do.		Fem.	Gen.	Masc.	Fem.
פִּקֹּד	פִּקֹּדָה	מֶלֶךְ, a king.	מַלְכָּה	מַלְכָּה	מֶלֶךְ	מַלְכָּה
or Alternate Form,	פִּקְדָּה	נָגֵר, a man (Chald. Syr.)	—	—	נָגֵר	none.
or	פִּקְדָּה	כְּתָב, a writing.	—	—	כְּתָב	none.

5. The Absolute masculine plurals (Art. 139. 4.) of all Segolate nouns, except those only which have (ו) Khōlēm for one of their vowels, take the form of פְּקָדִים; feminines, take that of פְּקָדוֹת. In the first case, therefore, we shall have מְלָכִים, and in the feminine מְלָכוֹת, from the alternate forms (Art. 148. 1.). And, so of all the others, whether of the masculine, or feminine, gender, with the above exception. The plural form for construction with other nouns, or, with any of the inseparable pronouns, will follow the primitive form of these words (Ib. 3. and Art. 143. 7.) In the examples given above, we shall have מְלָכֵי, masc., and מְלָכוֹת, fem., for the plural forms of construction. But, פְּתָב, and נְגַב, do not occur in that situation. It should be observed, however, that the Chaldaic and Syriac forms, פְּקָד, or פְּקָד, are to be referred sometimes to one class, and sometimes to another, of the Segolate nouns: thus, סְפָר is manifestly of the class פְּקָד, the plural being סְפָרִין, and סְפָרִיא; but פְּסָף belongs to פְּקָד, the plural of construction, no less than the forms found with the pronouns being פְּסָף: as, פְּסָפוּ his silver; פְּסָפֵיהֶם their pieces of silver. But these particulars are learned best from the Dictionary and usage.

6. The regular forms for the affixed pronouns, singular and plural, of the first form, are, מְלָכּוּ, מְלָכָהּ, מְלָכֵי, מְלָכֵיהֶם, מְלָכֵיהֶם, מְלָכֵיהֶם, and, by analogy, though not occurring in the text, מְלָכֵי, מְלָכֵיהֶם, &c. So that the plural of construction,—that used in connexion with the pronouns of the second, and third, persons masculine, and feminine, plural,—will follow the primitive forms of these nouns; in all the other cases, they will follow the alternate form, פְּקָד, or פְּקָד, due regard being had to the laws of syllabication.

7. It should be remembered, that in every case in which a guttural letter is the second, or third, of such word; the accompanying, or preceding, vowel may be (-); as, זַרַע an arm (Art. 108.). For a list of nouns of this form, see the "Arcanum Formarum" of Simonis, p. 307, &c. The Dictionary will also supply them.

8. It should also be observed, that some Segolate nouns are, in their original forms, of the feminine gender (Art. 135. 5.): and that, generally, words do not, from masculines, receive the termination הַיִּת, as distinctive of that gender, except such as relate to sex. Abstracts are, nevertheless, often of the feminine form.

9. A considerable number of defective words are Segolates; of which, the following belong to this class, in particular: מוֹתָּהּ death (prim. מוֹתָּהּ, Art. 108.), which, in construction, or with the pronouns, will take the form מוֹתָּהּ (Art. 143. 6.): as, מוֹתָּהּ הַיִּלָּד, the death of the child, Gen. xxi. 16. So מוֹתָּהּ, מוֹתָּהּ, מוֹתָּהּ, &c., and in the plural number, מוֹתָּהּ, &c.; עוֹלָהּ iniquity, fem. עוֹלָהּ id. and contr. עוֹלָהּ; דוֹרָּהּ an age, generation (prim. דוֹרָּהּ Arab. ^{سور} Art. 87. 1.). דוֹרָּהּ, &c.

10. Examples with a medial י: צַיִד (prim. צַיִד, Arab. ^{صيد} hunting, fem. צַיִדָּה id. (Art. 87. 3.); קִיָּת (prim. קִיָּת, Arab. ^{كَيْت}), in constr. קִיָּת, with pron. קִיָּתִי, &c. (Art. 143. 6. 7.). The plural now in use, viz., קִיָּתִים, is evidently derived from some other primitive. See my Lexicon, p. 81.

11. Nouns doubling the last radical letter: גַּן a garden, prim. גַּנָּה, by (Art. 77.) fem. גַּנָּה id. (Ib.) And, with the pronouns, גַּנָּה, גַּנָּה, &c., plur. abs. גַּנָּה, for גַּנָּה, and fem. גַּנָּה, for גַּנָּה, in order, perhaps, to avoid the too frequent recurrence of the same sound. The form of construction, taken by the feminine, is גַּנָּת, instead of גַּנָּת, probably for the sake of variety. So פַּר pure (prim. פַּרָּה Arab. ^{بر}): fem. פַּרָּה, for פַּרָּה (Art. 109.) purity. In the plur. of constr. masc. פַּרָּה for פַּרָּה. The ר being incapable of receiving Dagësh.

12. With a medial ו and final א:—שְׁוֹאָה, prim. form, פְּתוֹךְ, and by apocope, שְׁוֹ (Art. 74.) vanity: fem. שְׁוֹאָה destruction, (Art. 87. 1.). So with ו, גַּיאָה prim. form, as before, a valley. In constr. גַּיאָה, and, by apocope, גַּי; but, in construction, גַּי; pl. גַּיאָה, and with the light affixes, גַּיאָה thy vallies.

13. With a final ו or י:—עֶד, by apocope (prim. עֶדָּה), eternity; so אֶרֶב, for אֶרֶב (Art. 87. 2.) a bulrush; שְׂחָה swimming.

14. With a medial כ:—אָף, for אָף (Art. 76.), the nose, anger; with the pronouns, אֲנִי, אַתָּה, אַתָּה, pl. אֲנֵינוּ, אַתְּמוֹת, &c; and in constr. אֲנֵינוּ. The absolute form of the plural does not occur: but in the dual, we have אֲנֵינוּ; which would have the same form, in construction, and with the pronouns, as those given above.

For further examples of this sort, the Student is referred to the "Arcanum Formarum" of Simonis, sectio v. throughout, or, to his Lexicon.

149. Of the Second Species of Segolate Nouns, which may be considered as nearly allied to the third.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.	Fem. Form.	IN CONSTRUCTION.
Prim.	Usual Do.			Masc.	Fem.
פָּקֵד, פָּקֵדָה	פָּקֵד, פָּקֵדָה	חֵלֶד, an age.	חֵבְרָה society.	חֵלֶד,	חֵבְרָה.
Alternate Form.		שֵׁבַע, a shoulder.	—	שֵׁבַע,	—

Nouns of this species occur but rarely; and it is doubtful, whether the last of these does not more properly belong to the primitive form פָּקֵד, as we have it with the pronouns שֵׁבַע, שֵׁבַע, &c. As a proper name (as some think) it occurs with the local הַ, in שֵׁבַע הַ towards Shechem, Hos. vi. 9.

In the first example, we have חֵלֶד, &c., with the pronouns.

150. Of the Third Species.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.	Fem.	IN CONSTRUCTION.
Prim.	Usual Do.			Masc.	Fem.
פָּקֵד, פָּקֵדָה	פָּקֵד & פָּקֵדָה	גֵּרֶד nard.	—	גֵּרֶד	—
		חֵלֶד a portion.	חֵלְקָה id.	חֵלֶק	חֵלְקָה
פָּקֵד, פָּקֵדָה		חֵבֶל a vanity.	חֵבְלָה kin.	חֵבֶל	—

The absolute form of the plural is here, as before, of the form, פָּקֵדִים, masc. and פָּקֵדוֹת, fem.: as, חֵלְקִים, but חֵלְקוֹת, does not occur. So חֵבְלִים pains; חֵבֶל vanity, חֵבְלִים vanities, and so of others. The pronouns are affixed thus: חֵלְקוֹ his portion; חֵלְקִי my portion; חֵלְקֵיהֶם their portion. So fem. חֵזְקָה, חֵלְקָתִי, חֵלְקָתְךָ, &c.—חֵבֶל pl. in constr. is חֵבְלֵי:—of חֵבֶל, חֵבְלֵי, &c.

הַטָּא sin, is with the pronouns, הַטָּאוּ, הַטָּאִים, &c. In the plur. abs. הַטָּאִים, constr. הַטָּאֵי: with the pronouns, הַטָּאֵי, הַטָּאִינוּ, הַטָּאִיכֶם, &c., and so on.

2. The nouns of this species are numerous. The following are a few examples: חֶפְצוֹ will, delight; עֲדוֹ pleasure, also the proper name of a place; הַחֶשֶׁב a girdle; הַחֶלֶב fat. But מַטֵּה a rod; מִצְחוֹ the forehead; שֶׁכֶל understanding, acuteness, with some others, takes the pronouns, &c. after the form פִּקְדוֹ: as, שֶׁכֶטוֹ his rod; מִצְחֹ his forehead; שֶׁכְּלוֹ his understanding. From עֲקֵב, which also occurs of the form עֲקֵבָי, we have עֲקֵבָי thy vestiges, Jer. xiii. 22; and, in construction, in the feminine gender עֲקֵבוֹת: but these may, possibly, be derived from different primitives.

3. The following are a few of the defective nouns, which seem to belong to this species: גֵּי a fleece; (prim. גֵּי Art. 77), fem. גֵּיָה for גֵּיָה, constr. גֵּיָת, masc., in constr. גֵּיָי cuttings; גֵּיָה fem. the cud (prim. גֵּיָר); חֶסֶד the palate (prim. חֶסֶד, Art. 76.), with the pronouns חֶסְדִּי, חֶסְדְּךָ, חֶסְדֶּם, &c. For further examples, see the "Arcanum Formarum," p. 326, &c.

4. Chaldaic and Syriac words often occur of the form פִּקְדוֹ: as כֶּסֶף; Heb. form כֶּסֶף silver; מַלְאָךְ counsel. So, in Hebrew, שֹׁאֵת instead of שֹׁאֵת elevation. See the "Arcanum Formarum," pp. 309, 310.

Of the Fourth Species of Segolate Nouns.

151. This, according to our arrangement, will comprehend all primitive nouns of the forms פִּקְדוֹ, and פִּקְדוֹ, but of the latter no examples occur.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.	IN CONSTRUCTION.
Primitive.	Usual.		Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
פִּקְדוֹ,	פִּקְדוֹ,	כֶּבֶשׂ a lamb.	כֶּבֶשָׁה,	כֶּבֶשׂ,	כֶּבֶשֶׁת.
		יָתֵר excellence.	יָתֵרָה,	יָתֵר,	יָתֵרָת.

2. Here, as before, the plurals, &c., are regularly formed: as, pl. abs. masc. כֶּבֶשִׁים, fem. כֶּבֶשֶׁת, the pl. masc. of construction does not occur in this example: but, for the fem. we have כֶּבֶשֶׁת. The only instance in which this word occurs, with the pronoun, is Job xxxi. 20. כֶּבֶשִׁי. So נֶדֶר a vow; צְדָקָה justice, righteousness; לְמַחֲ learning; בְּטִיחָה confidence; to which many more may be added. Of the Defective nouns, עִיר (עִיר) a city, pl. עִירִים for עִירִים.

(Art. 75.); פִּי the mouth (prim. פִּהּ, the latter ה being dropped, Art. 74, and the first changed to ך (Art. 80.). So with the pronouns: םִי for פִּי (Art. 75.) my mouth; ךִּי thy mouth; םֵי his mouth, &c. and, in the fem. plur. פִּיֹת mouths; masc. פִּים. The Learner should be informed, however, that it is often extremely difficult to say, to which of the forms such words as these belong; and, as it is of no very great importance to which they are attached, we shall on every occasion offer but a very few.

Of the Fifth Species.

152. These have the primitive forms פִּקֹד, and פִּקֹדָה, and constitute a considerable class of Nouns in the Hebrew Language.

FORMS.		EXAMPLES.	IN CONSTRUCTION.
Primitive.	Usual Do.		Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
פִּקֹדָה,	פִּקֹדָה,	קִדְוָה holiness.	אֶבְרָהָה meat.	קִדְוָה,	—
Alternate form.
פִּקֹד,	פִּקֹד,	קִשְׁט truth.	בְּאֵשׁ stink.	בְּאֵשׁ,	—

2. Of this last form, perhaps, no other word occurs, unless the Infinitives of the form פִּקֹד belong to it: these infinitives, however, upon receiving one or other of the pronouns, assume the same form with the first, viz. פִּקֹדָה, but are never found in the plural number.

3. The masculine plural, of the first of these forms, is regularly of the form פִּקֹדִים: as, קִדְוִים; the substitute for Shévá preserving the original vowel of the word, and, so far, its form. In the plural of construction we have קִדְוֵי; and, with the pronouns singular and plural, קִדְוֵי, קִדְוֵי, &c.; pl. קִדְוֵי, קִדְוֵי, קִדְוֵי, &c., all regularly formed. In the word ראש (for ראש), we have, in the plural, ראשים, and constr. ראשי, for ראשים and ראשי, by Art. 87. 5; ש being preserved to avoid ambiguity; and with the pronouns ראשי (for ראש), on account of the quiescence of ש in the preceding vowel (Art. id.), ראשם, ראשך, &c. The same form prevails, in the plural, with the pronouns; as, ראשיו, ראשכם, &c. In some instances, קָדַשׁ has been thought to take the same plural form: as, קָדְשִׁים, קָדְשֵׁי, &c., for קָדְשִׁים, &c. But in these cases, the primitive may have been of a different form: if not, this word is occasionally anomalous, or else is erroneously written. So, שָׂרֵשׁ a root, שָׂרְשִׁים, שָׂרְשָׁיו, &c.; but in construction שָׂרְשֵׁי פָּרֶן a threshing floor, fem. makes its abs. pl. שָׂרְשָׁיוֹת, for שָׂרְשָׁיוֹת, by a similar anomaly: and, in the pl. of construction, we have also שָׂרְשָׁיוֹת. From גָּדֹל we have גְּדֻלָּה his greatness; from קָמָץ, קָמְצוֹ, his handful, by adopting the obliquely corresponding vowel.

4. When the middle letter happens to be a guttural, the euphonic (◌◌) becomes (◌◌) (Art. 108.): as, תֵּאֵר form, בְּהֶק, a pustule, &c., while in some instances the (◌◌) remains: as, אֹהֶל a tent; בְּהֶן the thumb.

5. In some cases, Khôlém remains unchanged in the abs. pl. as, אֹהֶלִים; also with the pronominal affixes not termed grave: as, אֹהֶלְךָ, אֹהֶלְיָ; but, in construction and with the grave affixes, the first vowel becomes Kâméts Khâtúph: as, אֹהֶלְךָ אֹהֶלְיָ, &c. which is regular. D. Kimkhi takes it to be Kâméts.*

6. בְּהֶן the thumb, fem., forms the plural בְּהֶנוֹת, but does not occur with any of the pronouns. In the same manner are formed the plurals of נְבִיאָה splendour, and נֶכַח front, presence: as, נְבִיאָהוֹת and נְכַחָהוֹת; but these, according to D. Kimkhi, belong to some other form of the singular (perhaps נְבוּיָה, נְבוּיָהוֹ, &c.); as, נְכַחָה Amos iii. 10.

7. A few peculiarities prevail in the word בָּאֵשׁ ill savour, which deserve notice. Its original form seems to be בָּאֵשׁ; but, with the pronouns it is written בָּאֵשׁוֹ, בָּאֵשָׁם, &c. in which the o is drawn back (Art. 87. 5.). In the time of Kimkhi, however, it was irregularly written בָּאֵשׁוֹ, בָּאֵשָׁם, with א quiescent in (◌◌), which inclined him to think that the singular form must have been בָּאֵשׁ.

* Michlol, fol. 7, verso, which, according to him, is always the case when a guttural letter occupies the place of the second radical: as in אֹהֶלֵי אֶדוֹם the tents of Edom, Ps. lxxxiii. 7; אֹהֶלֵי הַכֹּהֲנָיִם the deflings of the priesthood, Neh. xiii. 29; תְּאֵמֵי צְנִינָה twin roes, Cant. vii. 5; but אֹהֶלֵי אֶדוֹם Ib. iv. 5, is, he thinks, derived from a different primitive. I believe, however, that in the above cases, (◌◌) is Kâméts Khâtúph, to be read as Khôlém; and if so, there is no irregularity in the word, although there is a slight one in the syllabication.

8. In those cases in which the last letter is a guttural, the sound of o is lost in the plural: as, רֶמַח a spear, pl. רֶמָחִים; but, with a pronoun it returns: as, רֶמָחֵיהֶם their spears; אֶרֶץ a way, makes אֶרְצוֹת pl. abs., but in construction אֶרְצוֹת.

9. Of the defective nouns, we have הֶתְהוּ for הֶתְהוּ emptiness (Art. 87. 2.); בָּהוּ, for בָּהוּ waste; מָרַר fem. constr. for מָרַרַת bitterness; to which others may be added.

10. These nouns are all regularly ABSTRACTS in signification (Art. 146. 8.): and, in many instances, where they appear not to be so, some translated sense takes its place: as, מֶלֶךְ a king, which originally meant possession, dominion, or the like, but which, in process of time, seems to have lost its primitive force. Perhaps it still retains that sense in Proverbs xiv. 28.

בְּרַב-עַם הַדְרַת-מֶלֶךְ וּבְאַפְס לְאִם מְהַתַּת רִזּוֹן :

“ In the multitude of people, is the glory of rule;

But in the diminution of a nation, is the stroke of poverty.”

In this case, מֶלֶךְ is opposed to רִזּוֹן, which seems to me to shew, that rule, or dominion, is the sense in which it ought to be taken. Some, indeed, have proposed to read רִזּוֹן prince, at the end of the second hemistich; but this will be unnecessary when we restore מֶלֶךְ to its primitive signification. In like manner the word سُلْطَانٌ Sultān, which means power, rule, or the like, has been applied to the Emperor of Constantinople; and in our own language we use Justice, Magistrate, Lordship, and many similar expressions, which were originally abstract nouns, in the same manner. See also Hosea x. 15.

On the Forms of the Second Class of Primitive Nouns, which are not Segolate, and which are all CONCRETES in sense.

153. Having laid down the different forms and inflections of the primitive nouns termed Segolate, we now come to others, also primitive, but which have not the peculiarity of punctuation found to prevail in them. These nouns have invariably the tone-accent on the last syllable: and, as it will be unnecessary to give the forms of the plurals in all cases,—of the noun when in the state of construction, and when in connexion with the several pronouns;—we shall do this, by pointing out, in each case, what vowels are mutable, and what are not so: giving, at the same time, the reason of such mutability, or immutability, as the case may be. The following, then, are the forms peculiar to this species of nouns: viz. I. פְּקָדָה: II. פְּקָדָה: III. פְּקָדָה: IV. פְּקָדָה: V. פְּקָדָה: VI. פְּקָדָה: VII. פְּקָדָה: VIII. פְּקָדָה: IX. פְּקָדָה: X. פְּקָדָה: XI. פְּקָדָה.* The feminine forms will be given in their places.

2. As the last example exhibits the feminine form, generally used in construction, nothing further need be said about it. In the first two, we have no vowel which can be said to be immutable. The plurals therefore, and pronouns, will take those forms, which a regard to the vowels and accents will suggest as proper: and the rule seems to be, that, in every case, the vowel farthest removed from the accent be rejected; as, יְקָרָה, in const. יְקָרָה (Art. 143. 3.) with the pronouns יְקָרָה, יְקָרָה, &c. pl. abs. יְקָרָה, in constr. יְקָרָה (for יְקָרָה, Art. 106. 1.) with pron. יְקָרָה, יְקָרָה, &c. with an asyllabic pron.

* If, however, we consider the forms, פְּקָדָה, and פְּקָדָה; פְּקָדָה, and פְּקָדָה; פְּקָדָה, and פְּקָדָה; and פְּקָדָה, and פְּקָדָה, respectively, as identical, the number of the forms will be reduced to six.

יְבָרֵךְ, יְבָרְכֶיךָ, &c. throughout. The same will hold good in all similar forms, in which the vowels are by analogy, as they are here, mutable.

3. In some instances the first (τ) is immutable; but, in these, it is believed to occupy the place of א: as פָּרָשׁ a horseman; Arab. فَرَسٌ;

pl. פָּרָשִׁים.

4. Nouns of these forms are, in sense, Concretes, and will therefore designate substances: as, אָדָם a man; בָּרֶד hail; בֶּשֶׂר flesh: epithets; as, חָכָם a wise man; רָשָׁע a wicked man.* In some cases they seem to be abstract: as, בִּכְאָ weeping; זַעֲקָה crying out, &c.; but this may have taken place by the operation of a metonymy, just as the contrary effect sometimes does in the Segolates (Art. 152. 10.).

III. פָּקֵד	פָּקֵדָה, or פָּקֵדוֹת	נָדָר a fence.	נָדָרָה, or נָדָרוֹת id.
		גָּזַל stolen.	גָּזְלָה id.
IV. פָּקֵד	פָּקֵדָה, or פָּקֵדוֹת	לָלַל howling.	אֲפֵלָה darkness.
	once פָּקֵדוֹת		עֲצֵלָת idleness.
			כְּבֵדוֹת heaviness.

5. In these forms, which are very nearly related to each other, the second vowel is, generally, immutable, the first not so: as, נָדָרוֹ his fence; נָדָרֶיךָ thy (fem.) fences; נָדָרֶיהָ her fences; pl. fem. נָדָרוֹת fences. Yet pl. constr. is נָדָרוֹת, עָרַל, fem. עָרְלָה, constr. masc. עָרַל, and עָרְלָה; masc. pl. constr. עָרְלִי uncircumcised, seems to bid defiance to all analogy. The probability is, however, that these irregular forms are derived from other primitives. This

* Whether the Hebrews ever considered words of this kind as adjectives, as we do, I very much doubt. But, whatever may be said on this subject, it is much more convenient,—in considering the structure of this language,—to treat them as epithets, including a substantive together with their attributive properties, as in the English word fool, &c. See the Syntax, Art. 217. 6: 219. &c.

being known, the vowels proper for construction, &c., are also known. In a few instances we have a י inserted: as, זְעִיר littleness; שְׁלוֹי tranquillity; פְּלִיטָה escape, which seems to account for the attendant vowels being immutable; and also to suggest, that some affinity exists between this and the next form.

6. The signification peculiar to these forms, is that of habit, custom, passion, whence they have by some been termed participles. Those of the third form are found in words signifying feeling, perception, or the like, and are often used as roots of verbs, having this shade of meaning: as, חָפֵץ willing; שִׂמְחָה rejoicing, &c.

VIII.	פְּקוּד	id.	גְּדוּד boasting.	נְבוּאָה prediction.

7. In all these cases the י, and ו inserted, are immutable, the other vowel is not: the plurals, &c. are, therefore, formed accordingly. In some instances the ו, or י, will be omitted, and their places supplied by (־) generally with Dāgēsh, or (ֿ) respectively; in all which, these vowels will remain immutable as before, for the purpose of preserving the original form of the word: as, בְּקָרָה a visitation, being visited, &c.; חָשֵׁךְ, masc. חַשְׁכָּה, fem. darkness. So עֲצָה fem. for יַעֲצָה advice (Art. 76.).

8. Forms V. and VI. are very nearly allied to the foregoing, both in form and signification; and from these, the forms VII. and VIII. scarcely present a shade of difference.* Simonis indeed makes a difference, but it is perhaps only an imaginary one. To the two last he ascribes the sense of past time, as if the action,—of which this form is usually said to present the object,—took place at some distant period; but innumerable instances may be pointed out, in which it has either a present, or a future, signification, according to the context. The truth seems to be, each of them implies habit, custom, &c., of such action, &c., as the root may signify; and, that in some roots, the one form is found to prevail; in others, the other.

* So זָבָד, and זָבִיר, bound, a captive; בְּחֹר, and בְּחִיר, chosen; לָדָד, and לָדָד, born, a son; מְשִׁיחַ, and מְשִׁיחַ, anointed Messiah: and so in a great number of cases, in which the textual reading has the one form, the marginal reading the other.

9. In these forms the ḥ Khōlēm, or its equivalent, (ח, or ח) only is immutable. We shall have therefore in the plural, &c. פִּקְדָּנִים masc. פִּקְדָּנוֹת fem. and גָּדוּלִים masc. גָּדוּלוֹת fem., the forms proper also for the state of construction, and for the pronominal affixes.

10. Of these forms, a few nouns will be found abstract in signification. פִּקְדָּן, with its feminine, is generally used as a participle or agent. Sometimes the feminine occurs, as, פִּרְיָה fructifera: (Art. 136. 5.).

11. It may be taken as a general rule, that, whenever a ח, or ח, or one of their equivalents (ח) or (ח), happens to be found in one of this class of primitive words, that vowel will remain unchanged under all circumstances. The reason is : these vowels, standing for ך, or ם, are the characteristics of these forms.

* In this, and several other cases, the obliquely corresponding vowel is taken. (Art. 95. 2: 136. 4.).

LECTURE VII.

OF THE AUGMENTED HEBREW NOUNS.

154. HAVING now considered the Primitive nouns of both kinds, we may proceed to the Augmented ones, which may be classed under four heads. I. Those found to double any letter, or syllable; which may hence be termed reduplicated. II. Those that are augmented by one, or more, of the letters, contained in the technical word אֶבְרָחָם , I have believed; reduplicating, or not, at the same time, any of their letters, or syllables. III. Nouns compounded of two or more others; each of which may be otherwise augmented, or not: and, IV. Foreign words.

2. It is evident that, whenever any addition is made to a word, some modification will be made in its sense. The great difficulty, however, consists in determining the law by which this process of augmentation is carried on; and thence in ascertaining the precise force of every form thus modified: and, it must be confessed, that, although a considerable number of instances occur in most languages, in which we can clearly perceive a peculiar force attendant on certain specific forms; yet, there are others in which no such power is discoverable; others again, in which one form is used for another, and even different forms linked together in the same phrase, and found corresponding to one another, in the parallel parts of the same context. To this may be added the figures of speech, which exercise a very considerable influence on the significations of words, and conspire very much to disconcert both the Learner, and the Learned, in enquiries of this nature. Still, we must not throw away all the helps we have, merely because they will not conduct us to absolute knowledge in every case: besides, further enquiry may throw much new, and even sufficient, light on this subject. We shall, therefore, follow the course just marked out, in detailing the forms of augmented nouns.

3. Writers on this subject generally agree in the following principles, viz. That, by augmentation will be expressed, either intensity, frequency, duration, defect, or the like, of the action, passion, habit, &c. contained in the signification of the primitive word:—that, in some instances, a word which is intransitive, will, by adding a letter, become transitive: as in the English words, rise, and raise; which, in the Hebrew, will be given in רָם (for רָמַר), and רָמַר , or רָמַרְמַר . A similar effect is produced in the Hebrew, by prefixing a letter: as, רָמַרְמַר , which will also signify raise, the root being רָם rise. In many cases, however, as already remarked, the real force of the augment is not perceptible; and in these, we must be content to abide by usage. As we proceed, however, it is my intention to offer some conjectures on the origin of the different augments; and, should I not succeed in producing conviction, I shall nevertheless gain my point, in another respect, namely, in impressing upon the Learner's mind, the different forms with which he will meet. Besides, by attempting to ascertain what these additional syllables really are, and what they mean, some light may be thrown on the manner, in which language in general has been constructed: which appears to have grown up, in a great measure, out of necessity: so that words, which now exceed their primitive length, have been made so, by the addition of others, qualifying, or otherwise modifying, their significations, as circumstances have required. In process of time, many of these additional words have become attached to others, and have been so abbreviated, as greatly to obscure their original forms and significations: e.g. The English word attempting, seems to be compounded of at, (ad, whatever that word was originally) tempt, and ing. The last component part is, probably, the same with the Latin Ens, Greek $\delta\nu$, Sanscrit, or Persian ān. Each part of this whole word might originally have stood singly; but the whole is now so compounded, as to stand for one. In such words also as incomprehensibility, transubstantiation, &c., I suppose we have not fewer than five, or six, primitive words confounded together in one.

4. The Greek and Latin prepositions, with which so many words are compounded, were perhaps at first also significant words: and, it appears to me probable, that their terminations of case and gender, no less than the various additions found, in the conjugations of their verbs, were all, at some time, significant words; which have been so attached to the root, as to supply the sense which these conjugations, &c. now bear. It may, indeed, be impossible now to ascertain exactly what they were; still, the attempt to do so, could not but be attended with beneficial results.

To proceed: the following tables will exhibit the forms with some examples of the first class of these nouns.

Of Reduplicated Words, Intensitive, or otherwise modified in their Signification.

FORMS.			EXAMPLES.
Masc.	Fem.	Masc.		Fem.
I. בִּקְדָּד	בִּקְדָּדָה	עֲקֵשׁ	very perverse.	אֲוִלָּה	great folly.
OR בִּקְדָּד	OR בִּקְדָּדָה	לִבְדָּד	teaching.	גַּבְבָּתָה	baldness.
	OR בִּקְדָּדָה	אֵלֵם	quite dumb.	יִקְרָה	prompt obedience.

5. To this form may be referred all those nouns, which,—on account of having a ך, or ך, for their middle radical letter, and therefore not convenient for reduplication (Art. 75.),—double the last: as, שׁוֹקֵהָ greatly desiring, fem.; שׁוֹקֵהָ id., root, שׁוֹקֵה; עוֹלֵלָה a sucking child, root עוֹלֵל. The same form is also found in words derived from roots, having the second and third radical letters the same: as, שׁוֹמָה, fem. שׁוֹמָהָ desolate, desolation, root שׁוֹמָה. The passive forms of these will be, שׁוֹמָה, שׁוֹקֵה, עוֹלֵל. &c. Some others double the last radical letter by Dāgēsh: as, קָטָן, pl. קָטָנִים, small; אֹפֶן, a wheel, pl. אֹפְנִים; שֵׁפָן a field-mouse, pl. שֵׁפָנִים; זָמַן time, pl. זָמָנִים, &c.

6. Some one vowel will, in all these cases, necessarily be immutable; the other occasionally so: e. g. עֲקֵשׁ &c., pl. abs. עֲקֵשִׁים, constr. עֲקֵשִׁי. The pronouns, therefore, will be affixed accordingly. Under this head may be placed all those verbal nouns, which are generally arranged as the infinitives, &c., of the Pihél conjugation.

7. As this form is taken for the root of one of the species of the Conjugation, some account should be here given of its force.

It has been laid down as a rule, that verbs, intransitive in the first species, will generally be transitive in this: as, לָמַד he learned; לָמַד he taught. The same property prevails in the Arabic: عَلَّمَ he knew; عَلَّمَ he taught. This they term the transitive property; التَّعَدِيَّةُ. The other dialects also recognise this property.

8. Another property is, the becoming, either in reality, or in estimation only, that which the primitive word signifies: as, בָּבְרָ he became, or, was adopted as, the first-born, from the primitive בְּבוֹרָ first-born: but this word, when used of trees as producing fruit, will mean prematurity.

Under this head may be placed all those cases, in which is intimated a Declaration, Announcement, Accusation, &c., of what the primitive word signifies: as, טָמֵא pronouncing, or accusing another of being, unclean; טָהַר pronouncing another clean. So perhaps, אָטָא pronouncing, confessing, &c. sin. And hence by a metonymy, expiating it.* These properties are termed by the Arabian Grammarians, التَّحْوِيلُ changing, النَّسْبَةُ referring to, and اِتِّسَامِيَّةٌ naming: as, I, رَوْضَ الْمَكَانِ the place became a garden, قَوَسَ الرَّجُلُ the man became BOWED, or bent like a bow. Where the English word bowed, is similarly formed from bow: so, فَسَقْتُ زَيْدًا, I vilified Zaid, i. e. pronounced him vile; كَفَّرَ زَيْدًا, he called Zaid an infidel; تَجَبَّيْنُ calling one a coward,

* This last property is termed by the Arabic Grammarians سَابَ deprivation: as, جَلَدْتَهُ I skinned him, or deprived him of his skin. Lumsden's Arab. Gram., p. 178. See also his Pers. Gram., vol. i. p. 230.

&c. Of this kind are, אֲשַׁרְיָנִי they shall bless me, Gen. xxx. 13; i. e. they shall declare that I am blessed; לֹא יִגְדֹקָהּ he shall not make innocent, i. e. declare to be so, Exod. xx. 7. The same may be said of all those passages given in this form, in which God is said to have hardened Pharaoh's heart. See Exod. iv. 21, ix. 12, x. 20. 27, &c., compared with Exod. vii. 13, 1 Sam. vi. 6, &c.*

9. Another property of this form is, to intimate Intensity, Abundance, or Frequency, of the action or passion signified by the primitive word: שָׁבַר he broke; שִׁבְרָה shivered, or broke, to pieces; צָמָה it shot up, grew; צָמָה it shot up quickly and abundantly. Equivalent to this, is the property termed المبالغة, or كثرة, of the Grammarians of Arabia: as, حَمَدَهُ he praised him very

* Hence from the noun צָדִיק just, we have the verb in this form, viz. צָדַק he pronounced, esteemed, some one just, i. e. he justified him, e. g. Jer. iii. 11, צָדַקְתָּהּ she justified herself. See also Job xxxiii. 32, &c. See also Buxtorf's Chaldaic and Talmudic Lexicon under זָקָה. Greek verbs in ἀζω, ἰζω, εὖω, ὕνω, ἀνω, ἀω, ἐω, ὄω, &c. have frequently this force: so Δικαίω, or Δικαιῶ, in the New Testament; so also 1 Cor. i. 20, ἐμώρπανε ὁ Θεὸς τὴν σοφίαν τοῦ κόσμου, τούτου, God hath made foolish, i. e. pronounced to be so, the wisdom of this world. So also with the verb ποιέω, which will give an equivalent sense, John xix. 7, ἐαυτὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐποίησεν, He made himself the Son of God, i. e. He declared himself to be so. In a similar manner the verbs נתן he gave, appointed, and שָׂם he placed, laid down, &c., will intimate the mere declaration of something done or to be done, e. g. Gen. xxvii. 37, נָגַדְתִּי לְגִבְרִי שְׂמָהוּ I have laid him down, declared him, great, וְאָחָיו כָּל־אֶחָיו נִתְהַי לּוֹ and all his brothers have I given to him, i. e. have declared shall be his. See Gen. xxxv. 12. Comp. Exod. xii. 25. So 1 Kings xxii. 23, נָתַן יְהוָה רִיחַ שָׁמֶר Jehovah hath given a spirit of lying, i. e. has declared that it is so. See Prov. ix. 9, where תֵּן give, in the first number, is explained by הִדַּע, make known, in the second. See also Ezekiel xx. 24—26. Other verbs too, not of this form but expressing some action, are occasionally used to signify a declaration of that action only; as in Jer. i. 10: to root out, to pull down, &c. Hosea vi. 5, I have hewed them by the prophets, &c. i. e. I have declared that they are, or shall be hewn. See Glass. Phil. Sac. Lib. III. Tract. III. Canon XV., &c. Storr. p. 26, &c. See also my Visitation Sermon, Cambridge, 1839. p. 58, seq.

much; جَرَّ he exercised his horse very much; صَرَحَ الْحَقُّ the truth became very apparent, &c.

10. In a few instances also, this form is thought to have a causative signification: as, הִלֵּךְ he walked; הִלְךָ he caused another to walk, &c.

or בְּקוּד	or בְּקוּדָה	אֲשׁוּר marching.	חֶבּוּרָה { the cicatrix of a wound.
		שְׁבוּל bereaved.	שְׁבוּלָה id.

The vowels will, in every case here, be immutable; the plurals, &c., will therefore be regularly formed, בְּקוּדִים, בְּקוּדָיִם, &c.

To this form are referred some words having י between the first and second radical letters, which is thought to be a mere compensation for the omission of Dāgēsh: as, בִּידוֹן, for בְּדוֹן, a spear; בִּידוֹר invasion; צִיּוֹן a fetter; and, according to some, שִׁילֹה Shiloh. But see my Lexicon under this word.

			בְּצָרַת sterility.

12. These nouns imply constant habit, or the like, and are used to designate *trades, professions, &c.

13. Both vowels are here necessarily immutable, the first on account of the syllabication; the second, because it seems to supply the place of א, by analogy: as, חָרַשׁ an artificer (Art. 153. 3.), pl. חָרָשִׁים, and, in construction, חָרָשֵׁי artificers; מַלְחָה a mariner, pl. מַלְחָהִים, with pron. מַלְחֵיהֶם their mariners. A few instances occur in which (◌◌) occupies the place of (-), or (◌◌): as, גְּהָרָה (Art. 87. 6.) and בְּהָרָה perturbation. To the feminine forms, Simonis adds, פְּקָדוֹת, of which two examples only occur, viz. חֲלָמוֹת coagulated milk, Job vi. 6; and פְּלִצוֹת terror, Ib. xxi. 6, &c.

	פִּקְדָּה, rarely.		לָקַחָה taken.

14. Simonis places יוֹלֵד Judg. xiii. 8, under this form; but nothing can be more probable, than that this is the third person singular of the verb, construed with ה in the sense of אֲשֶׁר, and to be understood in a future tense; e. g. הַיּוֹלֵד who should be born. Perhaps the word does not occur, construed as a simple noun, in any case.

15. Under this head may be classed all those nouns, which are generally arranged as infinitives of the Pūhāl conjugation, and may, therefore, be considered as passives, corresponding with the active forms, פִּקָּד, &c.

* The same forms have the same force in Arabic: as, عَطَّارٌ a perfumer, خَبَّازٌ a baker; from عَطَّرٌ perfume, and خَبَّزٌ bread. So in Syr. and Chaldaic, עֲזָן, Chald. עֲזָן, a singer, &c.

16. In all these cases, the first vowel is necessarily immutable; the last not so universally: but, as examples do not occur sufficiently numerous to decide this question, we can say but little about it.

17. These forms are thought to be intensive of those given under the preceding class (Art. 153.): but, whether such force is always to be found when they occur, is doubtful.

Of those Nouns which are said to be reduplicated by implication (Art. 109.).

155. These nouns are thought to have an intensive signification without presenting any reduplication, either in the vowels, or consonants: but, as they generally have a perfect vowel, occasionally immutable in the penultimate, it has been supposed that this presents a compensation for the Dāgēsh which has been omitted. The following are their forms:

3. With respect to the inflection of these words, the perfect vowel (·) in the first form, is sometimes immutable, at others not so. No rule, therefore, can be given, upon which reliance can be placed. With respect to the other forms, whenever the י, or ו, remains, its vowel is also immutable; but, when it drops, the defect may be compensated by inserting Dāgêsh in the consonant immediately following, as in the feminine דָּקָרָה, where the perfect vowel is supplied by its corresponding imperfect one; e. g. for בּוֹקְרָה, we have דָּקָרָה. So also, vice versâ, letters doubled by the insertion of Dāgêsh, will frequently lose this point; and then, the preceding imperfect vowel will change into its correspondent perfect one. Hence it is, that these forms are supposed to contain an implicit reduplication (Art. 109.), or, in other words, to be forms equivalent to those that have the middle radical letter doubled by a Dāgêsh forte. But, as the nouns of this class are few, it is scarcely possible to glean from the usage of the language, what vowels are mutable, and what are not so. For the same reason, it is impossible even to say, whether we are right in all cases in this our classification of them.

On the Augmented Nouns, termed הַאֲמַנְתִּי Hē-ëmantî.

156. In nouns of this description, one or more of the letters contained in the technical word הַאֲמַנְתִּי (Art. 147. 3.) will be found attached to either one or other of the preceding primitive, or augmented forms, for the purpose, apparently, of varying the signification. That these are fragments of words, I have no doubt; but, what they originally were, it may now be exceedingly difficult to say. I may, perhaps, be excused if I offer a few conjectures on this subject, hoping that, although I may not succeed to the extent that may be wished, I shall, nevertheless, afford something likely to fix these forms more permanently in the mind of the Learner; and this is my principal object.

2. Of these letters (viz. הָאֵמְנָתִי), one, or more, may be found at the beginning of words; while, ה, י, ס, ן, or ת, will be found at their endings. In some instances, indeed, words are found augmented by one, or more, of these letters, both at their beginning and ending, at the same time; having, also, the middle radical letter doubled by the operation of Dāgēsh forte, as in the Participial forms of Hithpāhél, מְתַפְקְדִים, מְתַפְקְדוֹת, &c.

On the Letters termed הָאֵמְנָתִי, when prefixed to words.

157. Simonis* supposes that nouns with א, or י, prefixed, have some affinity, in signification, with those persons of the verbs, which have these letters as preformatives; and that ת presents a force nearly allied to that of the Hithpāhél conjugation. This may, or may not, be true; but, as it leaves these conjugations, &c., unexplained, I have thought it right to consider the force of these adjuncts in the nouns: because, if we can succeed in this, we shall have no difficulty to contend with, in this respect, when we come to the verbs.

I suppose, then, that the letters ה, י, ת, and הַת, are nothing more than abbreviated forms of primitive words, which might have originally been written in full, and placed before others, for the purpose of modifying their sense. These might, in process of time, have lost some of their letters, and then have been compounded with others so as to present the forms which we now have. If, therefore, we can now find words which, when thus abbreviated, and joined with others, will give the significations which these augmented forms seem to have, we shall perhaps make this subject more intelligible, and interesting, than it has usually been.

2. With respect to the first, viz. א, with which we may join ה; we have perhaps a fragment of the root אָהָה (Arabic هَوَى هَوَى) desiring, impelling, casting down, and the like; to which, אָהָה,

* Arcanum Formarum, p. 522.

הָנִיָּה, and אָוִי, as expressing certain affections of the mind, may perhaps be added, as cognate roots. Upon this supposition, הַפְּקִיד (or אַפְּקִיד, for the Chaldee, or Syriac, form), will stand for אָוִיָּה, הָנִיָּה, or הָנִיָּה, פְּקִיד (Form VI. Art. 153.) impelling, causing, desiring, &c. another, to visit, &c. So אַכְזָב a willing, or great liar; אַכְזָב *willingly, or greatly cruel.

3. We may now consider the force of words thus augmented: and, as some of them are taken for the leading words of a certain species of the conjugation of Verbs, it will be as well now to determine their properties.

4. If, then, the primitive word have an active sense, as, אָשַׁע he heard, it will, in this form, generally have a causative one; as, הִשְׁמִיעַ caused to hear: but, if the primitive be neuter, this form will be active in signification: as, עָמַד he stood; הִעֲמִיד he set up; שָׂמַח he was glad; הִשְׂמִיחַ he rejoiced another.†

* It is remarkable, that the causative and other words in the Coptic are formed in precisely the same manner. "Verba composita," says Scholz. Gram. Copt. § 86. "e duabus vocibus coalescunt. In compositione verbum ερ esse, vel facere, ψεν suscipere, ϕι ferre, ρι projicere, χεε invenire, ςι accipere, † dare, sæpissime occurrunt: e. g. εροϕωμου lucere, ex ερ et οϕωμου lux . . . ψενεκαε pati, ex ψεν et εκαε dolor, ϕιρωϕυ curare, ex ϕι et ϕωϕυ cura, ριεν† fundare, ex ρι et εν† fundamentum, χεεκα† intelligere, ex χεε et κα† intellectus, ςιϕμου pudeferi, ex ςι et ϕμου pudor, †ωϕ glorificare, ex † et ωϕ gloria." In these cases, the words prefixed have precisely the same power with those above proposed; and one, viz., ρι projicere, is very nearly allied both in sound and sense to our א, or ה, particularly in the Hiph'il form הִפְקִיד, or הִפְקִיד, &c.

† These properties are also common to the Arabic: as, 1. حفر زيد نهرا ^{50 / 50} Zaid dug a canal; أحفرته نهرا ^{50 / 50} I caused him to dig a canal; 2. ^{50 / 50} بصر زيد ^{50 / 50} Zaid had the faculty of sight; ^{50 / 50} أبصرته ^{50 / 50} I saw him.

5. If, in the next place, the primitive be a noun substantive, or adjective; it will, in this form, generally signify the being, making, becoming, doing, suffering, permitting, &c. the sense of the root: הִבְרִיא he made fat; noun, בְּרִיא fat (Form V. Art. 153.); הִיָּיַן he used the right hand, or proceeded towards it; noun יָיַן the right hand. So הִשְׁמָאֵל he used, or went towards, the left hand; noun, שְׁמָאֵל the left hand; הִמְטִיר he caused rain; noun, מְטֵר rain; הִלְבִּין he became white, root לָבַן white; הִשְׁבִּיר he permitted (to purchase) provision, root שָׁבַר provision; הִשְׁאָר *he permitted (to) remain, root שָׁאָר remnant.

6. Another property is, exhibiting, declaring, or esteeming, the person or thing designated by such word, as possessed of the quality intimated by the primitive: as, הִצְדִּיק he declared, or esteemed, another just, from צָדִיק just; הִרְשִׁיעַ he declared, or esteemed, another wicked, from רָשָׁע wicked. So, in the Arabic, ^{كَلَّمْتَهُ} اَكْفَرْتَهُ I called him an infidel; ^{كَلَّمْتَهُ} اَخْلَطْتَهُ I accused him of sin.† To this property may be referred all those passages, in which this form is used, and in which God is said to have hardened the heart, blinded the eyes, made the heart gross, deceived the people, &c.—where nothing more than declaring this to be the case, appears to be meant.‡

* See Deut. ii. 28, 1 Sam. xxv. 22, Ps. cxix. 31, Is. lxiii. 17. These properties are all peculiar to the analogous forms in Arabic: see Lumsden's Arabic Gram., p. 173, &c.

† Lumsden's Arab. Gram., p. 175.

‡ Exod. vii. 3, x. 1, Deut. ii. 30, Is. vi. 10, comp. with Matth. xiii. 15. This property Storr refers to the influence of a metonymy. Observ. pp. 24, 28, &c., which he thinks amounts to nothing more than permission. See also pp. 194—5—6. This, however, leaves the matter nearly as unsatisfactory as it found it. Very nearly parallel to these Hebrew forms and usages, are those of the Greek verbs terminating in ἀζω, ἰζω, αἰνω, ὑνω, εὔω, ὄω, and ἐω, many of

7. Another property of this form is, excess, or intensity, of the action, passion, &c. afforded by the primitive word: as, הָיָאָדִים he was very red. So, in the Arabic, صَوَّبَ الصُّبْحَ the morning was very bright; ثَمَرَ النَّخْلَ the palm tree bore much fruit.

8. Many verbs not used in the first species of the conjugation (Lect. X.), have occasionally either a neuter or transitive signification in this form: as, הִשְׁקִים he rose early; הִשְׁלִיךְ he threw. Sometimes they will have both significations: as, הִקְיץ he watched, or he roused up another; הִרְגִין he sang, or he stimulated another to sing.*

9. Several of the properties, belonging to this form, are also common to that of בִּקֵּר, see Art. 154. 7.

10. When the ה is prefixed with (τ) Khātúph, (ν), or (ρ), as in הִפְקֵר, הִפְקֵר, or הִרְקֵם, the sense will then be passive, or rather will imply the becoming (passively) subject to the action, &c., contained in the active form. See the note to No. 13. below.†

11. With respect to (ν) prefixed to certain forms, it may perhaps which are manifestly derived from nouns: as, ἐοπράξω, from ἐορτή; νομίζω, from νόμος; σεμαίνω, from σῆμος; εὐδύνω, from εὐδός; παιδεύω, from παῖς; δουλόω, from δοῦλος; τιμάω, from τιμή; φιλέω, from φίλος, &c. See Glassii Phil. Sacr., Lib. iii., Tract iii., Canon xv. Ed. 1743. Note to Art. 154. 8.

* This is often the case in the unaugmented forms; the force will at one time be transitive, and at another neuter, in the same word.

† It will, perhaps, be difficult to assign a good reason for the adoption of this vowel, for the purpose of giving a passive signification to words in the Shemitic dialects. Nothing can be more certain, however, than this as a fact. And, hence, we not only have it in the passive conjugations of verbs, both in the Hebrew and Arabic, but also imparting a sort of passive, or rather habitual, signification to verbs, conjugated in the active form: as, יָקַץ he was strong; كِرِمَ he was beautiful; حَسِنَ he was beautiful; رَفَعَ he was exalted.

So in nouns, בָּרַחַב visited, i. e. habitually; صَابِرٌ patient, habitually, &c.

be a fragment of the root נָהַר, Syr. ܢܗܪ or ܢܗܪܐ , Arab. يَايَا decent, becoming, benign, beautiful, excellent, inviting one to rest, &c., which when compounded with any other word, may afford the sense of durability, strength, excellency, or the like, which Grammarians are generally agreed, is the force of words so combined; examples will be given in Art. 159. But, as no conjugation is grounded on this form, it will not be necessary to dwell very particularly on it here.

12. We now come to the forms having הַר, אַר, or רַ, prefixed. These fragments, then, we take to be derived from some word, which, when combined with any other, will give the modification of sense usually attributed to these forms. If we take אַרְהַר Chald. or Heb. אַרְהַר coming, arriving at, as the primitive word, and suppose אַר, הַר, or רַ, to be a fragment of it, we shall have a particle, which, when prefixed to any word, will give something like a passive or reciprocal sense; which all are agreed is the import of this form: e. g. אַרְהַרְקַר, or אַרְהַרְקַר, of the Chaldee form, or אַרְהַרְקַר, will mean coming, or, as we say in English, becoming, visited; and will be either passive, or reflective, &c., as the sense of the context shall require. So in Latin, amatum iri, in which the word iri is manifestly a form of the verb Ire, to go. The passives of the Persian, Hindustani, and probably of the Sanscrit, are formed in a similar manner.

Properties of the Conjugations grounded on this Form.

13. First to be, or become, that which the primitive word signifies (this, in the Arabic, is termed مطالوعة submission); as, אַרְהַרְנָאֵל he became polluted; אַרְהַרְחֵק he became strong; אַרְהַרְאָדָם he became red; or, if the context require it, he made himself so, reflectively, or, was made so, passively. So in the Arabic, أدبته فتأدب *I corrected him, and he became corrected, &c. In the eighth

* Lumsden's Arabic Grammar, p. 182—"Submission." Or, as the Arabic Grammarians define it, $\text{حصول اثر الشيء عن تعلق الفعل المتعدي}$ was therefore grieved; ^{לומה} ^{פאלתאם} he reproached him vehemently, and he became reproached.

14. Secondly, To feign, pretend, exhibit, &c. that which the primitive word signifies: as, Josh. ix. 4, ^{יִצְטִירוּ} they feigned themselves to be messengers; 2 Sam. xiii. 5, 6, ^{הִתְחַל} he pretended to be sick; Prov. xiii. 7, ^{מִתְעַשֵּׂר} boasting (himself) to be rich. So, ^{מִתְרַשֵּׁשׁ} feigning (himself) to be poor; ^{תִּתְחַסֵּד} thou shewest (thyself) gracious; ^{תִּתְמַם} thou shewest (thyself) perfect, Ps. xviii. 26. And, in Arabic, ^{تَشَبَّعَ} * he pretended

Nothing, I think, can be less accurate than to class the term ^{مَطْوَعٌ} with those of ^{غَيْرِ مُتَعَدٍّ}, ^{غَيْرِ وَاقِعٍ}, and ^{لَازِمٍ}, as Mr. de Sacy has here done. All that Beidawi means, is, that ^{يَتَفَطَّرُن} is more elegant than ^{يَنْفَطَّرُن}, because it is the ^{مَطْوَعٌ} (see the definitions above) of ^{فَطَّرَ}, not of ^{فَطَرَ}, as the other reading is.

The real difference between neuter verbs, termed by the Arabs ^{غَيْرِ مُتَعَدٍّ}, ^{غَيْرِ وَاقِعٍ}, and ^{لَازِمٍ}, and those of the forms here had in view, is, that they imply intransitive action, habit, rest, or inseparable properties; as, beauty, deformity, colour, &c.; whereas, in our case, ^{مَطْوَعَةٌ} or ^{مَطْوَعٌ} signifies the accidental influence of transitive verbs received in their subjects, or nominatives; which is the real difference between the Hebrew forms ^{נִפְקַד}, and ^{נִפְקָד}, as will be seen hereafter.

The real force, then, of this form will be best expressed by became, or the like: as in ^{נִהְיָה לְיָדָה} became walking, ^{נִבְרַח} became visited, &c.; which will lay the groundwork for the reciprocal sense, &c., the context always determining who the agent is.

* The fifth Arabic species has often a passive sense; and always in the Ethiopic.—It was shewn, Art. 146. 8, that certain forms had occasionally either an objective, or subjective, signification, according to the view in which they were taken; the same appears to be the case in these forms; and, hence it is, that these verbs have sometimes a passive, at others a reflective, and at others an active, signification. The same is the case in the Niphhal form; and apparently for the same reasons.

15. Thirdly, Frequency, or intensity, of the action, or passion, as meant by the primitive word: as, התהלך he walked about much, or continually; התחנן he solicited a favour with great earnestness. In Arabic, تشجع he persevered in shewing bravery; تحلم he persevered in acquiring mildness. And in the eighth Arabic species اكتسب he persevered in acquiring; and, in the sense of earnest request, ابتجر he demanded his hire.

16. Fourthly, In some cases, the sense is the same as it would have been, if the verb had been used in the primitive form termed Kal: as, השתמר he kept the laws, statutes, &c. This, with many other properties unknown to the Hebrew, is also found in the Arabic.*

For the transpositions and other changes which take place in certain words, when augmented by the particles הת, or את, see Art. 83.

17. Nouns, which receive מ at the beginning, will generally designate the Instrument, Agent, Action, Passion, State, or Place, by, or in, which the influence of any verb is exerted, suffered, &c., respectively: as, מגירה an ax (root גיר cutting); מפיקד one visiting; מקום a place (root קום standing).† מאמר act, duty, place of custody.

* It is a curious fact, that in the Arabic, the eighth species of the conjugation of the form انفعل, equivalent in force to our התפעל, has, occasionally, the sense of the first (فعل); in that case, the seventh انفعل is mostly used. Now, this seventh Arabic species corresponds exactly with our נפעל (see No. 19.); and, the consequence will be,—if these dialects mutually illustrate one another,—that the Hebrew התפעל, and נפעל, will have the same, or very nearly the same, force—see Ps. ii. 2, where both occur in the same passage:—and also, that both will generally not be found under the same root, unless the form התפעל have the force of the Kal.

† Hoffman's Gram. Syr., p. 244.

With respect to the cause of this variation of sense, Grammarians are generally silent. Simonis has supposed it to be equivalent to that, which the preposition ב, similarly situated, would supply.* I may be excused, if I offer a different solution. If we suppose, then, that the word originally prefixed was either מִי, or מִן, who, מֶה, or מָה, which, or what, as the sense might require; we shall have significations corresponding to those contained in the words of these forms, e. g. מִי פֶקֶד he who visits, or is visiting; and, striking out the vowel י, for the purpose of abridging the word, we shall have מִפְקֵד, as above. The same will be the case, if we take מִן פֶקֶד, for then the ל will be lost by Art. 76.—These, as agents, when the verb is transitive, constitute all the participial forms commencing with מ. In the next place, if we take מָה, or מֶה, that which, &c. and prefix it, contracted as before, we shall have, מִגְזָה an ax, for מָה גְזָה that which (is a) cutting, &c. So מַעֲשֶׂה a work, for מָה עֲשֶׂה that which (is a) doing; and so of others.

18. We now come to propose a conjecture on the prefix נ, and on the modification of sense, which primitive words undergo in consequence of its influence. If, then, we take this נ as the defective form of some primitive word, appearing sometimes in the form of נָה, at other times as נ only; we may suppose it to be derived from the root אָנִי, which, had it been preserved in the Hebrew, might have been written הָנָה, הָנָה, or הָנָה. The senses attributed to it by Castell are, among others:—“Ad extremum perfectionis terminum pervenit . . . asscutus fuit, seu perceptit. IV. Retinuit, detinuit, coercuit . . . V. Lenitate, modestiâ et patientiâ usus fuit, &c.” Supposing, then, this word, or some defective form of it, to be construed with any other, the sense of both taken together would, in general, give the force of the forms thus compounded. And, as this form of compound, is often used as the leading word of one of the species of the conjugation, it becomes the more important to ascertain its properties.

19. First Property: Primitive words receiving this particle, will have a sort of passive sense, or will exhibit subjection to the action implied by the primitive, accidentally, but not habitually: and, in this respect, they differ from words of the form פָּקוּר : as, נִבְרָכוּ בְךָ they (shall) become blessed in thee, Gen. xii. 2, i. e. in thy seed. So in the Hithpāhél, Gen. xxii. 18, וְהִתְבְּרָכוּ בְיָרְעֶךָ, and they (shall) become blessed in thy seed; i. e. their state shall be changed to that of blessedness: but, in the phrase, בְּרוּךְ יְהוָה blessed (is) Jehovah, we have no such intimation of accident or change: if, however, יְהִי be added, as in Gen. xxvii. 33, both forms will have precisely the same force. So שָׂכוּר will mean an habitual hireling; but, נִשְׂכָּר, a person hired on some particular occasion. So I understand Neh. vi. 12, 13, : סִנְבַלַּט שָׂכָרוֹ הוּא לְמַעַן שָׂכוּר הוּא Sanballat had hired him, because he was an habitual hireling; and 1 Sam. ii. 5, שְׂבָעִים בְּלֶחֶם נִשְׂכָּרוּ those who have been (habitually) full, are (accidentally or occasionally) hired for bread.

This property is common to the Arabic, and is termed by the Grammarians, as before, مطاوعة : as, بعثه فانبعث he sent him; and he was sent; اغلقتہ فانغلق I shut it, and it was shut. (See No. 13, above.)

This property of the Hebrew form (as a verb) was pointed out many years ago by Elias Levita, in a work entitled הִפְקוּר; but, as he supposed it also to involve a preterite sense, Glassius, and others, very properly objected; and the consequence has been, two distinct forms, viz., פָּקוּר, and נִפְקוּר, have been constantly confounded together; and, what is still worse, a tense has been ascribed to each, which is more than can be proved of either of them, or of any participle in this language.

20. Again: Words, receiving this augment subjecting them to the action implied by some primitive word, may, when the context requires it, also be construed as having a reciprocal sense, or as implying possibility, capability, exhibition, propriety, affectation, or the like, of the action, &c., meant by the primitive: as, נִשְׁמַר he guarded himself, 2 Sam. xx. 10, Mal. ii. 15. To this property may, perhaps, be referred many passages, in which this form seems to have a neuter signification: as, נִקְרַב he brings himself near, i. e. draws near, Exod. xxii. 7, Josh. vii. 14;—and, in a few instances, an active one: as, נִלְחַם he fought; נִשָּׁעַן he leaned upon; נִשְׁבַּע he swore; נִשְׁפַּט he contended, disputed; יֵאָדָּב it is, or may be, eaten, Gen. vi. 21. So, לֹא יֵעָשֶׂה כֵּן it is not, may not, cannot, or ought not, to be done thus; נִבְכָּר he shewed himself honourable; נִאֲדָר he shewed himself glorious; נִאֲנַח he sighed. Such significations, according to European idiom, these passages seem to require, while, in reality, became, or the like, will always satisfy the terms of the original. The subjective, or objective, force found respectively to prevail in these forms, was probably at first regulated by the view taken of the primitive noun. See Note on Art. 146. 8.

21. These properties are intimated, in the Arabic, by the terms اللزوم والعلاج, necessity and remedy; which, Mr. Lumsden says, indicate “that verbs of this class must be INTENSITIVE by their own nature, and significant of actions performed by the members of the body:” but the examples he adduces are not confined to this rule: كسرت he broke, is as much an active verb as any other can be; which, when thus augmented, becomes passive, not neuter: nor has انحمت, and انحمت the market was unfrequented, any thing to do with the members of the body. I am induced to believe, therefore, that the terms اللزوم والعلاج, are to be understood as intimating the properties just mentioned.

158. TABULAR VIEW EXEMPLIFYING THE FORMS ABOVE-MENTIONED.

First Class of Hëmanté Nouns, having an S prefixed.

I. סְפָקָה, and סְפָקָה, fem. סְפָקָה, סְפָקָה home-born, indigenous, אָהִיָּה (changing (τ) to (·)), on account of the following ה, Art. 139. 7, note), δ ὄων, a name of God, Exod. iii. 14, אֶזְעָדָה a bracelet, אִיָּהוּ (for אִיָּהוּ Art. 87. 5.) strength, אֶרְבֵּנוּ reward, wages, אֶזְבַּע a finger.

II. אֶפְקוֹד the fist, אֶפְרוּחַ the young of any bird, אֶתְמוֹל sometime ago, yesterday, אֶשְׁבּוּל grapes.

III. אֶפְקוֹד, fem. אֶפְקוֹדָה; as, אֶחָלֶם an amethyst, אֶכְזָר very cruel, אֶכְזָב very false, אֶזְכָּרָה recollection, אֶסָּם (for אֶסָּמָם Art. 73.) a granary, אֶקוֹ (for אֶקָּו, or אֶנָּקוֹ, Art. 87. 1. and 76.) an animal so called.

IV. אֶפְקוֹד; as, אֶבְנֶט a girdle, אֶרְבֵּה the locust.

V. אֶפְקוֹד, fem. אֶפְקוֹדָת; as, אֶשְׁפּוֹרָה a dunghill, אֶשְׁמִירָה guard, custody.

VI. אֶפְקוֹד, fem. אֶפְקוֹדָה; as, אֶקוֹדָה (for אֶקוֹדָה, Art. 73.) a cruet, אֶשְׁמִירָה guard, custody.

VII. אֶפְקוֹד; as, אֶבְבֵּל, or אֶבֶל, (for אֶבְבֵּל) a (never-failing) river.

VIII. Some nouns, which lose one of their radical letters by contraction, assume the form of the Segolates: as, אֶפְקָה (for אֶכַּפָּה) the palm of the hand.

2. Nouns of this class are few; and, of the last form, perhaps, a second does not occur. It is curious enough to remark, how easily nouns, deprived of any of their vowels, slide into the Segolate forms. We shall see, hereafter, that the same thing often takes place in the conjugations of the verbs, in similar cases.—It will be seen, that I have not entirely followed the classification of Simonis. My reason for doing so was this: he seems to me to have given some forms without examples to bear him out; and, in one case, he has given a form אֶפְקוֹד, for which he has only one example, and that example he has also given, in another class. (See אֶבְבֵּיחַיִם, pp. 547 and 639. Arcan. Form.)

159. Second Class of Hēemanti Nouns, having י prefixed.

I. Form יֶפְקוֹד; as, יֶזְהָר oil, יֶזְחָק Isaac.

II. יֶפְקוֹד; as, יֶעֱנָה the ostrich.

III. יֶפְקוֹד, or יֶפְקוֹד, fem. יֶפְקוֹדָה: as, יֶחִיל (for יֶחִייל) one who expects, יֶרֶךְ (for יֶרְכָה) the thigh, יֶרֶב (for יֶרֵיב) a disputant, יֶנִּיקָה (for יֶנִּיקָה) a germ, stem, &c.

IV. יִפְקוֹד : * as, יְחֹלֶם an adamant, יְנַשֵּׁן an owl.

V. יִפְקוֹד : as, יְחֹמֵר a species of goat, יִקְוֵט a purse, יְקוֹם being (for יְקוֹם Art. 73.)

VI. יִפְקוֹד : as, יוֹבֵל (for יְנַבֵּל Art. 87. 2.) a constant river. And, according to some, the Segolate יִרְבֵּה thigh (for יְרַבֵּה, the last radical being rejected, and the (·) added, as in other Segolates, for the sake of Euphony.

2. In this class also, is placed, as a special anomaly, the word יְהוָה Jehovah,† with a caution however, that these vowels do not exhibit the ancient pronunciation of the word. The Jews, as it is known to every one, never pronounce this word, but substitute either יְהוֹיָה, or יְהוֹיָה, for it; and hence it is, that we sometimes find it pointed יְהוָה, i. e. with the vowels proper for the word יְהוֹיָה; which is invariably the case, when יְהוֹיָה, and יְהוָה, occur together. The reason is, the word יְהוֹיָה would in this case be pronounced twice, which is not desirable; the word יְהוֹיָה is, therefore, pronounced instead of it (see page 28, note). That Jehovah is not the ancient pronunciation most writers are agreed: but, what that was, it is perhaps impossible now to determine. Some have proposed יְהוָה Yāhāvō, of the form יִפְקוֹד, as Capellus, Walton, Clericus, &c. Others have proposed יְהוָה, יְהוָה, or יְהוָה, as Mercer, Montanus, Amama, Scaliger, &c., taking the Samaritan pronunciation of it, as preserved by Theodoret, Ἰαβέ.‡ Others, again, take the Latin Jove; but which of these is nearest to the original pronunciation, no one can say. The word is probably formed of הוָה, Ens. Eccl. ii. 22. &c. with י, prefixed. Art. 157. 11. lit. Great, &c. Being.

160. Third Class of Hēemanti Nouns, beginning with ה.

These forms, according to Simonis, and Reimarus, as quoted by him, were not much in use before the time of the Captivity. He takes the liberty, however, of excluding all the Infinitives of the Hiphhîl conjugation, which he ought not to do; because these

* Simonis places יִפְקוֹד under this form: but, as there is some difficulty in ascertaining the root from which it is derived, and as the word is, perhaps, of Egyptian origin; it may as well be omitted.

† See Art. 139 7, note.

‡ Simonis Arcanum Formarum, p. 545.

infinitives are certainly nothing more than nouns, upon which that species of the conjugation is constructed; and, if this be the case, there will be no reason why they should not be considered as forming a part of this class.

Examples.

I. Form: הַפְקִיד, or הַפְקִד; as, הַמְשָׁל, rule, dominion, הַשְׁפִּיל, intelligence, הַשְׁמִיעַ, proclaiming, causing to hear, הַסְבִּב, for הַסְבִּב, causing to turn, הַפְּיץ, for הַפְּיץ, dispersing, הַשְׁאָה, for הַשְׁאָה, seduction. Roots ending in silent ה, often reject it, in words of this kind, and take וֹת as their terminating syllable: as, הַרְבֵּה and הַרְבֵּוֹת multitude, הַעֲלוֹת, elevation, &c.*

II. הַנְחִיחַ; as, הַנְחִיחַ (for הַנְחִיחַ) tranquillity, הַנְּפֶה (for הַנְּפֶה) agitation, הַנְּצִיחַ (for הַנְּצִיחַ) liberation.

III. הַפְּקִיעַ; as, הַפְּקִיעַ (for הַפְּקִיעַ) termination, cessation.

IV. הַפְּקִיעַת; as, הַשְׁמָעוֹת, relation, † &c.

V. הַפְּקִיד; as, הַפְּקִיד, pouring out (pr. הַפְּקִיד Art. 76.).

VI. הַפְּקִיד (for הַפְּקִיד); as, הַלְחֵם, (for הַלְחֵם) making war; and so all the Infinitives of the Niphhâl species.

VII. הַפְּקִיד, or הַפְּקִיד; as, הַפְּקִיד visited, appointed, הַיָּבֵט, slain (for הַיָּבֵט, or הַיָּבֵט, Art. 87. 2.). These forms have a passive signification (Art. 157. 10.).

2. It will immediately be seen, that the forms to which the particle ה is here prefixed, are by no means peculiar to the Hiphhâl conjugation; and, consequently, that no one can, without violating the principles of analogy, derive them from that conjugation. The truth appears to be, that, the Hiphhâl conjugation is nothing more than the adjunction of one, or other, of the pronouns to words of the form פְּקִיד, &c. to which also the particle ה, (or ה for the Chaldee form) is prefixed, for the purpose of varying the sense, as already noticed.

* These, however, are probably compound nouns, formed of the original root with וֹת, a contracted form of הוֹת being, for הוֹת. See Art. 139. 7. note.

† Words having this termination are also compounds, formed of the Hëemanti noun, and the word הוֹת contracted to וֹת, by Art. 87. 2, &c. The signification of such words, ending in וֹת, and וֹת, is, that of the state of action, or passion, denoted by the primitive word; as, מַלְכוּת, a kingdom, or state of reigning; רֵאשִׁית, first state, or beginning (Art. 87. 2. 4.).

161. Fourth Class of Hēemanti Nouns, commencing with מ.

I. מִפְקֹד, fem. מִפְקֹדָה, מִפְקֹדָה, or מִפְקֹדָת : masc. מִגְדָּל a tower ; fem. מִלְחָמָה war, מִצְעָקָה* oppression, מִשְׁמֶרֶת custody.

II. מִפְקֹד ; for which Simonis gives only one example, and that has suffered contraction : as, מִסְבָּב, for מִסְבָּב.

III. מִפְקֹד ; as, מִסְכָּן poor ; with final ה, מִזְרָה a fan, &c.

IV. מִפְקֹד, fem. מִפְקֹדָה, or מִפְקֹדָת ; as, מִזְמוֹר a psalm, מִשְׁקָלָת a plummet.

V. מִפְקֹד ; as, מִלְגָּד a goad, מוֹתָר, for מוֹתָר, gain (Art. 87. 1.), מִפְּל, for מִנְפֵּל, soft, &c. (Art. 76.).

VI. מִפְקֹד ; as, מִחְנָק (Art. 106. 2.) strangling.

VII. מִפְקֹד, or, מִפְקִיד, fem. מִפְקִידָה ; as, מִמְבֵּחַ a slaughter-house ; מוֹפֵת, for מוֹפֵת, (Art. 87. 1.) a wonder, מִרְאָה a vision, מִזְרִיעַ producing seed, מִבְּדִיל dividing, מִדְּמִנָּה sterquilinum, מִחֲתָה (for מִחֲתָתָה) consternation, מִכְתָּה (for מִכְתָּתָה) contusion.

VIII. מִפְקֹד, fem. מִפְקִידָה, or מִפְקִידָת ; as, מַחְסוֹר want, מִטְמוֹן hidden (treasure), מִרְקָלָת trading, מִמְאֲכָלָת food, and מִנְוֶרָה (Art. 73.) a candlestick.

IX. מִפְקֹד, fem. מִפְקִידָה ; as, מַאֲבֹיִם a stall, מִבְּוִיל, for מִנְבּוּיל (Art. 76.) a deluge, fem. מִבּוֹסָה trampling, (for מִבּוֹסָה Art. 73.)

X. מִפְקֹד ; as, מִבְּטָא, for מִנְבְּטָא (Art. 76.) expectation, מִתְוִיָּה vision (Art. 106. 2.)

XI. מִפְקֹד, or מִפְקֹד ; as, מִעֲצָמָד station, with all the participles usually ascribed to the Hophhal conjugation.

XII. מִפְקִיד, מִפְקִיד, and מִפְקִיד ; as, מִפְקִיד one who takes account, with all the participial nouns usually attached to the Pihél species. The remaining two are only variations of the same form, and occur but rarely.

XIII. מִפְקֹד ; as, מִלְמָד learned, מִגְלָה discovered. To which may be added all the participles usually ascribed to the species of Pūhál.

XIV. מִתְפַּקֵּד ; as, מִתְפַּלֵּל an invader, &c., with all the participles of the Hithpāhél species.

XV. Some defective nouns, which, for ease of pronunciation, assume a Segolate form, are derived from roots either having a medial ו, or י, or doubling the second radical, or having ה for the third. The forms will vary with those of the Segolates, and for the same reasons. If, therefore, we reject the last radical, &c., and prefix מ, we shall have מבק, for מפקד, pointed מִבְּקָה, מִפְּקָה, מִפְּקָה, מִפְּקָה, מִפְּקָה, &c., as the nature of the word shall require, or rather, as the jus et norma loquendi has established: as, מִכְּסָה, number, sum; fem. מִכְּסָה (root כסס); מַעַל, or מְעַל elevation (root עלה); מְמַד, pl. מְמַדִּים measures (root מדד); מַצֵּד, or מַצְד, a lurking place (root צוד or צוד); מְתוֹם, or מְתָם, soundness (root תמם), &c.

2d, Simonis thinks (p. 450, Arcan. Form.), that the participles should not be considered as nouns of the הֶאֱמַנְתִּי class. I believe they ought to be so considered; because I hold, that, properly speaking, there are no Participles in the Hebrew language. It is true, the Grammarians have placed a number of these nouns, in the same page with the paradigm of the verbs; but, it will not hence follow, that they are possessed of any of the properties of real Participles. If, indeed, it could be shewn that they involve the tenses of the verb, as the Greek participles do, the opinion of Simonis, &c., would have some weight; but this has not yet been done; and, I think, cannot be done satisfactorily. I have, therefore, thought it most conducive to the progress of the Student, as well as more conformable with the analogy of the Language, to class them all as nouns: it being from the context alone, that any thing like tense can be discovered; which may be said of every sort of noun in this language.

162. Fifth Class of Hēemanti Nouns beginning with נ, or הן.

I. נִפְקָד, נִפְקָד, נִפְקָד, נִפְקָד, or הִנְפְקָד; as, נִצָּב (for נִנְצָב, fixed, set up); נוֹשֵׁב, for נִוֹשֵׁב (Art. 87. 1.) inhabited; נָסַב (for נִנְסָב) turned back, &c. So all the participles, and preterites, of the Niphhal conjugation, with this difference, that the participle ends in (τ), the preterite in (-); also, נִהְפּוּהוּ turned about; נִחְתָּמוּ sealed; הִלְחָמוּ making war (for הִנְלָחָמוּ, Art. 76.); הִאֲכִיל (for הִנְאֲכִיל, Artt. 76. 109.)

II. נִפְקָד; as, נָסַב (for נִנְסָב), as נָסַב above. This form is mostly found in words doubling their last radical letter, but not in the Niphhal conjugation: which,—as in nouns commencing with ה, —should shew that the conjugation is not the source of the form in any case.

163. Sixth Class of Hēemanti Nouns having ת prefixed.

The forms commencing with ת, as given by Simonis, are the following :

I. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה; as, תִּקְוָה hope; תִּגְרָה conflict; תִּמְרָה (for תִּמְרָה, Art. 87. 5.) self-exaltation.

II. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה, and תִּפְקֹדָת; as, תִּירוּשׁ (for תִּירוּשׁ) new wine; תִּפּוּצָה (for תִּפּוּצָה) dispersion; תִּלְבָּשֶׁת clothing.

III. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה, or תִּפְקֹדָת; as, תּוֹלָד (for תּוֹלָד) and תּוֹלָדָה generation, succession; תּוֹחֵלָת hope, expectation; תַּחֲמָס an ostrich.

IV. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה, or תִּפְקֹדָת; as, תִּרְעָלָה trembling, giddiness; תּוֹכַחָה (for תּוֹכַחָה), and, on account of the guttural, תּוֹכַחָת (for תּוֹכַחָת) reprehension; תִּפְלָלָה (for תִּפְלָלָה) intercession; תִּבְלִיָּת (for תִּבְלִיָּת) self-consumption; תִּבְנִיָּת (for תִּבְנִיָּת, Art. 87. 4.) form, pattern; תִּרְמִיָּת (for תִּרְמִיָּת, Ib.) deception; and תִּזְנוּת (for תִּזְנוּת*) whoredom.

V. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה; as, תִּלְמִיד a disciple; תִּכְרִיז a robe; תִּצְנִיָּה self-torment (for תִּצְנִיָּה, Yód in many instances standing for ה, and, being doubled in this place, makes compensation for the rejected ה.)

VI. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה, and תִּפְקֹדָת; as, תִּמְרִיָּן self-purgation; תִּמְרִיר self-embittering; תִּהְלֶכְהָ (for תִּהְלֶכְהָ) continual walking; תִּהְפֶּכְהָ self-perversion; תִּנְחַמָּת a proper name, Jer. xl. 8, &c. So תִּשׁוּבָה (for תִּשׁוּבָה, Art. 73.) conversion; תִּשׁוּמָה (for תִּשׁוּמָה) and תִּשׁוּמָת, reciprocal striking of hands in making a bargain, &c.

VII. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה; as, תִּחְרָא, or תִּחְרָא a breast-plate, תִּלְאָה (for תִּלְאָה) weariness, תִּעֲלָה (for תִּעֲלָה), self-exaltation.

VIII. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה; as, תִּרְמָה (for תִּרְמָה), deceit, תִּיגָה (for תִּיגָה, Art. 73: 86. 2.) grief, תִּיאָה (for תִּיאָה, contr. for תִּיאָה, or תִּיאָה) occasion, opportunity.

IX. תִּפְקֹד, fem. תִּפְקֹדָה, תִּפְסִין (for תִּפְסִין, from the root יפן or ופן), division, separation, תִּישִׁיָּה (for תִּישִׁיָּה), solidity, substance, wealth.

* See Art. 87. 2., and the note.

X. Here, as in the former case, the rejection either of the last, or the second, radical, will reduce the nouns to one or other of the segolate forms : as, תִּבְּלָל confusion, for תִּבְּלָלָל perhaps) : the latter ל being rejected in order to avoid the repetition of similar sounds, we have תִּבְּלָל, which, for reasons already assigned, (Art. 148. 2.) will become תִּבְּלָל. In the same manner, we have תִּמְסָם (for תִּמְסָםם melting, dissolution, &c., to which many others may be added.

XI. תִּפְּקֹדָר; as, תִּבְּלָלָל suffusion (of the eye). To which may be added a few others, reduplicating some one of the radical letters : as, תִּקְוָמָם self-elevation, &c.

It must have appeared, I think, that the forms to which this letter ת is prefixed, are by no means peculiar to the Hithpāhél conjugation ; but, that they exhibit a great variety of other forms. I cannot help thinking, therefore, that this conjugation owes something to this letter, or to its more perfect form הַת, or אַת ; while the adscititious particle owes nothing whatever to the conjugation.

164. Seventh Class of Hēemanti Nouns, receiving הַת as a prefix.

I. תִּפְּקֹדָר; as, הַתִּנְחָשׁ (Art. 109.), genealogical computation. So all the infinitives of the Hithpāhél conjugation, due regard being paid to the radical letters composing such words. הַשְׁתַּיְחַוְוִי my prostrating (2 Kings v. 18), with the pronoun י, seems to be an anomalous word, deformed, perhaps, by the carelessness of the copyists.

II. תִּפְּקֹדָר caused to be visited; but perhaps this form never occurs as a noun.

III. תִּפְּקֹדָרָת; as, הַתִּחְבְּרוּת *confederation, &c.

In a few instances we have had, in the above examples, terminations in הַת, תַּת, and רַת, which may be said to be Hēemantic. In these cases, therefore, we have anticipated our next chapter, which is to treat on the Hēemantic postfixed syllables : but, as we could not adduce our examples without bringing in these forms, we shall perhaps be excused.

* But this is, I perhaps, a compound form, as before, Art. 87. 2. and note.

LECTURE VIII.

ON THE HEEMANTI LETTERS POSTFIXED TO WORDS.

165. IT has been stated, (Art. 156. 2.) that, the Hëemanti letters ה, י, ם, ך, and ת, are severally found attached to the ends, either of primitive, or derived, words. The cases in which ה, ת, ות, ית, are so found, have already been noticed (Artt. 135. 6, 137. 2, 164.). It will be unnecessary, therefore, to notice them further. We shall now proceed to consider those which end in י, ם, and ך, respectively.

Eighth Class of Hëemanti Nouns ending in י-.

166. These nouns, ending in י-, are used to express either persons, or things, bearing some relation to the primitives from which they have been derived: and hence, they have been termed Relative Nouns by the Arabian Grammarians.* Of this kind are the Patronymic, or Gentile, nouns of the Grammars of Europe, all of which must from their nature necessarily be attributive, and, therefore, subject to the variation of the gender. (Art. 135.)

2. In endeavouring to account for the form and signification of this class of words, I shall suppose, as before, that the additional letter (י) is the fragment of some word; which, if used at length, would impart the same signification, which (י) now does, to words thus augmented. In the Ethiopic we have the trilateral adjunct יי, used for the purpose of forming nouns of this class †; and, occasionally, in the Arabic وي, وي,* which is also further abbreviated into ي, ي; † the augment universally found to prevail in the Hebrew.

* الاسم المنسوب

† See Ludolf's Ethiop. Gram., fol. edit., pp. 95. 97.

3. That the meaning attached to the root وي in the Arabic, is suitable to the signification of these words, the following definition of it, given by Golius, will be sufficient to shew:—“Se recepit, commorandi vel quiescendi ergo, diversatus fuit interdium vel noctu.” Applying this, then, to any proper name, we shall have both the form, and signification, proper for these Patronymics; e.g. Ethiopic form ישראלאי Israelawi: Hebrew, and Arabic, by contraction, ישראל, إسرائيل a person related to the patriarch Israel, by connexion, residence, birth, &c. So יהודי (for יהודה, Art. 75.), a descendant of Judah; and so of others.

4. It may be considered confirmatory, moreover, of this conjecture, that these Hebrew nouns, when receiving any assyllabic augment, are generally found with the י doubled by Dāgēsh: as, לויים Levites; תחתיהם below, &c., which, indeed, are their true forms. See Art. 136. 5. †

5. The following are a few examples, with their primitives: כנעני a Canaanite, from כנען Canaan; נגיד princely, from נגיד a prince; רעי pastoral (for רעהי by contraction), from רעה a shepherd; צפוני belonging to the north, from צפון the north.

6. When, however, the primitive word ends in י, the Patronymic is formed by prefixing the definite article only; ‡ as, מושי Mūshī, a son of Merari: המושי one of his descendants; גדי the name of one of the sons of Gad; הגדי one of his descendants. So גדי, patronym; הגדי, Gen. xlv. 24. In one instance, ה is prefixed instead of ה; which may have been done for the purpose of avoiding the concurrence of two aspirates: as, תחמוןי Takhkēmōnī, 2 Sam. xxiii. 8, from תחמון, 1 Chron. xi. 11. We have, however, מדי, for מדי, a Mede, Dan. xi. 1, from מדי Media.

* See Mr. de Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. p. 239, &c.

† The teshdid, which is also found to accompany this ي in Arabic, was, perhaps, added originally for the purpose of supplying the defect occasioned by the rejection of one, or two, letters from the primitive form.

‡ Of this property of the definite article, some account will be given hereafter.

7. In forming Patronymics from compounds, two methods have been adopted; one by adding י, as before, which is regular; the other, by also prefixing the article to the last word in the compound. Examples: 1. בֶּן יְמִינִי a Benjamite; 2. בֵּית הַלְּהֵמִי the Bethlehemite, 1 Sam. xvii. 58; בֵּית הַשְּׁמֶשֶׁי the native of Beth Shemesh, from בֵּית שְׁמֶשׁ; בֵּית הַבֵּתְלִי the native of Bethel; בֶּן הַיְמִינִי the Benjamite, 1 Kings ii. 8.

8. Nouns, ending in י, never form the Patronymic by the addition of ה, but by some periphrasis: as, בְּעַלְיִירִיחוֹ the citizens of Jericho, Josh. xxiv. 11. So אֲנָשֵׁי יְרִיחוֹ men of Jericho, Neh. iii. 2; יְרִיחוֹ בְּנֵי יְרִיחוֹ children of Jericho, Ib. vii. 36; בָּנוֹת שִׁילֹה daughters of Shiloh, Judg. xxi. 21. In a few instances, נִי is added: as, חַגְגִּילוֹנִי, from גִּלּוֹה Giló, 2 Sam. xv. 12, Josh. xv. 51.*

9. The same frequently takes place in compound words: as, בְּנֵי קִרְיַת חָרִים the children of Kiryath Harim, Ezra ii. 25; בְּנֵי עֲמֹנֶת the children of Hazmáveth, Ib. ver. 24.

10. Proper names, ending in ס, are sometimes subject to the same rule: as, אֲנָשֵׁי סֹדֹם men of Sodom.

11. In Patronymics, derived from compounds, the last only of the compound is sometimes taken: as, אֶרֶץ יְמִינִי, for אֶרֶץ בֶּן יְמִינִי the land of the Benjamite, 1 Sam. ix. 4.†

12. Some primitives, ending in ך, drop that letter in forming the patronymic: as, הַנְּחָמִי Hannāhamí, Num. xxvi. 40, from נְחָמָן Nāhāmán.

13. In forming Patronymics either from dual, or plural, words, one or other of the following methods is adopted: 1. The word, from which such Patronymic is to be derived, is reduced to its primitive form, and then ה is added, as before; as, מִצְרַיִם Egypt, primitive מִצְרַיִם, and with ה, מִצְרַיִי an Egyptian. 2. Either יוֹשֵׁב inhabitant, בַּת daughter, or מִן out of, may precede such proper name: as, יוֹשֵׁב יְרוּשָׁלַיִם inhabitant of Jerusalem; Isa. v. 3, בַּת יְרוּשָׁלַיִם daughter of Jerusalem; † or מוֹדֵי יְרוּשָׁלַיִם Jecoliah of Jerusalem, 2 Chron. xxvi. 3.

* So in the Arabic ^عأني in ^عروحاني spiritual, ^عجسماني belonging to the body, &c.

† These abbreviations are found to take place in most languages. See Mr. de Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. p. 247. Lud. Gram. Æth., fol. edit. p. 22. Wilkins's Sanscrit Gram., Art. 1174, &c.

‡ But here we have a personification; in the other two cases a periphrasis.

14. In a few instances, the primitive is put for the Patronymic ; which may be considered, either as presenting a metonymy by which the progenitor, &c. is put for the descendant, or by supposing an ellipsis of one or other of the words מן, בֵּית, יוֹשֵׁב, &c. as given above ; as, דַּמָּשְׁקָה Damascus, for Damascene, Gen. xv. 2 ; בֵּית הַלְחָמִי, for בֵּית הַלְחָמִי 2 Sam. xxiii. 15. So יַעֲקֹב, for יַעֲקֹב, בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל, for יִשְׂרָאֵל, and so of others.

15. Irregularities are occasionally met with, in the forms of these words : as, הַגָּרִי a Hagarene, 1 Chron. v. 10, from הַגָּר Hagar ; as if the primitive had been a Segolate noun, of the form הַגָּרִי ; הַמְּנִי Timmite, Judg. xv. 6, for הַמְּנִי, primitive הַמְּנִי. So, הַשִּׁילֹנִי Numb. xxvi. 20, primitive שִׁלָּה ; and הַשִּׁילֹנִי, 1 Chron. ix. 5 ; הַעֲמֹנִי the Ammonite, the primitive being עַמְּוִי. See 1 Sam. xi. 1, and Gen. xix. 38 ; from which, however, the collective form עַמְּוֹן Ammon has been formed, Ib., and thence probably the Patronymic.

16. For the feminine forms of these nouns, see Art. 136. 5, and for their plurals, Art. 139. The forms taken in construction, or when any of the pronouns are affixed, will be regulated according to the analogy of the word. Art. 143.

17. Another class of nouns, ending in י, preceded by either (-), or (י), has been thought to denote excess. These, however, are probably nothing more than nouns in the plural number (Art. 139. 6.). The following are examples : גֹּבֵי a swarm of locusts ; חַלּוֹנֵי many windows ; בְּיָלִי extremely greedy ; שָׁרֵי a plain ; אֱדוֹנֵי the Almighty, root שָׁד powerful ; אֱדוֹנֵי supreme Lord, from אֱדוֹן.

We now proceed to the IXth class of augmented nouns, which take the Hēemanti letter ם, at the end.

167. In this class, the vowel, immediately preceding the final ם, is either (י), or (י) ; which induced Hiller to suppose, that the adjunct was either הָם, or אֹם. It is thought, that these nouns are Intensive in signification. If, then, we suppose ם to be a particle derived from הָמָה, which means tumult, of a multitude or noise, as of the waves of the sea, we can easily conceive how the addition of such a particle, to any primitive word, would make it intensive in signification.* This will account, perhaps,

* Nothing, surely, can be more ridiculous than the opinion of Simonis and others, expressed in his "Arcanum Formarum," (p. 584. 5.), viz. : that the

for the termination ם־. In the next place, the root םוּם does not occur in the Hebrew Bible, but is to be found in the Arabic أَمِمَ, أَمِمَ, signifying, he became fat, or corpulent. If, then, we can suppose an abbreviated form of this word attached to any other, we shall have the termination םוּ; which will give an intensitive signification to the compound. The following are a few examples: the student may arrange them under their respective measures, if he shall think it necessary to do so.

פָּנִים lice; יוֹמָם the whole day; מְאֹמָם most truly; דַּמָּם quite silent; עֵרָם, or עָרָם, quite naked; פְּדוּיָם, and פְּדוּיָו, full redemption; כֻּלָּם the entire whole; בְּרָם a body of men, Judg. xx. 48.

168. Grammarians are generally agreed, that nouns, receiving this letter as a final, are intensitive in signification.

This letter is affixed to words, either simple, or augmented, with the vowels (ַ) or (ִ); thus ך־ or ך־; whence we may suppose, that אוּך, or הוּך, signifying strength, power, riches, wealth (the primitive form of which would be אוּך, or הוּך, Art. 87.), is the root. And hence, also, might the form אוּך, or הוּך, be contracted, by Art. 75. to אוּ, or הוּ, the words from which these terminations may have been taken; and which, added to any other word, would naturally give it an intensitive meaning. Some have supposed the meaning to be occasionally diminutive,* which I am inclined to believe is the case, in some instances.

Examples.

אִלְמָן, fem. אִלְמָנָה a widow; אִתְנָן a large gift, אִתְנָן (for אִתְנָן Art. 73.), root אִתְנָן corn; also with the additional אִתְנָן, a great palace.

figures of ם, and ך, being extended, may account for the intensitive meaning of these forms; and that ם, being inclosed, will give the idea of comprehensiveness, representing, as it were, a pregnant mother inclosing her offspring within the womb! For it is very probable these words were in use, before the letters were invented.

* See the Arcanum Formarum, p. 564.

אִתְּיוֹן midonhood; אִתְּיוֹן (for אִתְּיוֹן Artt. 73. 96.) frequent entry; אִתְּיוֹן, or הִתְּיוֹן, a palace; עֲלִיוֹן The Most High. So also with augmented nouns: as, בְּפִתְּיוֹן great confidence; בְּתִתְּיוֹן great contempt; זְפִתְּיוֹן great drought.

In שִׁתְּיוֹן lunulæ, Is. iii. 18, and אִתְּיוֹן homunculus, i. e. the reflected image of a man in the eye, Deut. xxxii. 10 (from שִׁתְּיוֹן the moon, and אִישׁ a man) we have, perhaps, examples of a diminutive.*

2d. This intensitive letter נ, is frequently attached to verbs, and has been termed the Nûn Paragogic, or Epenthetic. It is found in the Arabic in the same situation, and is termed by the Arabian Grammarians اَنْوْنُ التَّكْيِدي The confirmatory Nûn; its office is to impart certainty, or intensity, to the verb to which it is attached. The same powers have been ascribed to the Hebrew נ, similarly situated; though, it must be confessed, such powers are not always apparent from the context.†

N.B. All words thus augmented, whether the augment is prefixed or postfixed, may be considered as compound words.

On the Reduplicated, and otherwise Compounded, Words.

169. We shall have no difficulty in perceiving, that, if one word may be qualified, or otherwise restricted, in its signification by the addition of another, a similar result will be obtained when any word is repeated: and that the effect will be the same, whether both such words are written out at length, or whether they are combined in one. Both these methods have been adopted in the Hebrew. In some cases, entire words are repeated; in others, they are contracted into one word, by rules presently to be considered. In the first case, we have עֲמוֹן עֲמוֹן, deep deep, i. e.

* We have also in the Syriac a diminutive of this form; see Hoffman's Gram. Syr., p. 251.

† Nun Paragogicum, Verborum personis in Jod et Vau finitis additum, semper esse Emphaticum notat Hottingerus de Officiis Literarum Servil. Analysi Jobi subjectis, § 9. Arcan. Form. p. 564. And Schröder gives the following passage as illustrative of this opinion: 1 Sam. xvii. 25, אֲשֶׁר יַבֵּיט qui percusserit illum, hunc ditabit rex: “ubi,” says he, “sonus fortior est, quam si scriptum esset יַבֵּיטוּ et יַבֵּיטוּ &c.” R. 168. The true force of this particle will be given hereafter, Art. 235, seq.

most deep, Eccl. vii. 24; סוֹבֵב סוֹבֵב turning turning, i. e. continually turning, or changing, Ib. i. 6: לֵב וְלֵב heart and heart, i. e. double-hearted, Ps. xii. 3; בְּאֵרוֹת בְּאֵרוֹת wells wells, i. e. many wells, Gen. xiv. 10; בַּמֶּדָּה בַּמֶּדָּה rod rod, i. e. rod by rod, Num. xvii. 17. In what signification such reduplicated expressions are to be taken, the context will always be sufficient to determine. This, too, may be said with respect to compound words: in some instances the force will be augmented, as in superlatives; in others it will be modified; and in some, perhaps, diminished, as in the diminutive nouns of other languages. Syntax, Art. 233.

2. Let us now come, in the second place, to the rules usually given for the formation of these reduplicated words.* It has been shewn (Art. 73), that any one of the אהוי letters, will, in certain cases, disappear. This will happen, in the first class of these reduplicated words; where we have סִמְאָה סִמְאָה, for סָאָה סָאָה, which, when compounded, would become סָאָה־סָאָה; but, striking out the ה, by Art. 72, we shall have סָאָה־סָאָה; which, again, by drawing back the (-), and rejecting the (:), by Art. 73, we have סָאָה־סָאָה: and, if we place (·) Dāgēsh in the second Sāmék., either for the sake of euphony, or to compensate for the loss of ה, we shall have סָאָה־סָאָה, for the reduplicated word, meaning literally, measure by measure; as both the composition of the word, and the context require. In some cases, as will presently be seen, the final ה of such words is also rejected. It must be borne in mind by the student, that considerable difference of opinion is found to prevail among grammarians, as to the original roots, from which these words have been derived; and, consequently, that great difference of opinion is found to prevail, as to their precise meaning.

3. The following are a few examples of the first class of this kind of nouns; which are generally thought to be formed by a reduplication of some word having ה, for its final radical letter: e. g. עֵרְעָר quite naked, or deserted, from עָרָה naked: by some supposed to mean the juniper, by others the tamarisk, tree; וְשִׁקְשִׁית the scales of a fish, from וְשָׁה peeling †; שְׂעִשְׂעִים exquisite delights,

* We use the word reduplicated to signify words which have been formed by the reduplication of some primitive word;—compound, to signify those which have been formed by the coalescence of two different words. In this sense Simonis uses the words Geminata and Composita.

† But see my Lexicon under this word.

from שָׁפַח looking on (with delight); תִּלְתַּל copiously flowing (hair), from תָּלַח, hanging; תַּעֲתוּעִים many and great errors, from תָּעַה, erring.

4. The second class of reduplicated nouns, consists of those combinations, derived from primitive words, which have their second and third radical letters the same: as, בְּרֵבִים most choice (beasts or birds), from בָּרַר, selecting; גְּלָגַל a wheel, sphere, or any thing subject to continual turning about, as chaff, &c., from גָּלַל, rolling. And hence, גְּלִגְלִת the skull; גְּרָגַר gargarism, gargle; also a grain, or berry, from גָּרַר drawing, &c., to which many more may be added.—It has been shewn (Art. 77.), that when the last two letters of any primitive word are the same, one of them may be dropped for the sake of euphony. This rule holds good, when such words are combined, and for the same reasons.

5. To this class may be added those reduplicated words, which, in their primitive forms, usually reject a medial ו, or י: for here, as in the foregoing examples, we may consider the middle radical letter as rejected, for the sake of euphony (Art. 75). Of this sort are the following examples: חֲלָחָלָה great pain, from חָוַה, or חָוַה, grieving; טוֹלְטוֹלָה grievous ejection, or captivity, from טוֹל casting out; עַפְעַפִּים eyelids, from עָפַף moving quickly, flying; צַפְצַפָּה flowing copiously, from צָפַף flowing, Ezek. xvii. 5.

6. The third class, of reduplicated nouns, includes those which are formed by a repetition of the last syllable; or, of the two last letters of the primitive noun: as, הַבְּהָבִים great gifts, from יָבַח giving, the ו being rejected; אֲדָמָה, fem. אֲדָמָה reddish, red here and there, having red spots, from אָדָם being red; אֲסִפְסָף mixed collection, or multitude, from אָסַף collecting; הַפְּכָפָף most perverse, from הָפַךְ turning over, &c. חֲלָלְחָלָה most smooth, i. e. deceiving words, or things, from חָלַף polishing, smoothing, &c.

7. The fourth class, of reduplicated nouns, consists of those which are found to repeat the last radical letter of the primitives, inserting, at the same time, some vowel between the letters so doubled: as, אֲמָלֵל, or אֲמָלֵל, most languid, from אָמַל anxious; גִּבְגִּבִּים eminences, great heaps, hills, from גִּבַּח gibbous; נְאֻפָּוֹת great, or frequent, adultery, from נָאֻף committing adultery; נְהַלְוֵה a well watered pasture, from נָהַל leading to the water, &c., to which many more might be added.

8. In forming the plurals of these, and similar reduplicated, or compound words, regard is to be had, principally, to the analogy of the last component part of the word. In no case can the addition of any increment, whether syllabic, or asyllabic, affect any syllable beyond the penultimate of any word. In words, therefore, consisting of a large number of syllables, no change will take place in the vowels beyond the penultimate, and, in many instances, not beyond the ultimate. The only question, then, which can arise must be, as to the change of the ultimate, or penultimate, vowels of such words. In primitive words, indeed, a greater number of vowels does not exist; and in these, as we have already seen, analogy alone can be relied upon. The same is true here. For, first: In all cases, except those in which the second and third radical is the same, upon any asyllabic augment being attached to the word, the preceding vowel must either be perfect, or rejected; otherwise the syllable will be incomplete: as, הַתְּהַבְתִּים הַגְּדִימָה great gifts, כּוֹכְבֵי stars of —. Here, as the asyllabic יֵי or יֵי must necessarily take the last consonant of the word, in order to be utterable at all, the preceding vowel must either become perfect, or else be rejected. But, if the root had its second and third radical letters the same, and one had been thrown away, for the sake of euphony, then, upon any asyllabic augment being applied, this rejected letter would return, expressed by Dāgēsh forte placed in the terminating letter (Art. 77.): as, יִלְזִלִים worthless, supernumerary shoots, from יִלְזִל, the root of which is יִלְזִל vile, Isaiah xviii. 5. In like manner, upon the application of any syllabic augment, the situation of the tone-accent, considered in connexion with the laws of syllabication, will determine what the terminating vowel, or vowels, ought to be.

9. The only question which can now arise is, How will these vowels be affected, when the noun is in the state of construction? Generally speaking, unless there be some reason for retaining a perfect vowel, i. e., when some letter has been retrenched for which compensation ought to be made, and hence a perfect vowel retained, either Sheva, or one of its Substitutes, will appear in the penultimate: as, כּוֹכְבֵי the stars of —, &c., not כּוֹכְבֵי. But this can be determined, only from a knowledge of the analogy of the word.

10. We shall now give a few examples of compound words, omitting the classification of Simonis as unnecessary: עֲרַפְלֵי thick darkness, from עָרַב it became dark, and אָפֵל (Arab. اَفْل) the sun set; קִלְקִלוֹ filthy vomiting, from קָא vomiting, and קִלְקִלוֹ base;

פָּרָשׁוּ widely expanding, from פָּרַשׁ expand, and פָּרַז separating; רִמְּזָשׁ invigorating, refreshing, from רִמְּזָשׁ moisture, and פָּזַח increasing, spreading; מִלְּבָנִים a melon, from מִבַּט Arab. he cast down, and בַּטַּח, signifying nearly the same thing; מִבְּנִינִים a bason, from מִבְּנִינִים collecting, and מִבְּנִינִים blood, Arabic, or, as others think מִבְּנִינִים dev, water; מִבְּנִינִים chief satraps, according to some, from the Persic, מִבְּנִינִים, price, pre-eminence, and سترپ, ساترپ, a satrap; according to others, the chief door keepers, from ساترپ, ساترپ, as before, and دربان, دربان, door keeper; מִבְּנִינִים treasurer, from מִבְּנִינִים gáza (Pers. کنز, or گنج), and נָר, or נָר, (Pers. وار, or بار) agent, מִבְּנִינִים treasury (perhaps the diminutive کنزک, or گنجک, of the above); מִבְּנִינִים something, any thing, from מִבְּנִינִים quid aut quid; מִבְּנִינִים flame of the Lord, according to some, from מִבְּנִינִים, a Chaldaïc particle, להב, or להבת flame, and יה the Lord; according to others, from מִבְּנִינִים inflaming, Syriac, and להבת a flame, and יה as before. Others, again, take the מִבְּנִינִים as derived from the Arabic شهاب, شهاب, flame, &c. as before. In the list of various readings given by Ben Naphtali, this word is read as two מִבְּנִינִים; which is probably the ancient way in which it was written. Some of these, as it will be seen, are foreign words: but, as the number of such is few in the Hebrew Bible, and as the Dictionary must be consulted for their signification and etymology, we have thought it unnecessary to investigate their forms, and composition, any further.

On the Forms and Composition of Nouns adopted as Proper Names.

170. By Proper Names, we understand those words, or phrases, which have been adopted for the purpose of conveying the ideas of certain specific persons, or things. By names of persons, are to be understood, the names of God, Deities, Angels, Men, &c.; of things, those of kingdoms, cities, towns, villages, mountains, rivers, &c.: as, first, יהוָה Jehovah; בָּעַל זְבוּב Baal Zévuv; גַּבְרִיאֵל Gavriél; יְהוֹשֻׁעַ Jehōshúah, &c. Second; אַשְׁשֻׁר Ashshúr; מִצְרַיִם Egypt; יְרוּשָׁלַיִם Jerusalem, &c. And, indeed, any word used to designate any specific object, (although the same may, in other instances, be used as an Appellative,) may be a Proper Name, and be construed as such. Lion, for example, is an appellative; and yet, it is used as a proper name; as in, אֱלֵי־לֵוֹי Leo Dei, Is. xxix. 1, 2.

2. Whence it will be seen, that occasions may occur in which it will be difficult to determine, whether such word was intended to be taken as an appellative, or as a proper name.*

3. In the first place, then, Proper Names, which are purely Hebrew, (for some appear to be of foreign extraction,) are, for the most part, found to follow the analogy of the Appellatives; at others, to present forms unknown to them. Those which are of the same forms with the Appellatives, we need not now notice, as those forms have already been discussed.

4. The simple forms of Proper Names found to differ from those of the Appellatives, are, 1st, those which take some form peculiar to the persons of the verbs; and, 2d, those which add ו, to the end: as, 1st, יִשְׁבָּק Ishbák, he excelled; יָשׁוּב Yāshuv, he returns, or shall return; יִצְחָר Itzhár, he shines, &c.; and, 2d, as, אֹנֹן Ōnó; יֶרֶחוֹ Yērēkhó, Jericho. A few foreign names are found of the form פְּקֻדָּת Basmath.

5. Names, compounded with one or other of the divine names, occur very frequently; a circumstance, which, according to Simonis, happens only twice, with respect to the Appellatives; i. e. in אֱרִיאֵל Aríel, and מְאַפְהֵלָא Määphēlyá. Another remarkable circumstance is, that in these compositions the order is sometimes inverted: as, יְהוֹשָׁבֵהָת Yēhōshavhát, for יְהוֹשֵׁבֵת Shavhát Yēhōváh: which Simonis terms Anastrophe.† This never takes place in the Appellatives. With these exceptions only, the forms of Proper Names, whether simple or compound, constantly follow those of the Appellatives; the significations of both being ascertained precisely in the same way. It would be superfluous to swell this work with numerous examples; particularly as they may be found in the "Onomastica" of Hiller, and Simonis, classed, arranged, and discussed, as far perhaps as the most sanguine inquirer could wish.

6. Having laid down the general rules relating to the formation, and composition of Proper Names, we may now notice a few irregularities, occasionally found to take place. These may be classed under the heads of, I. Omissions, II. Additions, III. The Transpositions of certain letters or syllables; and, IV. The Changes of certain letters for others of the same organs.

7. Omissions: and in the first case, of the Initial letter of the primitive word; e. g. רָם 1 Chron. ii. 9, for אָרָם , (Art. 84.) Matt. i. 3. Αραμ , in the name of a person, Job xxxii. 2; of a place, 2 Chron. xxii. 5, אָרָם . In a compound, פֶּס דְּמָיִם , 1 Chron. xi. 13, for אָפֶס דְּמָיִם 1 Sam. xvii. 1. In this last case, אָפֶס is taken by some as an Appellative: דְּיִמָּח , is thought by some to be the same with אֲדוּם Ēdūm, i. e. Edom. Others take it to be a mystical name, from the signification of the word דָּיִם , to be silent.

8. In the following instances, a letter has been dropped from the middle of the word: as, אֲבִיגַיִל 2 Sam. xvii. 25, for אֲבִיגַיִל 1 Chron. ii. 16, (Art. 75.) אֲרִוּנָה 2 Sam. xxiv. 16, and אֲרִנָּן 1 Chron. xxi. 25. דְּרָמָשָׁה , but 2 Chron. xxviii. 5, דְּרָמָשָׁה , יוֹב Gen. xlvi. 13; for which we have יִשׁוּב , 1 Chron. vii. 1; שָׁמָּה , 1 Sam. xvii. 13, is written שָׁמָּעָה 1 Chron. iii. 5, and שָׁמֹעַ , 2 Sam. v. 14. In the following words, a letter has been omitted at the end; אָדָם Josh. iii. 16, which is אָדָמָה Chap. xix. 36; קִיר־הַרְשָׁה Is. xvi. 11, and Ib. v. 7, קִיר־הַרְשָׁת ; אֲפָרָת 1 Chron. ii. 19; אֲפָרָתָה Ib. v. 24.

9. Under the head omissions, may be noticed those defects which are found to take place in patronymics, &c., derived from compound Proper Names. Compounds are, in any case, troublesome words on account of their length; but, in proper names, this is less tolerable than in any other. The consequence has been, most nations have used contractions, omitting some part or other of the compound word, (see Art. 166. 11. note.) Hence יִמְיָנִי , for בְּנֵי־יִמְיָנִי 1 Sam. ix. 1, Judg. xix. 16, and Esth. ii. 5; אִישׁ יִמְיָנִי a man, a Benjamite. So 1 Chron. xx. 5, לְחָמִי , is put as some believe for בֵּית הַלְּחָמִי Bethlehemite, comp. 2 Sam. xxi. 19; רַמַּת לְחָי Judg. xv. 17, Ib. ver. 9. 14. 19, written simply לְחָי .*

* With respect to this last passage, Pilkington has remarked—"The word לָחִי , as an Appellative, signifies, a jaw bone; but, as it was also the proper name of the place, where the Philistines met Samson, and where he slew a thousand of them with the jaw bone of an ass, the name also of Ramath-Lehi was given to the place, where he cast away the jaw bone. To consider the word then, as Appellative, in the next verse; and to say that, 'When Samson was thirsty, God clave an hollow place that was in the jaw, and there came water

10. To these may be added, יַעֲרָר Ps. cxxxii. 6; for קַרְיֵית יַעֲרָרִים, 1 Sam. vii. 1, &c., where the English version has “the fields of the wood;” יְרוּשָׁלַם passim, is written אֶשְׁלָם, Ps. lxxvi. 3.; Bethlehem, לְחֶם 1 Chron. iv. 22; Bethaven, Hos. x. 5, is אֲוֹן, ver. 8.

11. Some additions which are peculiar to proper names, have already been given (No. 8.). We now come to the transposition of letters or syllables: אֶלְיָעָם, 2 Sam. xi. 3, is עֲמִיאֵל, 1 Chron. iii. 5, in which the component parts of the compound change places by Anastrophe, as above noticed (No. 5.); יְהוֹיָכִין, 2 Kings xxiv. 6, 8, is יְכִנְיָהוּ 1 Chron. iii. 16; and, by omission, with the addition of וי, כְּנִיָּהוּ Jer. xxii. 24; תְּמַנְת־חֶרֶם, Josh. xxiv. 30, is תְּמַנְת־חֶרֶם, Judg. ii. 9; דוּל־נָשָׂה 1 Chron. iv. 4, is Ib. 11, שׁוּחָה. So בְּמַח 2 Sam. viii. 8, is written טְבַחָה, 1 Chron. xviii. 8; to which some others might be added. According to Hiller,* examples of this kind are very numerous: but here, as the significations adduced by him are grounded on conjectural etymologies, little reliance can be placed on them.

12. We shall now give a few examples, in which letters of the same organ have taken place one of another (Art. 78.): בְּרִיאָהוּ; 2 Kings xx. 12, written מְרִיאָהוּ, Isa. xxxix. 1, and מְרִדָהוּ, 2 Kings xxv. 27, Jer. L. 2. In the last instance, a quiescent א, is also omitted (Art. 72.); עֶבְרָן, Josh. vii. 18, written עֶבְרָה, 1 Chron. ii. 7, and to this last allusion is made in the text; בַּת־שֹׁבַע, 2 Sam. xi. 3, and בַּת־שׂוּעַ, 1 Chron. iii. 5; נְבוּכַדְרֶצַּר, Dan. i. 1; נְבוּכַדְרֶצַּר, Jer. xxi. 2; קָה, Is. xix. 13, and קָה, Hos. ix. 6, Memphis. Several changes of ד, and ר, may be observed in the words Khemdán, Gen. xxxiv. 26; Khemrán, 1 Chron. i. 41; Dōdānīm, Gen. x. 4, is given Rōdānīm, 1 Chron. i. 7; Rīpháth, Gen. x. 3, is Dīpháth, 1 Chron. i. 6; Dēhūél, Num. i. 14, is Rēhūél, Ib. ii. 14; Hādād-Hézer, 2 Sam. viii. 3, is Hādar-Hézer, thereout,' must be through want of common attention; because, they immediately subjoin, 'Wherefore he called the name thereof En hakkore, (q. d. The well of him that called,) which is in Lehi, unto this day.'—Such mistakes as these give wrong ideas to the ignorant; and furnish the scoffers with matter of ridicule."—"The error indeed, is corrected in the margin, which hath Lehi, &c."—Remarks upon several passages of Scripture, &c., by Matthew Pilkington, Cambridge, 1759, p. 157. See also my Lexicon, under מְנַחֵשׁ, p. 359.

* Onomasticon, V. Test., p. 365.

1 Chron. xviii. 5. These letters, although not of the same organ, are found, as in other languages, frequently interchanged. (Art. 79.) Their change in Hebrew may be partially accounted for, by the supposition of the Scribes having mistaken one form of Letter for another. Confusion may also have arisen from a similarity in their sound, which we find is sometimes the case in other languages.

13. It may not be amiss to offer a few remarks here, on those proper names which end in (׳) Yod, not only because their number is very considerable, but also, because they afford some curious considerations, on the subject of ancient Hebrew theology.

14. These, according to Hiller,* may be classed under four heads.

First, Those termed Denominatives, on account of some particular circumstance being alluded to, when they were first given: as לְוִי Lēvī, meaning Conjunctive, see Gen. xxix. 34. To which may be added all Patronymics used as proper names.

Secondly, Words found in a mutilated state, but originally composed of one or other of the Divine names: as, הַלְלֵנוּ, for הַלְלֵנוּ הַיְהוָה, or הַלְלֵנוּהוּ, signifying, the Lord (is) a portion. So נֶעְרַי, for נֶעְרַי הַיְהוָה, stripped of God; to which many others might be added. The intervening Yod, however, is in many cases, allowed by all to be nothing more than a sort of connecting letter, as in עֲבָדֵי אֱלֹהִים, for עֲבָדֵי אֱלֹהִים servant of God. This method of compounding the Divine name with other words, for the purpose of forming proper names, is certainly of great antiquity, and may safely be appealed to in proof of the position that Believers never acknowledged any God different from that urged upon their notice by the last prophet. Whether we can extract from it the fact that, they also understood the doctrine of the Holy Trinity, of the Immutability, Invisibility, Incomprehensibility, and of the other attributes, of the Deity,—as known and taught among ourselves now,—does not seem to be quite so clear as Hiller will have it.† It is also worthy of notice, that the names given to individuals among the Babylonians as well as other nations contiguous to the Jews, were, for the most part, either the names of their idols, or compounds, including one or other of their titles. The same practice is found to prevail among the pagans of the present day.

* Onomast. Vet. Test., p. 61, &c.

† Ib., pp. 228, 229.

15. Thirdly, Yod is said to be paragogic when attached to substantives, used as proper names: as, רֹמְמָתִי עֶזְרָה, 1 Chron. xxv. 4. 31; נִדְרָעֵי, Numb. xxi. 33: עֵינֵי גְדֵי, Josh. xv. 62, &c.

16. Fourthly, Yod is thought to be the pronoun of the 1st person singular, in the following and similar examples: מְלֹחֵי, 1 Chron. xxv. 4; גְּלֵלָתִי Ib. verr. 4. 29.

17. Having said thus much on the analogy, and irregularities, prevailing in the forms of proper names, and referred the Student to those writers who have treated these subjects at great length; we shall now offer a few remarks; 1. On the persons, by whom they were given, and on the circumstances, with which they were connected: and, 2, On the various names sometimes found attached to persons, or places; a usage which has, by some, been termed Polyonymia.

18. With respect to the persons by whom proper names have been imposed, they are various, as likewise have been the occasions on which they have been given. In some instances God himself gave the name; in others, the Father, Mother, or some one or other of the kindred.

Of the first, examples may be found in Gen. xvi. 11, xvii. 19, 1 Kings xiii. 2, 1 Chron. xxii. 9, Matt. i. 21, Luke i. 13, &c. Of the second and third,* examples occur very frequently; and of the last, Luke i. 59, may suffice.†

19. The principal causes, or circumstances, connected with the imposition of proper names amount, according to Simonis, to fifteen.‡ These, however, may all be reduced to the original number assumed by Glassius, which is two.§ “1. κατ’ ἔσω, vel ratione etymi et significationis, ejusque fundamenti. 2. κατ’ ἔξω, vel ratione extensionis ad alia, et communionis.”

20. In the first place, proper names both of men, and of places, were first given with reference to some event, either past, present, or future, with regard to such person, or place.

21. Of the first sort, are the following: Gen. xvii. 17, 19, יִצְחָק Isaac, so called on account of Abraham’s smiling || upon receiving the promise of his birth; Exod. ii. 10, Moses (מֹשֶׁה) is so called on account of his having been taken out of the water, as the text shews, whether the word itself be Egyptian or Hebrew; for, on this subject learned men differ.

1 Sam. iv. 21, Ī-kāvód (אֵי קָבוֹד) where is the glory? on account of the ark of the covenant having been taken.

22. Secondly; Of names taken from present circumstances, the following are examples: Gen. iv. 2, vanity (הַבְּבַל) vanity, on account, as it has been thought, of the vanity and instability of all human things occasioned by the fall; Gen. iv. 25, Seth (שֵׁת) because God had placed him in the situation of Abel, who had been murdered by Cain; Gen. xxv. 25, Esau (עֵשָׂו), whether we deduce it from עֲשִׂי, עֲשִׂי, as Dathe will have it, which signifies to cover, &c., or from עָטָה, עָטָה to have long hair, after Simonis; Ib. ver. 26, Jacob, יַעֲקֹב, from יַעֲקֹב, the heel, because he took hold of his brother's heel at the time of his birth.

23. The following appear to have been given, with reference to something afterwards to take place: Gen. iii. 20, Eve (חַוָּה), because she was to be the mother of all who should live; Gen. v. 29, Noah (נֹחַ), because he was to be the means of consoling, or giving rest to, the true believers. In this case, the verb used to explain the proper name is not the same with that included in the name itself, which signifies quiet, rest, &c. The only thing intended by the sacred Writer seems to have been on this, as on many other occasions, to give the general sense, and not the exact etymology, of the word.

24. The following are examples of names of places, given with reference to certain present events.

Gen. iv. 16, Nód (נֹד), is the place in which Cain is said to have resided, after he had been driven out from the presence of God, the meaning of which is wandering, or wanderer.

Gen. xi. 9, Babel (בָּבֶל), was so called, on account of the confusion which took place there, from בָּבֶלְבֶּל, a reduplicated form of בָּלַל, to mix, confound, &c. which, by contraction, will become בָּבֶל.

Gen. xxviii. 19, Bethel (בֵּית־אֵל) was so called by Jacob, because he deemed it worthy to be called The house of God, on account of the vision he saw there. Similar examples are to be found, Gen. xxxii. 3, with respect to Mākhānāim; Ib. xxxi. 47, Galhed; John v. 2, where Bethesda is intended to point out the favour of God exerted at that place, as in a house of mercy. In Exod. xv. and Numb. xxxiii. we have several examples of names, thus given to the different stations, in the wilderness, at which the Israelites halted.

It should be observed, that in writing Hebrew names in the Greek letters, the aspirates are frequently omitted: as, Ἑσρώμ not Χεσρώμ; Ναασών, not Ναχσών; and so of others. See Art. 9, note.

LECTURE IX.

ON THE SEPARABLE AND INSEPARABLE PARTICLES.

171. These are nothing more than words, or fragments of words, attached to others for the purpose of qualifying or otherwise restricting them; and they are written either separately, or together and so forming one compound word, as usage may require. In this point of view, therefore, they may be classed under one, or other, of the forms of nouns already detailed; but, as they occur frequently, and exert a very considerable influence on the force and bearing of the context, they deserve a separate consideration.

2. By these Particles are meant, words used occasionally as Pronouns, Adverbs, Prepositions, Conjunctions, or Interjections. We say occasionally, because some of them will sometimes fill one or more of these offices, as usage may have determined, just as similar words often do in our own language.

3. That the Separable Prepositions are words of this kind, no doubt will remain when we consider, that in many instances they actually present all the peculiarities of nouns put in the state of construction: as, בְּדִי-רִיק for vanity, or in sufficiētia vanitatis,* Jer. li. 58; so בֵּין הַמַּיִם between the waters, Gen. i. 7; † or distinctio aquarum: יָי (for יָיָה) being the absolute form in the one case, and בֵּינָן in the other; which, in construction, will regularly become יָי, and בֵּינָן, respectively (Art. 143. 6.). And, again, words preceding these particles ‡ are often found taking the forms proper for the state of construction: as, בּוֹ הוֹסִי Ps. ii. 12; מְשׁוֹשׁ אֶת־רִצְיִן Delight of Rexin, Is. viii. 6, &c., which implies that they are nouns.

4. In the Arabic and Ethiopic dialects, in each of which we have a peculiarity of termination for the state of construction, these particles are clearly marked as being in that state: as, in the Arabic, ^{المسجد} أمام ^{في} before the mosque, (i. e. pars. anterior templi,) where the first word loses its tanwīn, and the last is put in the genitive case. So in the Ethiopic, ውስተ : ሰርዞ : to, or towards, heaven; where the first word only has this mark. And, generally, words of this kind, whether conjunctions, prepositions, or adverbs, will be found with the termination proper for construction (if they happen to have such termination), when they are intended to be so understood; and without it, when not so intended.

With respect to the adverbs, as they can be known to be such only from the situations in which they are found, and may consist of any form of word suitable to the sense required, something will be said on their character, and use, when we come to the syntax.

5. If, then, these particles were originally nouns, it is likely we should find them exhibiting the simple, and augmented, forms peculiar to nouns; and such is the case in many of them, as the following examples will shew : Segolates, מָרָם not yet; אֶצֶל near, at; לְבַח before, in presence of; הֵלֹם here, hither; רַק only; אֵל,* by no means. Primitive nouns not Segolate; as, יוֹתֵר more; סָבִיב round about; מְהֵרָה (fem.) quickly, soon; רַבָּה (root רבב) much; וְזוֹלָת besides, to which many others may be added.

The following are forms, augmented by one or other of the letters termed הַאֲמִנְיָי (Art. 156.); פְּתֹאֵם suddenly, immediately; חֲפֵזִים gratis, freely (Art. 167.); אֲוֵלַי perhaps, which is probably a compound of לֵי אֲוֵל, (Arab. أو لو); אַחֲרֵי (for אַחֲרֵי) after, afterwards. Art. 109.

6. Many of these particles are found in the plural number, (a sufficient proof, if any were wanting, that they are nouns); as, בִּינּוֹ, fem. בִּינּוּהָ distinction, between, pl. בִּינּוּיִם, and בִּינּוּת. So masc. סָבִיב, fem. סָבִיבָה, pl. סָבִיבוֹת surroundings, enclosures, adv. or prep. round about; אַחֲרֵי, pl. אַחֲרֵיִם, and, in construction, אַחֲרֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ after the king, q. d. subsequentionibus, regis.

7. In many instances these words are found in a compound state: as, לְמַעַן (comp. of לְ, of לוי, and מַעַן, of מ, and עָנָה answer), on account of, because of, &c.; מִפְּנֵי (of מִן and פְּנֵי) because of; בְּלִעְדֵי, or בְּלִעְדֵי מִבְּלִעְדֵי besides, except: and, further, with another particle, הַמְּבַלְעֵדִי whether besides? In this last case, the simplest form בְּלִעְדֵי, is probably a compound of three primitives, viz. of עַד usque ad, &c. ל, and ב, which are used as prepositions. In some of the others, also, we have the preposition מ, and the interrogative particle ה, with the word also put in the plural number and in the form proper for construction.

8. In some cases, several of these words will be found construed together, and qualifying one another: and, in all of these, those capable of receiving a form for the state of construction, will invariably take that form. Of this sort are the following: עַד אֵין until . . . not; עַד הֵנָּה, and contracted, עַדָּהּ, and עַדָּהָּ Eccles. iv. 2, 3; עַד כֵּן, hitherto; עַד מְאֹד to excess;

* This word is probably an abridged form of אֵלָה, execration; thence, deprecation, prohibition, or the like; or, from one or other of the Cognate roots, אֵל, אֵל, יֵל, which will afford similar significations. See these roots in the Lexicons.

† בַּל proprie defectus, sed in particulam abit . . . notans non. Simonis Lex. sub voce בָּלָה attritus fruit.

עד מתי How long? Usquequo? עד עתה until now, ἕως τοῦ νῦν; עד פי, עד אשר אם, עד-אם, עד אשר, עד למעקה to the summit; עד לא, לא כן if not; עד לא, לא כן not so; עד לא, לא כן even so; לְבַד מוֹ, and מְלִבַד, besides, except, &c.

9. These particles are also found in construction with the pronouns, sometimes in the singular, at others in the plural, number: as, בֵּינֵךְ between thee; בֵּינֵנוּ, and fem. בֵּינוֹתֵינוּ between us. So אֲצֵלֵם near them; לְמַעַנְךָ on account of thee; אֵינָם, and אֵינָמוּ, they are not. The following, when in the plural number only, take the affixed pronouns singular, or plural, viz. אַחֲרַי after; אַחֲרֵיךְ after thee; אֵל to; עַל above, upon; עַד to; בְּלֵעַד besides; and, according to Schræderus, אֲשֶׁרֵי the blessings of; לְפָנֵים before; מִפְּנֵים on account of.

10. The pronominal affixes, when attached to some of these particles, differ, in some respects, from those usually attached to nouns: e. g. מִתַּחַתַּי under or beneath me, for מִתַּחַתֵּי; הִנֵּנִי, behold me; הִנֵּהוּ, behold him; עִמָּם, with them; אֲתֵהֶם masc. and אֲתֵהֶנּוּ fem. them, or as it respects them, for אֲתָם, or אֲתָן.

11. The particle אֵת, often put before a noun which is the object of some verb in the sentence, appears in three different forms when connected with the pronouns, which Schræderus thinks has arisen from the root's originally presenting three cognate forms, viz. אֲתָהּ, אֲתָת, or אֲתָת, *to come, &c.

* D. Kimkhi has remarked in the Mikhlol, (fol. רנ"ב verso) כמו שתאמר ראובני דרג שמעון לא נודע מי ההרג ומי ההרוג וכשתאמר ראובן דרג את שמעון הנה מלת את נושלת על הפועל ונודע כי שמעון הוא ההרוג לפיכך ברבר שהוא מבוזר מי הפועל והפועל לא הוצרכו Reuben slew Simeon, it would not be known who was the slayer, or who the slain. But when you say Reuben slew את Simeon, (i. e. Simeonem,) the particle את points out the objective case, and it is known that Simeon is the person slain. In like manner, in a matter in which the agent and patient are evident, the particle את is unnecessary. This rule, however, is not universally true, as we shall see when we come to the syntax. Similar to this is the doctrine of the Persian Grammarians, on the use of the particle و, (originally perhaps و way); for where, according to Mr. Lumsden, there would be a difficulty in ascertaining from the context, which is the objective case to the verb, this particle is added; and when it is not so, the particle is always to be omitted. Pers. Gram., vol. ii. p. 202. My

From the first, we have אַתָּהּ you; אֲתָם them, masc. אֲתָנָּהּ them, fem. From the second, אִתִּי with me; אִתְּךָ with thee, masc., אִתְּךָ id. fem.; אִתּוֹ with him; אִתָּהּ with her; אִתָּנוּ with us; אִתְּכֶם with you; אִתָּם with them. From the third, אִנִּי me; אִתְּךָ thee, or with thee; אִתְּךָ thee, or with thee; אִתּוֹ him, or with him. So אֲתָהּ, אֲתָנָּהּ, אֲתָכֶם, אֲתָהֶן, אֲתָתֶם, אֲתָהֶן, or אֲתָנוּ. In all which cases, coming to, touching, as it respects, or the like, will give the exact sense of the particle.

12. Some of these particles take (τ), as the vowel of union (Art. 145. 6.) before the affixed pronouns נִי, and תִּי: as, עִמָּנוּ with us; אִתָּנוּ id.; אֲתָנוּ us, or with us; אִתְּךָ with thee, fem., אִתְּךָ; and אֲתָנָּהּ id. So הִנֵּהְךָ behold thee, fem.; עַדְךָ hitherto thou, fem.; עִמָּךְ with thee, fem.; עִמָּכֶם with you, masc.; עִמָּהֶם with them, masc.

13. The preposition מִן out, out of, apparently from the Arabic root مَبْنٍ cut, doubles the נ by Dāgēsh, whenever any one of the pronouns is affixed: as, מִמִּי (or מִמִּי) from me; מִמֶּנּוּ (or מִמֶּנּוּ), for מִמֶּנּוּ) from him; מִמֶּנָּם from them. But, more frequently, the root assumes a reduplicated form, and drops its final letter: as, מִמִּין for מִמִּין (Art. 76.), and, with the affixed pronouns, מִמִּינִי (for מִמִּינִי) from me; מִמִּינְךָ from thee; מִמִּינּוּ from him; מִמִּינָהּ from her; מִמִּינוּ from us: and, by a further abbreviation, מִמִּינְךָ from thee, masc.; and מִמִּינְךָ from thee, fem.

14. The other prepositions take the affixed pronouns regularly, and, for the most part, in the plural number: as, אֵלַי to, towards, pl. אֵלַי to me; עָלַי upon, against, plural עָלֶיךָ upon, or against thee; עַד to, usque ad, plural עַדָּיו to him; בְּלִעְדֵּי besides; בְּלִעְדֵּיךָ besides thee. With the grave affix: אֵלֶיכֶם to you; עָלֶיָּהֶם upon them.

15. The remaining prepositions, are בְּעִבְרֵי on account of; בְּעַד by, through; בְּלִי without, foràs; לְפָנַי before, in front of; מִוֶּלַד towards, over against; עַבְרָה on this side, beyond (properly, passage); נֶגְדָה, and הֶבְרֵל before, in front of.

The Interjections are occasionally the mere expressions of nature intimating pain, &c.: as, הֵן, Oh! הֵן, O! הֵאָח, Ahah! אָהָה, אי, alas! &c., at other times they are derived from roots: as, בִּי, נָא, up! I pray, &c. לָזֶה, לְכֹה, לְכוּ, go to! הָרָחֵק, give! הַלֵּלָהּ, profane! &c. See Art. 243., where their use, &c., are pointed out.

On the Inseparable Particles.

172. Having laid down the forms, and given some examples of the construction, of the Separable particles, we now come to those which have been termed Inseparable. These have been so named, because many of them are no longer extant in their original and complete forms, but presenting one single letter only, and are always prefixed to some other word. They are all comprehended in the technical terms, מֹשֶׁה וְכָלֵב, Moses and Caleb.

2. The first (מ) is regularly prefixed to nouns with the imperfect vowel (·) Khirik, and consequently inserts Dāgēsh forte in the following letter: as, מִן־הַדֶּרֶךְ from, or out of, the way. This word, when written at length, is מִן, probably from מִנּוּ, signifying, according to Storr, cutting off, &c.* This Dāgēsh, therefore, may be considered as compensating for the loss of the letter נ (Art. 76.).

3. Dāgēsh, however, is frequently omitted when the following word commences with (:): as, מִגְּבוּרָה from greatness; מִיְמִינוֹ from his right hand (for מִיְמִינוֹ Art. 87. 5.). Under this rule Schroederus places the word לְמִפְּרֵאשׁוּכָה, thence from the beginning, 1 Chron. xv. 13. But here, the מ prefixed, is probably a part of הַה that, which, what, or the like.

4. But, when any letter incapable of receiving Dāgēsh follows, (Art. 109) a compensation is made, either explicitly, or implicitly: i. e. either, 1st, by putting the vowel (·) instead of Khirik; or, 2dly, by considering the following letter as doubled: as, 1st, מֵאִישׁ (for מֵאִישׁ) from a man; מֵרָשָׁע (for מֵרָשָׁע) from a wicked (man); or, 2dly, מֵחַוָּט (for מֵחַוָּט) from a thread.

5. The particle שׁ, which is an abbreviation of מִשֶּׁר who, what, &c. will be considered with the demonstrative pronouns: where the use of the inseparable particle הַ will also be shewn.

* See last Art. No. 13.

On the Particle ו and, but, moreover, &c.

173. This particle is, probably, a fragment of the word ארה, Syriac ארם, or Arabic آوى, to augment, connect, &c.: its augmented form is, ארה desiring wealth, connection, or the like: and, as a noun, ו, a hook, nail, or any thing by which one thing is connected with another. Hence, it is used as a conjunction, and is capable of all the variety of meaning to which such words are subject.

2. This particle is regularly prefixed to nouns with (:): as, וְעַבְדָּהּ וְשִׁפְחָהּ a servant maid and man.

3. The Shěvâ, however, is liable to certain variations. When the word, to which ו is attached, commences also with Shěvâ, this ו takes the vowel Shūrék: as, וּלְכֹרֶי וּלְכֹרֶי go ye, not וּלְכֹרֶי (Art. 106. 1.): וּלְמֶלֶךְ * and to, or for, the king, not וּלְמֶלֶךְ, or וּלְמֶלֶךְ.

4. The same change takes place, whenever any one of the labial letters (בּוּמֶף) immediately follows: as, וּבְגָדֶיךָ and the garment, not וּבְגָדֶיךָ. There are, however, some exceptions: as, וְבָרוּךְ and void; וּבָשׁוּ and they blushed, where it has (τ). No. 9 below.

5. When the letter ך, with (:) follows, a contraction will take place (Art. 87. 5.): as, וַיְחִי (for וַיְחִי, or וַיְחִי and he shall live; וַיְמִינֵם (for וַיְמִינֵם) and their right hand. In a few cases we have (τ) in this place: as, וַיְהִי and let him be.

6. Any word beginning, with one of the Substitutes of Shěvâ, will prefix ו, with the correspondent imperfect vowel (Art. 107.): as, וַאֲנִי and I; וְאֱמֶת and truth, &c.

7. In some instances of this kind, however, we find Shūrék: as, וְזָהָב and gold, Gen. ii. 12; וַיִּצְעָקוּ and cry thou (fem.) Jer. xxii. 20: which is anomalous.

8. When the word commences with an א, a contraction is often found to take place: as, וַאֲדֹנָי and my Lord (for וַאֲדֹנָי); so וְאֱלֹהִים and God (for וְאֱלֹהִים), Art. 87. 5.

9. Monosyllables, and dissyllables having the accent on the penultima, will generally prefix this particle with (τ): as, וְסִיָּם and

* Kimkhi is of opinion, that in these cases the letter א is to be considered as dropped, and that we should read א universally: which supposes א, to be the primitive form of this particle.

a horse; וְאֵיל and a ram. To this, however, there are many exceptions: as, וְשׂוֹר and an ox; וְרֶכֶב and a chariot.

10. This particle has been supposed to have the power of changing the tenses of the verb, i. e. of making the preterite tense future, and, the future preterite; and hence it has been termed Vav Conversivum. From what will be said hereafter on the doctrine of the tenses of the verbs, it will appear, that the conversive power supposed to exist in this particle, is neither necessary nor true. When it takes the vowel Páthakh it ought perhaps to be considered as illative, corresponding to the Arabic فَ then, therefore, &c., when it takes (:), as being merely conjunctive (Art. 119. note).

11. In some cases, when accompanied by (-), the Dāgēsh of the following letter, as also the Euphonic accent;—one or other of which is necessary to complete the syllable,—is dropped, probably by the negligence of the scribes: as, וְיִקְדָּשׁ and he consecrated, Gen. ii. 3, for וְיִקְדָּשׁ, or, with the accent, וְיִקְדָּשׁ.

12. In the first person singular of the present tense, this particle takes (ו): as, וְאֶשְׁמַע and I hear.

174. The remaining particles וְ, כִּי, and לְ, signifying, in, according to, to, or the like, respectively, may be easily traced to their origin as nouns. The first is probably a fragment of the word בּוֹא entering into, &c., which is found in the Arabic under the forms of, بَوِيَ he descended, entered into his house, lodging, &c.; بَاة, or بَاء and in Ethiopic በጠላ: meaning nearly the same thing.

2. With respect to the second (כִּי) signifying like, as, just as, &c., it is probably a fragment of some primitive noun, from which we also have the words כִּה thus; כִּי for, so; כִּיִן, and כִּיִן, thus. For the etymology of לְ, see Art. 171. 7.

3. These particles are regularly prefixed with (:); as, בְּדַרְךָ in a way; כִּיִּץ like a tree; לְאֶרֶץ to earth.

If the word to which either of them is to be prefixed, have (:), the particle will regularly take (.) Khīrīk

(Art. 106. 1.): as, בְּמִנְגֵּלָה in a volume; כְּכֵלִי, like a vessel; לְבָנוֹ, to his son.

4. But, when any one of the Substitutes of Shēvâ happens to be at the beginning of such word, the prefix will take the correspondent imperfect vowel (Art. 107.): as, בְּחֵלוֹם in a dream; פָּאֵיכֹל like eating, &c.

5. When an א, happens to be the first letter, a contraction generally takes place: as, לְאֹדֵנִי (for לְאֹדֵנִי) to my Lord; לְאֱלֹהִים (for לְאֱלֹהִים) to God. (Art. 87. 5.).

6. But when prefixed to monosyllables, or to dissyllables having the accent in the penultimate, they generally take (τ) as above (Art. 173. 9.); e. g. בְּזֹה in this; כְּאֵלֶּה like these; לְנֶצֶחַ for ever. So with verbal nouns or Infinitives, when not in construction with other nouns: as, לְקוּם for standing; לְלָכֶת for walking.

7. The following affixed pronouns are often found attached to these particles: viz. בִּי in me; בָּנוּ in us; בָּךְ in thee, masc.; בָּךְ id. fem.; בְּכֶם in you, masc.; בְּכֶן id. fem.; בוֹ in him, masc.; בָּהּ in it, her; בָּהֶם (or Art. 75.) בָּם in them, masc.; בָּהֶן id. fem.

8. The particle לְ, receives the pronouns in the same manner; but בְּ, is so found in only two instances; viz. בְּכֶם like you, and בָּהֶם like them. When it is necessary to use the pronouns with בְּ; the paragogic particle מוֹ, is generally introduced thus: כְּמוֹנִי like me; כְּמוֹנוּ like us; כְּמוֹךְ like thee; כְּמוֹכֶם like you; כְּמוֹהוּ like him; כְּמוֹהָ like her; כְּמוֹהֶם like them.

9. When either of the particles בְּ, בָּ, or לְ, is prefixed to a noun with the definite article, the article is for the most part rejected (Art. 73.), and the particle takes its vowel: as, בְּבַיִת in the house (for בַּבַּיִת); כְּבַאִישׁ like the man; (for בַּבַּאִישׁ); לְחֹדֶשׁ for the month (for לַחֹדֶשׁ); בְּהַרְבָּח in the dry (land, for בַּהַרְבָּח Art. 87. 6.). Exceptions: בְּהַדְרָה in the way, Neh. ix. 19: לְהָעָם to the people, 2 Chron. x. 7; פְּתַח־לְנֹת like the windows, Ezek. xl. 25; בְּהַחֲכָם like the wise man, Eccles. viii. 1.

10. This contraction, moreover, sometimes takes place in those Infinitives, which commence with a servile ה: as, בְּפִשָּׁל (for לְהַפְּשִׁיל) in being impelled, Prov. xxiv. 17; לְהַשְׁמִיעַ (for לְהַשְׁמִיעַ) for causing to hear, Ps. xxvi. 7; לְבִיא (for לְבִיא) for bringing, Jer. xxxix. 7, &c., which is most usual in the Chaldee.

On the Inseparable Particles termed Paragogic.

175. To the preceding inseparable particles others may be added, which, however, are always found attached to the end, never to the beginning, of words; and, for the purpose, most probably, of adding something to the force of the passages in which they are found. These were, at first, perhaps, nouns of one form or other, just as the prepositions were; but which, in after times, were abbreviated for the sake of convenience.

2. These letters or syllables, then (for they are now nothing more), have been termed paragogic, rather, I suppose, for the purpose of giving them a name, than for pointing out either their nature or their use. They consist of one or other of the letters אָרְוִין, appended to words, either for the purpose of giving emphasis to the meaning, of promoting euphony, or for some other purpose.

3. The letter א, is mostly pleonastic, and is found attached to words terminating in the vowel (ַ), or וּ: as אֲתִיקִיהָ its galleries (for אִתִּיקִיהָ), Ezek. xli. 15; הָהֵלְקוּא they who went (for הֵלְקוּ), Josh. x. 24; אָבִוּא they were willing, Isa. xxviii. 12; וְנִשְׂוּא they shall be carried, Jer. x. 5. So יְהוּא, for יְהוּ (for יְהוּ, Art. 87. 2.) he shall be, Eccl. xi. 3; also הוּא, instead of הוּ, he, Arab. هُوَ; לוּא, for לוּ, Arab. لَوْ, would to God, “utinam,” &c., and so of others.*

4. The use of ה, as a paragogic letter, is very frequent. In some cases, it is thought to augment the signification, in others to be merely pleonastic. On some occasions it is found appended to words, ending in a consonant, with (׃); on others, it is preceded by (׃) or (׃): and in these vowels it becomes quiescent: as, אֶסְפָּרָה (from אֶסְפַּר) I will recount, or, let me recount, Ps. ii. 7; אֶרְצָה (from אֶרַץ), the earth; הִנֵּה, from הִן, behold; אֵלֶּה (from אֵל), these. The force is augmented in such cases as, יְשׁוּעָתָהּ, —of יְשׁוּעָה, great salvation, Ps. iii. 3, Jonah ii. 10. עֲוֹלָתָהּ, —of עֲוֹלָה, Ps. lxxxii. 16, &c., as in the ʒ of unity or singularity, in the Arabic, as in ^{علمه} علمه, a singularly learned man.

5. It is attached to verbs. 1st, to the Infinitive or Verbal noun; 2d, to both the tenses; 3d, to the second person singular masculine of the Imperative; and 4th, to the participles: e. g. 1st. פָּשְׁטָהּ (for פָּשַׁט), spoiling; רָגְזָהּ (for רָגַז), shaking, Isa. xxxii. 11; שְׁאַלָהּ (for שְׁאַל), asking, Isa. vii. 11, &c. 2d. נָחָהּ (for נָח), he rested, Isa. vii. 2; לָנָהּ (for לָן) he lodged, Zech. v. 4; הַשְׁלַכְתָּנָהּ (for הַשְׁלַכְתָּן), ye cast; גִּשְׂרָפָהּ (for גִּשְׂרַף), let us burn, Gen. xi. 3; יִדְשְׁנָהּ (for יִדְשֵׁן), he will reduce to ashes, Ps. xx. 4, &c.*

6. Verbs ending in הִי, usually drop it upon receiving the paragogic הִי: as, אֶשְׁעָהּ (for אֶשְׁעָהּ Art. 75.), I will look on, observe, Ps. cxix. 117. So גִּשְׁתַּעְהָהּ (for גִּשְׁתַּעְהָהּ), we will observe, Isa. xli. 23. This last example Schroederus puts under the form of apocope, which appears to me both unnecessary and erroneous.

7. With Imperatives: as, שִׁכְבָּהּ (for שִׁכַּב), repose thou (for שִׁכַּב), Gen. xxxix. 7; אֶסְפָּהּ (for אֶסְפַּה) collect, Num. xi. 16; שְׁמַרָהּ (for שְׁמַר), keep, Ps. xxv. 20; הִקְשִׁיבָהּ (for הִקְשִׁיב), attend, Ps. v. 3; לֶכְהָ (for לֶךְ), and with הִי omitted לֶךְ לֶךְ go, Numb. xxiii. 13. So אֶפְבְּדָהּ (for אֶפְבְּדָהּ, from אֶפְבְּדָהּ), I will be honoured, Hag. i. 8.

5. With Participles: as, בָּעֲרָהּ (from בָּעֲרַר), burning, Hos. vii. 4; נִמְלָטָהּ (from נִמְלָט), escaped, Jer. xlvi. 19.

8. Nouns singular, of both genders, as also nouns masculine of

* The force of these will be considered in the Syntax, Art. 234.

the dual and plural numbers, will occasionally receive a paragogic ה, still preserving the accent on the originally accented syllable : as, לַיְלָה (from לַיִל), the night; מִצְרַיִם (from מִצְרַיִם Egypt); יָמִים (from יָמִים) days. Any noun, however, ending in an imperfect vowel, on account of construction (Art. 143. 3.), may, when the paragogic ה is added, take the accent on the last syllable : as, מִזְרְחָה שָׁמֶשׁ (from מִזְרַח, in construction מִזְרְחָה), the rising of the sun, Deut. iv. 41, &c. In this case, such terminating vowel will suffer no change on account of the state of construction : as, מִזְרְחָה שָׁמֶשׁ, above : so, אֶרֶץ הַיְבֵנֵב, the southern country, Gen. xx. 1 ; שַׂרְהָה הַאֲהֶלָה the tent of Sarah, Gen. xxiv. 67.

9. This particle is occasionally added to the pronouns, whether separate or fixed : as, 1st, אַתְּכֶם you, fem.; הֵמָּה they, masc.; הֵנָּה they, fem.; אֵלֶּה these, com. 2d, לְכַנָּה to you; זַמְתְּכֶנָּה your (fem.) nickedness, &c.

10. It will not be necessary to trouble the Reader with instances, in which this particle is found attached to other particles : as, שָׁמָּה for שָׁם there, &c.: because, as these are manifestly nothing more than nouns, it is reasonable enough that they should receive the ה paragogic as well as others.

11. The following seem to be instances of Pleonasm: i. e. in which this letter adds nothing whatever to the sense : viz. אַתָּה, for אַתָּה, thou; נָתַתָּה, for נָתַתָּה, thou gavest; יָדְכָה, for יָדְךָ, thy hand; to which many more might be added. So in עָלָה, for עָלוּ they ascended, 2 Kings xxiv. 10 ; וְהָיָה, for וְהָיוּ, and they shall be, Josh. xv. 4, &c., where the Shūrék has been supplied by (ו).

12. The paragogic letter ו, is sometimes found with Khōlém; at others, without any vowel; and, occasionally, coming between two nouns which are in the state of construction. It is thought by some to be nothing more than a pleonasm of the affixed pronoun (ו): as, בְּנוֹ בְּעֵר, his son (viz.) of Beor, instead of בְּנוֹ בְּעֵר Numb. xxiv. 3. 15; חַיְתוֹ-אֶרֶץ its living creature (viz.) the earth's, instead of חַיֵּת אֶרֶץ Gen. i. 24; לְמַעַנְו־מַיִם into its fountain (viz.) of water, for לְמַעַן, Ps. cxiv. 8. So וַיְהִי, and וַיְהִי, his (being) alone, Gen. xiii. 6; Ps. iv. 9, &c. See also Ps. L. 10, civ. 11, 20, lxxix. 2; Isa. lvi. 9.

13. Professor Gesenius objects to this etymology, because the vowel points differ, in some respects, from those usually found with the affixed pronoun, and because the affix is also found to disagree with the noun to which it refers.* I do not think, however, that much stress can be laid on the consideration of the vowel points, because anomalies of this kind frequently occur. Nor is the disagreement of gender, discoverable between the noun and the affix, of much moment; because little regard is paid in the Hebrew, either to the gender, or number of words in cases like this, as we shall see hereafter. In the Syriac, and Ethiopic, pleonasms of this sort are extremely frequent; but, in general, a preposition is then added to the last word: as, $\text{לְכֹסֵם בְּכֹסֵם אֱלֹהִים}$, the gift of him, of God, or rather, the gift of him who (is) God. The preposition in the Ethiopic is ህ in these cases. See Ludolf. Gram. Eth., p. 138. We have also the pronominal affix ك , ቅ , thy, &c., in all its numbers and genders, in the Arabic, similarly applied in ذَلِكَ , ذَلِكَ , &c.

14. There are some instances of verbs, in which ו seems to be a paragogic letter: as, וַיִּכּוֹת and he smote, 2 Sam. xiv. 6, root נכח ; where, however, the ו may probably be the true radical letter, for which ח has been substituted: and, as Khōlēm is most frequently the second vowel proper for the present tense, nothing can be more likely, than that ו is here made to quiesce in it. We also have וַיִּשְׁבַּח in 1 Sam. xxi. 14; probably for וַיִּשְׁבַּח he changed. We have ו , in like manner,—not as a paragogic letter, but as the true radical letter,—in וַיִּמְחַק blot out, Jer. xviii. 23; וַיִּזְנֶה she committed fornication, Ib. iii. 6.

15. The letter (ו), when Paragogic, is, like the preceding asyllabic, and is mostly found between two nouns in the state of construction. Its vowel differs, in no respect, from that of the pronoun of the first person singular; whence Schultens and some others have supposed it to be nothing more than a pleonasm of that pronoun. To this, however, Storr and Gesenius object.* The Persian † etymology, however, proposed by Gesenius, and adopted by Ewald, is, perhaps, equally objectionable, as exemplified in the phrase, بُورِي the scent of musk. Whether it be the same with the يَايُ النَّسْبَةِ, or الْجِنْسِ,—of the Arabs, which is the same with the patronymic י of the Hebrews (Art. 166.); or, whether it be the י of the plural number, derived from the verbal noun הִיָּה (Art. 139. 7. note), and thence applied for the purpose of giving Emphasis, Intensity, or the like, to any particular passage, it is impossible to say; but, certain it is, that the significations thus derived will suit its application sufficiently well, where any variation of sense is discoverable from its insertion. ‡

16. This particle is found appended both to nouns, and particles: to nouns, as, אָסְרִי . . . בְּנֵי אֲתָנּוּ binding the foal of his ass, Gen. xlix. 11; רַבְּתֵי בְּנֵי great (fem.) among the nations, Lam. i. 1; קוֹלֵי תַּהֲנוּנָי the voice of my supplications, Ps. cxvi. 1; נִגְבַּתֵי יוֹם stolen (fem.) by day, Gen. xxxi. 39; see also Deut. xxxiii. 16, Ps. cx. 4, cxiii. 5, 6, 7, 9, &c. To particles: as, מִבֶּטֶן from the belly (for בֶּטֶן), Isa. xlvi. 3; בְּלִילֵי הַיּוֹם except to-day (for בְּלִילֵי), Gen. xxi. 26; so זוֹלָתִי besides (for זוֹלָת), Deut. iv. 12, &c.

* Storr. Observationes, pp. 441. 442. Gesenius Lehrgeb., p. 547.

† Ewald, moreover, takes the paragogic י, just noticed, as equivalent to the Persic Izāfut, or mark of the genitive case.

‡ In some cases, however, the (י) so affixed seems to be nothing more than a fragment of the feminine pronoun of the second person singular אֲתֵי, as אֲהַבְתִּי (Hos. x. 11.) thou hast loved, for אֲהַבְתָּה אֲתֵי, as it constantly occurs in the Syriac Participles; see the Grammars. So וַיֵּלֶךְ אֲתָהּ, for וַיֵּלֶךְ אֲתָהּ, thou bringest forth, Gen. xvi. 11. See also Jer. xxii. 23; li. 13; Mic. vii. 8, &c.

§ But this may be an instance of the Hendiadys; my voice, my supplication.

Schroëderus and Schultens have also applied this paragogic letter to verbs; but, as it is never found, except in those which have ה for the last radical letter; and, as ך is, in these cases, generally substituted for ה, there can be no doubt, that this is its character in all such instances; as Storr has also remarked.

17. The paragogic letter ך, is mostly found with verbs: it is also affixed to particles, and is then preceded by (׃), or (-); but when ך, or ך precede, it is affixed without any other vowel: as, תָּתֵן (for תֵּתֵן, on account of the accent, from תָּתַת, תָּתַת) giving; יִשְׁבֹּבָהּ (for יִשְׁבֹּבָהּ) he shall turn her back, Jer. ii. 24; יִחַיְתָן it shall hang over (thee), Hab. ii. 17;* יִכְבְּדֵנִי he will honour me, Ps. l. 23, where we have (׃) for (-), on account of the accent perhaps: so, תִּחְיִלִּי (for תִּחְיִלִּי thou (fem.) shalt bring forth, Is. xlv. 10; תִּדְבָּקִין thou shalt adhere, Ruth ii. 8. So, תִּירָאוּן ye shall fear; תִּרְאוּן ye shall see; יֵלְכוּן they shall walk, &c., and with (׃) when put for ך: as, יִשְׁכְּבוּן they shall lie down, 1 Sam. ii. 22; יִרְוּן they shall be watered, Ps. xxxvi. 9; in which cases the accent is always with the last syllable.†

18. Verbs, having ה (without Mappik), for the third radical letter, will drop it by contraction (Art. 73.) when ך paragogic is added: as, אֶכְפֹּר I will smite him, 1 Sam. xxvi. 8 (for אֶכְפֹּרֵי); אֶדְבָּר I will confess to him (for אֶדְבָּרֵי), Ps. xlii. 6; אֶרְאֶה I shall see him, Numb. xxiv. 17, &c. But, in these cases, we have also an affixed pronoun, the rules for the addition of which we now proceed to consider.

19. When a paragogic ך, is followed by either of the affixed syllabic pronouns כִּי, ך, הוּ, or ה (Art. 145. 6.), no vowel of union is required: as, יִכְבְּדֵנִי he will honour me; אֶתְקַדְּשֵׁנִי I will

* Institutiones, &c. Schultensii, p. 428. In every instance this ך, is probably nothing more than that, by which the intensive form in nouns is sometimes designated. See Art. 168. 2.

† From these examples it appears, that the ך, is sometimes single, at others doubled by Dāgēsh: its use will be shewn in the Syntax, Art. 235.

root thee out (of אָתְּהוֹן, from אָתְּהוֹן, for אָתְּהוֹן, root נתת); he shall bless him (of יִבְרַךְ, root ברא). But, if the pronoun is asyllabic, there must be a vowel of union: as, יִשְׁרְתוּנֶיךָ they shall serve thee, Isa. lx. 7.

20. The affixed pronouns נִי, and נוּ, following the paragogic ך, are frequently expressed by inserting Dāgēsh forte in the ך: as, דָּבַרְנִי he judged me (for דָּבַרְנִי, from דָּבַר, root דון). So, יִסְרַנִּי he chastised me, Ps. cxviii. 18; תִּבְרַכְנִי it shall bless me, Gen. xxvii. 19; יִשְׁׁרְנוּ he shall save us (for יִשְׁׁרְנוּ, from יִשְׁׁר, from יָצַר, root נצר); and, with the particle הִן is not; אֵינֶנִּי my not being, (for אֵינֶנִּי, from אִין), &c.

21. The paragogic ך is frequently inserted in the affix ך, by the point Dāgēsh; as, בִּרְכָךְ he has blessed thee (for בִּרְכָךְ Art. 76.); מִיִּסְרָךְ, chastising thee, Deut. viii. 5; עֹנֶנֶךְ answering thee (for עֹנֶנֶךְ, and rejecting ה by Art. 73. עֹנֶנֶךְ, rejecting נ, Art. 76, עֹנֶנֶךְ, root ענה). So, in the particles, הִנֵּה behold thou, Ps. cxxxix. 8; אֵינְךָ where (art) thou? (ending here also with paragogic ה, Art. 175.) Gen. iii. 9.

22. The ה, of the affix הוּ, is in these cases, omitted, and a compensation made in doubling the paragogic ך, by Dāgēsh: as, תִּפְקֹדְךָ thou shalt visit him (for תִּפְקֹדְךָ, See Art. 73), Ps. viii. 5. So, יַכְּךָ he shall smite him, 1 Sam. xvii. 25; תִּקַּחְךָ take him, 1 Sam. xx. 21; אֵינְךָ he is not, Gen. xxx. 33; עֹדְךָ he yet Gen. xviii. 22; and, with the feminine affixed pronoun יִבְלַעְנָהּ he shall swallow her up (for יִבְלַעְנָהּ). Isa. xxviii. 4; so, תִּקַּחְךָ take it, Jer. xxxvi. 14; תִּתְּנָהּ give it, 1 Sam. xxi. 10; אֵינְךָ it is not, Lev. xiii. 21. In these cases, Schroederus is of opinion that, the ה of the feminine pronoun has been struck out, and that the paragogic ה has been added. Storr is of a different opinion; his words are: "Similiter He paragogicum, in voce אִשְׁעָה, Ps. cxix. 117, et similibus dubitationem habet, quoniam præter formam אִשְׁעָה, ad quam He adjunctum videri possit, etiam alia datur, in Kamez desinens," &c. p. 440, note.

23. When the affix ך (which has always the accent) follows the paragogic ך, no vowel of union is employed: as, קִלְכֹּךְ curse him, Numb. xxiii. 13 (for קִלְכֹּךְ, root קלב). In like manner, we have יִשְׁנֹךְ his being (for יִשְׁנֹךְ, root ישן), 1 Sam. xiv. 39, &c.

24. This ך has by some been termed Epenthetic; but, as it appears to have been originally the same in every case, it seems unnecessary to give it more than one name.

25. The syllables, termed Paragogic, are, מִי, מוֹ, and פִּי, when preceded by the particles כִּי, כֶּ, לִּי, and מֵ: as, כִּי בְּדִי in; פִּי בְּדִי like; כִּי כִּי according to; לִּי לִּי to; מֵ בְּדִי in; מֵ מֵ like; מֵ לִּי to, &c. These are mostly confined to highly energetic compositions; whence we may infer, that they were intended to add something to the signification.

26. The first of these is thought to be the same with מִי, or מֵי, sufficiency, &c. The second, Schultens and some others have derived from מוֹ, or מוֹ water; while Jahn thinks it is the same with מֵה, or מֵה what, which, &c. In the Arabic مَا, مَاه, is frequently found attached to the similar particles; as, بِمَا, كَمَا, لَمَا, i. e. in that which; according to that which; to, or for, that which, &c. So in the Syriac, כֶּמֹ, כֶּמֹ, &c. having the same signification and composition.

27. The particle פִּי, is nothing more than another form of פֶּה, the mouth, so found in construction with other nouns. Its meaning, by a metonymy, will be, any thing said, enforced, or commanded: as, a precept, edict, &c. which will not always bear to be expressed in a translation.

On the Demonstrative Pronouns.

176. The Demonstrative Pronouns are always found written separately; they are as follows:—

זֶה masc., זֹת fem. rarely זוּ, or זֶה; הַזֶּה, or זוּ, this, sing. com.: אֵלֶּה, rarely אֵל, these, pl. com.

2. The forms הַזֶּה, הַזֹּה, masc. this, have the particle ל to, or for, with the definite article ה the. The same may be said of הַזֹּה this, fem. which occurs but once, viz. Ezek. xxxvi. 35, as also of הַזֶּה, of the common gender, as above.

3. אֵלֶּה these, is also found; it is nothing more than the plural pronoun, as above, with the article prefixed.

4. אֲנִי, however, is found construed as a plural, Gen. xxvii. 36, 1 Sam. xxix. 3, Job xix. 19, and Zech. i. 12, vii. 5. אֵלֶיךָ is also found as a singular, 1 Chron. xi. 11, 2 Chron. iii. 3, xvii. 14, and Ezra i. 9. But this has been done, either by some figure of speech, or by what is termed logical construction.

On the Relative Pronoun.

177. The Hebrew language recognises but one Relative Pronoun : viz. אֲשֶׁר he who, that which, what; which is common to every gender and number.

2. The gender and number is determined by that of the preceding, or following, noun, or pronoun : as, אֲשֶׁר הָעֹמְדִים who stand, i. e. they (masc.) who stand, 1 Kings xii. 8 ; אֲשֶׁר קָצִירוֹ who his harvest, i. e. whose harvest, Job v. 5 ; אֲשֶׁר הַדִּבְּזָנִי רָחַח which (masc.) the wind disperses it, i. e. which (masc.) the wind disperses, Ps. i. 4 ; בְּאֶרְצָם . . . אֲשֶׁר in whose land, Joel iv. 19.

3. In some instances, the demonstrative pronouns זֶה, זוּ, and זוֹ take the place of אֲשֶׁר : as, Ps. ix. 16, xii. 8, and cxxxii. 12, &c. A similar substitution takes place in the Arabic, which the Grammarians ascribe to a difference of dialect.*

4. This pronoun is frequently found, prefixed to other words, in an abbreviated form : as, אֲשֶׁר, אֲשֶׁר, אֲשֶׁר, or אֲשֶׁר, the first and last letters being rejected. Examples : אֲשֶׁר נִתְּנָנוּ,

* In the Arabic commentary on the Káfi of Ibn Olhájib, published at Calcutta, (p. ۲۶۹) we have the following remark : وذو الطائفة . أي المنسوبة الي بني طي لاختصاص مجيها موصولة بلغتهم بمعني الذي والتي قال الشاعر . ع . وبئر ذي حفرت وذو طويت . أي التي وحفرتها والتي طويتها, &c. That is, of the tribe of Táy: i. e. which is referred to that tribe, on account of its peculiar usage in their dialect, as the relative pronoun, signifying who, which, &c. in both genders (i. e. masc. and fem.) The Poet has said, ' My well which (وي) I digged, and which (وي) I enclosed.'

Dathe thinks, that we have an ellipsis of אֲשֶׁר, in these instances. See Glass. Philol. Sacr., ed. 1776, p. 160.

for לֹא נָתַנְנוּ אֲשֶׁר, who has not given us (up), Ps. cxxiv. 6; שָׁקוּיָנוּ , for אֲשֶׁר קוּיָנוּ , which we waited (for), Lam. ii. 16; שָׁקַמְתִּי , for אֲשֶׁר קָמְתִי , till I arose, Jud. v. 7; שָׁאֲתָה , for אֲשֶׁר אֲתָה , which thou, Ib. vi. 17; שָׁהֵם , for אֲשֶׁר הֵם , that they, Eccl. iii. 18, &c. It is, perhaps, difficult to say in what cases the vowel (◌◌) is to be preferred to (◌); but it is not of much importance. Kāméts is used, only when a letter incapable of receiving Dāgēsh follows: as, שָׁאֲתָה which thou, Judg. vi. 17. But, even in this case, (◌◌) is occasionally found sustained by an accent: as, שָׁעָלוּ they who went up. The usage of (◌◌) in these places cannot, perhaps, be easily accounted for.

On the Interrogative, and occasionally Indefinite Pronouns.

178. These are מִי for persons, who? מָה , מַה , or מַה , which, what? הֲ , הִ , הֵ , what, whether? and אֵי where, how? &c. for things: all of which are invariable, and of the common gender: as, מִי־אַתָּה who (art) thou (masc.)? Gen. xxvii. 32; מִי־אַתְּ who (art) thou (fem.)? Ruth iii. 9; מִי־אַלֶּהֶם who (are) these? Gen. xxxiii. 5. We also have מִי שְׁמֶךָ what (is) thy name? which Schultens says, refers to the person nevertheless: as, Quis nomen tuum? (Institutiones ad Fund. Ling. Heb., p. 228.). Examples with מַה are: $\text{מַה עֲוֹנוֹנוּ וְמַה חַטָּאתֵנוּ}$ What (is) our iniquity, and what our sin? Jer. xvi. 10; $\text{מַה הָאִישׁ מְשַׁבֵּט הָאִישׁ}$ what (is) the manner of the man? 2 Kings i. 7: מַה קוֹל what noise, 1 Sam. iv. 6, 14.

2. מַה , with Kāméts, is used when the article (ה), or any other letter, incapable of receiving Dāgēsh, immediately follows, excepting ה or ע: as, מַה הַבְּטָחוֹן what confidence? 2 Kings xviii. 19; מַה־הָאָדָם what (is) man?

Ps. viii. 5 ; מָה הֵנָּה what (are) they (fem.)? Isa. xli. 22 ;
 מָה הוּא לָהּ what he (was) to her, Esth. viii. 1.

3. Exceptions : 1. We have מָה with Páthakh, notwithstanding the article following : מַה־הַמַּעַל what prevarication? Josh. xxii. 16. Also in מַה־הִיא what it is, Ps. xxxix. 5 ; מַה הַטָּאֵהִי what (is) my sin? Gen. xxxi. 36. But, see Art. 133.

4. Whenever any letter capable of receiving Dāgēsh follows, מָה is with Páthakh ; and Dāgēsh is expressed in the following letter : as, מַה־טוֹב וּמַה־נָּעִים how good and how pleasant? Art. 112. In מַה־שְׁנֵי what two (fem.)? Zech. iv. 12, the Dāgēsh is omitted.

5. When any guttural letter, having (ט) ; or ח, or ע, not having it, immediately follows, we have מָה, with Sēgól, apparently for the sake of euphony : as, מָה־הִתְּיָה לּוֹ what has happened to him? Exod. xxxii. 1 ; מָה־חֲדָל what defect? Ps. xxxix. 5 ; מָה עָשִׂיתִי what have I done? &c. Art. 114.

On the Interrogative Particles ה, and אֵי.

179. The Interrogative particle ה, הַ, or הֵ, has been classed, by some, with the definite article ; but, if we consider either its construction or office, we must be convinced that they are different words.

2. The office of this particle is, Interrogation, like the Latin an, annon, num, utrum? or the like ; and, in this capacity, it is used strongly to affirm or deny ; and thus either to increase, or diminish, the importance of things with which it is connected. It is also used indefinitely.

3. It is invariably prefixed to some word ; and is often followed, in the succeeding member of the sentence, by the particle אֵי, having nearly the same signification with utrum followed by an, in Latin, and corresponding to each other in different members of the sentence ; or, as an and vel, in the following passage, הַאֲתָה זֶה בְּנֵי עֶשָׂו

In many instances it loses its interrogative power, as it happens with similar particles in other languages, and may then be construed, either as a relative, or, indefinitely; as, הָהֵלְכוּ אִתּוֹ who came with him,† Josh. x. 24; הֲיִשָּׁכֶם whether you are, Deut. xiii. 4; הֲפִרְחָה whether it blossoms, Cant. vi. 11, &c.

4. When prefixed to any word, commencing either with Shěvâ (:), or (-) it will take the vowel (-), with the Euphonic accent, and, therefore, will not require that the following letter should take Dāgēsh: as, הֲשַׁכַּחְתֶּם have ye forgotten? Jer. xliv. 9; הֲבֵרַכְתָּ num benedictio? Gen. xxvii. 38; הֲלִבְעַנְתָּ whether on thy account? Job xviii. 4, &c. With gutturals; הֲאֵמַת whether truth? הֲעַתָּה whether time.

5. In these cases, however, the Dāgēsh is often expressed: as, הֲדַרְכֵי whether my ways? Ezek. xviii. 29; הֲרִאִיתֶם have ye seen? 1 Sam. x. 24; הֲפִצְעָה לְהִיאֵה whether according to her cry? Gen. xviii. 21. And once, when Shěvâ is not attached to the first letter of such word: as, הֲיִיטֵב will it be well? Lev. x. 19.

6. When any word, to which this particle is prefixed, commences with a consonant and a vowel (excepting gutturals with τ) the interrogative will take (-): as, הֲיֵצֵה הַיַּרְדֵּן whether of the tree? Gen. iii. 11; הֲיִצְאוּ shall the flock...? Num. xi. 22; הֲיִקְרָה shall it happen to thee?

7. Guttural letters, having (τ), require the Interrogative particle to be prefixed with (τ): as, הֲאֵנֹכִי whether I? Numb. xi. 12; הֲהִיטָה has it come to pass? Joel i. 2; הֲחִזֵּק whether strong?

* These particles correspond, both in sense and construction, with the Arabic أَمْ , and أَمْ ; as in the following passage from the Koran, c. 1. v. 5.

وَأَنْذَرْتَهُمْ أَمْ لَمْ تُنذِرْهُمْ وَأَنْذَرْتَهُمْ أَمْ لَمْ تُنذِرْهُمْ WHETHER thou admonish them, or whether thou do not admonish them. Their precise force will be considered in the Syntax.

† In which case it differs but little from the definite article when used for الَّذِي . So, المعده in Arabic, for الذِي مَعَهُ Gram. Arab. de Sacy, vol. i. p. 338.

We also have, הִחַדְלֵתִי shall I cease? Judg. ix. 9, &c., which is perhaps erroneous, for הִחַדְלֵתִי. We also have, הֲיִסְתָּם whether you? Judg. vi. 31; and, הֲאִפְרָתִי whether an Ephrathite? Ib. xii. 5, which are anomalous. (See Art. 114.).

8. Noldius is of opinion, that this particle is a mere interjection, forced out by the breath with some effort, in order to give the passage the force of an interrogation, or otherwise to heighten the expression; which is extremely probable. The passages, too, which require to be construed interrogatively, but in which this particle is not found, must be so enounced, otherwise their interrogative force will not be perceived; e. g. In 2 Sam. xviii. 29, we have וְשָׁלוֹם, for הֲשָׁלוֹם, which is found Ib. 32. and also in the similar passages, 2 Kings ix. 18, 19. In like manner, perhaps, אֲשִׁיא, for הֲאֲשִׁיא, shall I lift up? Ps. cxxi. 1; and עָשִׂיתִי, for הֲעָשִׂיתִי, Ezek. xvi. 59, which, when expressed with emphasis, will have just the same effect as they would, had the particle been prefixed. This is very much the case in all languages; and, when no note of interrogation is used, we are compelled to determine by the context, whether such sentence is to be taken interrogatively or not; and, hence, whether it is to be understood in a positive or negative sense. When this particle is prefixed, however, this difficulty is removed: which is not always the case.

9. The Interrogative particle אֵי, which is sometimes written separately, and at others is prefixed to pronouns, is probably nothing more than an interjection, like the preceding, so enounced as to imply a question. It is occasionally of the forms הֵא, and הָא, and in conjunction with a pronoun: as, הֵיךְ, and אֵיךְ.* Examples: אֵי הֶבֶל אָחִיךְ Where is Abel thy brother? Gen. iv. 9; אֵי לָזָאת אֶסְלֹחַ-לְךָ How can I pardon thee for this? Jer. v. 7. With pronouns: אֵי-יָהּ Where? Esth.

* In Persian, Sanscrit, and some other Oriental languages, ای is an interjection O! Oh! &c. In Arabic أَيَّ has the same meaning as in Hebrew, viz., Quisnam, quis, quod, &c.

vii. 5, 1 Sam. ix. 18, Is. l. 1; אֵיזָה הִרְרָה הֶלֶךְ Which way went he? 1 Kings xiii. 12; מֵאַיִן מֵעִיר אָתָּה From what city (art) thou? 2 Sam. xv. 2; אֵיךְ יָדַעְתָּ How knowest thou? 2 Sam. i. 5; כִּדְעָה יִדְעָה How can we know? Deut. xviii. 21, &c.

10. It also occurs with a paragogic ה, אֵינָה הָאֲנָשִׁים: as, אֵינָה הָאֲנָשִׁים Where (are) the men? Gen. xix. 5.

11. This particle is sometimes expressive of desire, admiration, lamentation, expostulation, insult, or negation, as is also the case with most of the interrogative pronouns: as, אֵינָה יְהוָה Where is Jehovah! Jer. ii. 8. (desire) אֵינָה אֲפֹתִי תִקְוָהי Where is now my hope! Job xvii. 15. אֵיךְ אָבַדְתָּ How hast thou perished! Ezek. xxiv. 17, &c.

On the Definite Article ה.

180. The Hebrews have,—probably a fragment of some word,*—the definite article ה, which they prefix to others, for the purpose of restricting, or otherwise modifying, their signification, as will presently be seen.

2. Some have supposed that this particle is an abbreviation of the pronoun היא he, or one or other of the interjections הן, היא, היא, behold. Others, again, have affirmed that it is only another form of the Arabic article ال, אל, which should be written הל.† In this case, as in many others, each party is, perhaps, both right and wrong. That both these articles have a common origin is, to me, extremely probable; and that their powers are the same, in both these languages, there can be no doubt. No good reason can be assigned, perhaps, why we are to derive the Hebrew form of the article from the Arabic one, rather than we should derive the Arabic one from the Hebrew. Professor Gesenius thinks, that there are manifest traces of the Arabic article to be found in the Hebrew Bible, such, for example, as, אֶלְקִים Prov. xxx. 31, which he considers as equal to the Arabic ^{سور} القوم the people; אֱלֹמוֹרָד Gen. x. 26, and אֱלֹתוֹלָד Josh. xv. 30, which, 1 Chron. iv. 29, is written תּוֹלָד. With respect to the first of these, there seems to be but little necessity for supposing the syllable אֵל, to be the Arabic article ال. The interpretation of Schultens, Hiller, and others, who suppose אֵל to be the prohibitive particle here, appears to me to answer the intention of the Sacred Writer much better. With respect to the proper names אֱלֹמוֹרָד, and אֱלֹתוֹלָד, either אֵל, or אֶל, will suit sufficiently well, without having recourse to the Arabic. The circumstance of אֶל, being omitted in one place, in the parallel passage, is nothing more than what is found to happen in other words and phrases, and particularly in proper names (See Art. 170. 9, &c.)

* Of the pronoun היא, in all probability: so the Greek ὁ, of ὄς.

3. Another particular dwelt upon is, that, in Hebrew, the letter following the article is almost always doubled; and, that in Arabic, the ه of the article is so assimilated to the following letter, in many cases, that the first letter of the word may be said to be doubled:

as, הַשֶּׁמֶשׁ in Hebrew, and ^ش الشمس pronounced ششمس in Arabic, both signifying the sun. It might be suggested: In Hebrew the imperfect vowel (-), with which this article is usually attended, makes it necessary, that the following letter be doubled, in order to complete the syllable commencing with the article, (Art. 33.). In Arabic, the ه, of the article must, according to rules altogether at variance with this, either be pronounced or not. In many instances it must be pronounced: it is only in others, that the sound of ه, is merged in that of the succeeding letter; and to this no parallel is to be found in Hebrew. I am of opinion, therefore, that the Arabs have introduced the ه of the article, and not, that the Hebrews have rejected it.*

* In the Commentary on the Kāfiā by Moolla Jāmi, published at Calcutta, in 1818, it is cited as the opinion of El Mobarrad, that ه is the original form of the article, and that the ل has been added, in order to distinguish it from the interrogative, ه, ا, p. 12. The words are, والمُبَرَّرَ نَهَبَ اِلَى اَنْهَا والهمزة المفتوحة وحدها زيدت اللام للفرق بينها وبين همزة الاستفهام.

4. The Definite article is regularly prefixed with Páthakh (-); occasionally with Kāméts (·), or Sēgól (˘): as, הַגָּדוֹל the great; הַאָּדָם the man; or הָעָרִים the cities.

5. Whenever any letter, capable of receiving Dāgēsh, follows the article, it will be doubled by that mark, and the article will take Páthakh; הַשֶּׁשֶׁשׁ the sun.

6. But, הַ, לַ, מַ, or שָׁ, (with Shēvá,) are frequently found so situated without Dāgēsh: as, הַיְשׁוּעָה the salvation, Ps. iii. 9; הַיַּרְדֵּן the river, Exod. vii. 18, &c. Where the euphonic accent is also omitted, Artt. 128. 2; 127. 3.

7. Of words commencing with הַ, הַלְוִיִּם the Levites, Num. iii. 12.—With מַ, הַמְּלִמֵּד the teacher, Ps. cxliv. 1; הַמְּבַשְּׂרוֹת the proclaimers (fem.) of good news, Ps. lxxviii. 12.—Yet we have הַמְּשֻׁשָׁעִים the insane, 2 Kings ix. 11; הַמְּעֻנָּה the delicate woman, Jer. vi. 2; הַמְּנַאֲפֶת the adulteress, Ezek. xvi. 32, and הַמְּבֹשְׁלִים the cooks, Ib. xlvi. 24, &c.—With שָׁ: as, הַצְּפֹרְדָּיִם the frogs, Exod. vii. 29. Yet we have הַצְּפֹרְדָּה the frog, Exod. viii. 2. In most of these instances, it is probable the negligence of the transcribers has been the sole cause of the omissions.

8. If, however, either of the letters הַ, חַ, or עַ, follow such letter, Dāgēsh is mostly expressed: as, הַיְהוּדִים the Jews, &c.

9. But, when any letter incapable of receiving Dāgēsh follows the article, it will take the perfect vowel corresponding to (-), in order to complete its syllable: as, הָאִישׁ the man; הָרֹאשׁ the head; הָעַלְמָה the virgin, &c.

10. In many instances, however, when either חַ, or חַ, follows, (-) is still retained: as, הַחֲלֵלָה that which proceedeth, Gen. ii. 14; הַחַיָּה the living creature, Gen. viii. 1. In all which cases (-) will either be sustained by an accent, or must be considered as placing an implicit Dāgēsh in the following letter (Art. 109.).

11. In words, not monosyllables, commencing with הַ, חַ, or עַ, with Kāméts (·) the article usually takes (˘): as, הָחָכְמָן the wise man; הָעָרִים the cities (Art. 114.)

12. When such words are monosyllables, the former rule prevails: as, הַהָר the mountain; הָעָם the people, Par. 9.

13. The letter חַ, however, having (·) or (˘) in monosyllables, will mostly prefix the article with (ו): as, הַיָּם 1 Kings iii. 22, 23 (where it also occurs, הַיָּם); הַחֲרָבוֹת the wastes, Ezek. xxxvi. 35. The word אֲרֶץ earth, always takes (א) with the article, and changes its first (ו) to (א) for the sake of euphony: as, הָאֲרֶץ the earth.

14. On the use of the article we shall speak particularly when we come to the Syntax. It will suffice for the present to remark, that its offices appear to be two: one, to mark the noun to which it is prefixed, as already known and definite, either from the context, or from general consent: as, הָאֹר the light, Gen. i. 4; or, הַשָּׁמַיִם the heavens, Ib. i. 1; הָעֵלְמָה * ἡ παρθένος, Is. vii. 14, &c.: the other, for the purpose of impressing upon the mind of the Hearer or Reader, the peculiar property, nature, character, &c., of the noun to which it is prefixed: as, הַחֲמִיר an animal remarkable for its properties as a lion, 1 Sam. xvii. 34. So Ib. הַדָּבָר a very bear. So, passim הָאֱלֹהִים the real or true God. It is occasionally used moreover as a vocative: as, הַבְּעַל, the Being designated as The Lord Possessor, or the like, 1 Kings xviii. 26. Comp. Deut. xxxii. 1: Ps. cxiv. 8: Joel i. 2. So, in the N. Test. ὁ θεός, Heb. i. 8. Apoc. xv. 3, &c.

15. This particle is also said to occur in the sense of the Latin versus, when found, either prefixed, or postfixed, or both, to words: as, הַרְמָתָה towards Ramah, 1 Sam. vii. 17; הַפְּלִשְׁתִּים to, or towards the Philistines, Ib. xiii. 20; הָעִיר to the city, Ib. xx. 40, 42; הָאֹהֶלָה שָׂרָה אִמּוֹ to the tent of Sarah his mother, † Gen. xxiv. 67.

* The Jews, and some of the German Divines, have thought, that in this, and some other cases, the article is equivalent to the Demonstrative pronoun this, the intention of which however has been, to get rid of a certain unpalatable doctrine. This word may, however, be placed with equal propriety under our second head here.

† This sentence is elliptical, for הָאֹהֶלָה אִמּוֹ שָׂרָה אִמּוֹ. See Gen. xxvii. 22, &c. הָאֵל לִי יַעֲקֹב.

To which many others might be added. In these instances, however, it is very doubtful whether the article does not retain its original signification; the noun following being considered as complementary to some preceding verb, either expressed or implied: as, Josh. viii. 19, וַיָּבֹאוּ הָעִיר, and they entered THE city, &c., or, by the preposition אֶל being understood. The following examples will tend to confirm this opinion, in which, according to Buxtorf,* the preposition is to be supplied; וַיָּבֹאוּ יְרוּשָׁלַם, and he came (to) lit. entered Jerusalem, 1 Kings iii. 15; אָבֹא בֵיתְךָ, I will enter thy house, Ps. v. 8; וַיַּעַל הַמֶּלֶךְ בֵּית יְהוָה, and the king went up (to) the house of Jehovah, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 30; וַיָּבִיאוּם בָּבֶל, and he (caused them to enter) brought them to Babylon, Jer. xxviii. 3.

16. The passages in which ׀ occurs, postfixed to words, and in which it is said to have the signification of versus, are numerous; yet, it must not be dissembled, that passages which must be so construed, but in which this particle is not found, are also numerous. Noldius is of opinion, that it is nothing more than a paragogic letter, added for the mere sake of euphony; or, with the view of giving some emphasis: and, if this latter be the fact, it will be the definite article, as used in the Chaldaic and Syriac.† Buxtorf holds, that it is not paragogic, because, says he, “tales literæ nihil ad vocem consignificant.”‡

17. When this particle is postfixed, it does not take the accent, in which particular it differs from the feminine affix ה. The following are a few examples of its occurrence: מִצְרַיִם׀ to Egypt, Gen. xii. 10, 14, &c.; הַשָּׁמַיִם׀ towards heaven, Gen. xv. 5, xxviii. 11, &c.; הַיַּרְדֵּן׀ into the river, Exod. i. 22; הַמִּדְבָּר׀ towards the desert, Exod. iv. 27, &c. In these cases, it is said by some to be equivalent to the Syriac and Chaldaic ׀, which either makes the noun, to which it is attached definite, or gives some emphasis to the sentence. On these subjects, see the Syntax, Art. 221.

† “ ׀ paragogicum nil nisi pronunciantis nisus est, qui vel impetum et tendentiam ad locum objectumve aliud; vel admirationem magnitudinis, aut, in negativis, exiguitatis rei significat; vel ob soni saltem suavitatem vocibus adjicitur.” Concord. part. Ed. 1734, p. 217, note.

On the Numerals.

181. The last species of nouns, of which we have to treat, are the numerals: these are of two kinds: 1st, those which designate the number of persons, or things, to be thus defined, and are termed the Cardinal Numbers; and, 2d, those which determine the order, in which they are to be taken: as, first, second, &c., which are termed the Ordinal Numbers.

2. The Cardinal Numbers are supplied, in the Hebrew, by substantives put, either in apposition, or in the state of construction, with others designating the persons or things to be numbered: and they have this peculiarity, that those which designate the numbers from three to ten inclusively, generally take the feminine form with masculine nouns: and, vice versâ, the masculine form with feminine nouns. But of this more will be said in the Syntax. The decimal numbers may be considered as adjectives or epithets.

First,	רִאשׁוֹן, or אֶחָד.	רִאשׁוֹנָה.
Second,	שֵׁנִי,	שְׁנִיָּה.
Third,	שְׁלִישִׁי,	שְׁלִישִׁית.
Fourth,	רְבִיעִי,	רְבִיעִית.
Fifth,	חֲמִישִׁי,	חֲמִישִׁית.

Ninth,	תִּשְׁעִי,	תִּשְׁעִית.
Tenth,	עָשִׂירִי,	עָשִׂירִית.

3. The rest of the Ordinal Numbers are made by the terms used for the Cardinal ones: as, הַשְּׁנָה הָאַחַת עָשָׂרָה the eleventh year; so, הַיּוֹם הַשְּׁבַעִי עָשָׂר יוֹם the seventeenth day.

4. In some other cases also, the Cardinal Number has been preferred: as, יוֹם אֶחָד day one, i. e. the first day; שְׁנַת שְׁנָיִם the second year; so, שְׁנַת שִׁבְעָה the seventh year. But these are probably elliptical expressions. Lev. xxv. 10, 11. שְׁנַת הַחֲמִשִּׁים שְׁנָה, the year of fifty years, i. e. the fiftieth. And Gen. vii. 11, שְׁנַת שֵׁשׁ מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה in the year of six hundred years, i. e. in the six hundredth year.

5. The decimal numerals ending in ים: as, עֶשְׂרִים, are never found taking the form for construction, עֶשְׂרֵי, &c. (Art. 143. 7.).

6. When the feminine form occurs in these numerals, distribution or parcels, consisting each of that number of persons or things, is intended to be conveyed: as, וְשָׂרֵי עֶשְׂרֹת, and chiefs of the tens, Exod. xviii. 25.

7. The intermediate numbers from ten to twenty, twenty to thirty, &c. are made by connecting a decimal with an unit, in the following manner.

	Masc.	Fem.
Eleven,	אַחַד עָשָׂר,	אַחַת עֶשְׂרֵה.
	or עֶשְׂתֵּי עָשָׂר,	עֶשְׂתֵּי עֶשְׂרֵה.
Twelve,	שְׁנַיִם עָשָׂר,	שְׁתֵּי עֶשְׂרֵה.
	or שְׁנַיִם עָשָׂר,	שְׁתֵּי עֶשְׂרֵה.
Thirteen,	שְׁלֹשָׁה עָשָׂר,	שְׁלוֹשׁ עֶשְׂרֵה.
Fourteen,	אַרְבָּעָה עָשָׂר,	אַרְבַּע עֶשְׂרֵה.
Fifteen,	חֲמִישָׁה עָשָׂר,	חֲמִשׁ עֶשְׂרֵה.
Sixteen,	שֵׁשָׁה עָשָׂר,	שֵׁשׁ עֶשְׂרֵה.
Seventeen,	שִׁבְעָה עָשָׂר,	שִׁבְעַת עֶשְׂרֵה.
Eighteen,	שְׁמוֹנָה עָשָׂר,	שְׁמוֹנֶת עֶשְׂרֵה.
Nineteen,	תְּשַׁעָה עָשָׂר,	תְּשַׁע עֶשְׂרֵה.

8. In a few cases אֶחָד is found as the absolute form: as, לְאֶחָד מֵהֶם to one of them, Deut. xxviii. 55. So 2 Kings ix. 1, Ezek. xlvi. 17, Zech. xi. 7, &c.

9. In two instances, this word is found defectively written, Ezek. xviii. 10, אָח; and Ib. xxxiii. 30, אָח.

10. The feminine form אַחַת, when found at the end of a sentence with the accent Athnák, or Ségól, is written אַחַת. See Exod. xxxvi. 10, where it occurs twice.

11. This word (אַחַד) is also found in the plural: as, דְּבָרִים אֶחָדִים dictiones unæ, like mœnis unis, in the Latin, Gen. xi. 1, it. Ib. xxxii. 44, xxix. 20, Ezek. xxxvii. 17, Dan. xi. 20; שְׁתֵּי is put for וְשָׁמָיִם the ך being dropped, and its loss supplied by Dāgēsh (not fortè, Art. 76.). See my Lexicon.

12. From twenty to thirty, &c., the intermediate numerals are formed thus :

	Com.	Masc.	Fem.*
One-and-twenty,	וְעֶשְׂרִים	אַחַד, or	אַחַת
Two-and-twenty,	וְעֶשְׂרִים	שְׁנַיִם	שְׁתַּיִם
Three-and-thirty,	וּשְׁלֹשִׁים	שְׁלֹשָׁה	שְׁלוֹשׁ
Four-and-forty,	וְאַרְבָּעִים	אַרְבָּעָה	אַרְבַּע
Fifty-five,	וְחַמְשִׁים	חֲמֵשָׁה	חֲמֵשׁ
Sixty-six,	וּשְׁשִׁים	שֵׁשׁ	שֵׁשׁ
Seventy-seven,	וּשְׁבָעִים	שִׁבְעָה	שִׁבַּע
Eighty-eight,	וּשְׁמֹנִים	שְׁמֹנֶה	שְׁמוֹנֶה
Ninety-nine,	וּתְשַׁעִים	תְּשַׁעָה	תְּשַׁע

13. And the hundreds, &c., thus :

	Com. gen.
Three hundred,	שְׁלֹשׁ מֵאוֹת
Four ditto,	אַרְבַּע מֵאוֹת
Five ditto,	חֲמֵשׁ מֵאוֹת
Three thousand,	שְׁלֹשָׁת אֲלָפִים
Four ditto,	אַרְבָּעָה אֲלָפִים
Five ditto,	חֲמֵשָׁת אֲלָפִים
Twice ten thousand,	שְׁתֵּי רִבּוֹת
Twenty thousand,	עֶשְׂרִים אֲלֶף
Ten times ten thousand,	עֶשֶׂר רִבּוֹת
A hundred thousand,	מֵאָה אֲלֶף or, מֵאָת
Six hundred thousand,	שֵׁשׁ מֵאוֹת אֲלֶף

* See No. 2. above.

14. The Cardinal Numerals, from three to ten inclusive, require the word, designating the thing numbered, to be put in the plural number: all the others require the singular. Examples, חֲמִשָּׁן שָׁנִים וּמֵאָת שָׁנָה five years and a hundred year, Gen. v. 6; שִׁבְעִים וְשָׁמוֹנֶה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה seven years and eight hundred year, Ib. 7.

Some instances occur, in which this rule is not observed: as, עֶשְׂרִים עֶשְׂרִים חֲמִשִּׁים twenty planks, Exod. xxxvi. 23; חֲמִשִּׁים שֶׁקֶלִים fifty shekels, Josh. vii. 21; עֶשְׂרִים וְאַרְבָּעָה אֲלָף twenty and four thousand, 1 Chron. xxvii. 1; בֶּן-עֶשְׂרִים וְחָמֵשׁ שָׁנָה a son of twenty and five years, i. e. a man five and twenty years old. So עֶשְׂרִים וְתֵשַׁע שָׁנָה twenty and nine years, 2 Kings xiv. 2. But of this more will be said in the Syntax.

15. When the decimal number takes the precedence, the conjunction ו is used: as, שִׁבְעִים וְשֶׁבַע seventy and seven; תֵּשַׁע וְשִׁשִּׁים ninety and six, Ezr. viii. 35, &c.

16. When the numerals are to be used distributively, they are repeated like other nouns: as, שְׁנַיִם וְשְׁנַיִם two and two, i. e. by twos; חֲמִשִּׁים חֲמִשִּׁים אִישׁ by fifties, or every fiftieth man.

17. Numerals, signifying the repetition of any quantity or thing, are generally expressed by the dual number: as, אַרְבָּעוֹתָיִם four-fold; שִׁבְעוֹתָיִם seven-fold, or seven times counted.

LECTURE X.

ON THE HEBREW VERBS.

182. WE now come to treat on the Hebrew Verbs, and to shew, first, In what way they appear to have been formed; secondly, To delineate and explain their several conjugations.

2. The verb, we believe (See Art. 146.), is, in its crude state, nothing more than a noun of one form or other,* and, that its signification is regulated by that peculiar to the form of the noun, to which it belongs, whether that form be primitive, or derived.

3. If, therefore, we have the means of knowing, what signification is to be attached to the different forms of the primitive nouns, as also how the augmented forms are derived, and what sense they will bear; we shall also know, to what class the verb itself is to be referred, and what must be its general force, and meaning.

4. In our Lectures on the forms and derivation of nouns, we laid before the Student all that appeared necessary on that subject; leaving it to his own industry to follow out the enquiry to any extent he might think proper. We now come to shew how this bears on the question before us.

5. The different forms of the verb, as found generally in use, amount to seven; four of these have an active, and three a passive (and sometimes a reciprocal) signification.

6. The first of these has been termed Kal, קל i. e. levis, light; because the root is here exhibited in its simple state. Verbs of this species are either active, or neuter.

* Kimkhi says, in his Hebrew Grammar, the Mikhlol. fol. 3. verso, ואכתוב שער דקדוק הפעלים בתחלה ואף על פי שהשם קדם לפעל כי הפעל יצא מהשם ואמרו כי השם כמו הגוף נושא המקרים והפעל כמו מוקדא on the Grammar of verbs, although the noun precedes the verb: for the verb proceeds from the noun. And they say that the noun is, like the body, the subject of accident; but, that the verb (may be considered) as the accident (only.)” And again, fol. קצא verso. כי . . . דע השמות הם שנים חלקים יש מהם שם שהוא נגזר מן הפועל או הפועל ממנו כמו ראובן שְׁמֵעוֹן זְבוּלֹן שהוא שם נגזר מן הפועל הָכַם רָשָׁע צְדִיק הָרֶבֶץ i. e. “Observe that nouns are of two sorts. There are those which are either derived from verbs, or, from which verbs are derived; as, Reuben, Simeon, Zebulon, each of which is derived from a verb: שְׁלֵג־הַרְבֵּב wise; רָשָׁע wicked; צְדִיק just; הָרֶבֶץ a sword; שְׁלֵג snow, and the like, are nouns from which verbs are derived.”

7. In this conjugation, or Species, as we shall term it, three forms are in use, which may be represented by the measures פִּקְרָה, פִּקְרָה, and פִּקְרָה, corresponding to the forms of nouns given in Art. 153. Ff. II. III. X.*

8. Again, in this, as in every other Species of the conjugation of Hebrew verbs, two tenses only are found; namely, the Past and the Present.

9. The leading form in every Species will designate the third person singular masculine, of the Preterite Tense; and, in Kal, this will always be a primitive noun of the form פִּקְרָה, פִּקְרָה, or פִּקְרָה.

10. The leading form, proper for the present tense of this Species, is always a noun, of one or other of the primitive Segolates; as, פִּקְרָה, פִּקְרָה, or פִּקְרָה (See Art. 148, &c.); which, when combined with one or other of the pronouns, will present both the vowels, and signification, proper for this Species of the conjugation.

183. The next Species, taken in the usual order, is termed Niphhál, נִפְעַל, because, as it should seem, that term presents the conjugation itself, of the word formerly taken as a paradigm for the verbs in general, which was פִּעַל. This constitutes a sort of objective voice of the foregoing.

* A similar variety, in the vowels proper for the medial radical letter of the root, exists in the Arabic; where, as in the Hebrew, the first generally denotes transitive verbs; as, ^{نَصَرَ} he assisted; the second, verbs of sense: as, ^{سَمِعَ} he heard; ^{فَرِحَ} he was glad; the third, habit; as, ^{كَرَّمَ} he was generous, &c. So, ^{בָּקַר} he visited; ^{שִׂמַח} he was glad; ^{יָגַל} he was powerful.

2. This species is, according to our system, grounded on an augmented word, combined of two others, and affording both the form and sense peculiar to this conjugation (See Art. 157. 18, 19, &c. 162. Ff. I. II.); וְבִקַּרְתָּ , therefore, will be the measure, generally taken, for the leading form of the Preterite Tense of this Species; as, וְבִקַּרְתָּ he was, or became, visited.

3. The Present Tense of this Species is formed on the measure וְבִקַּרְתָּ (for וְבִקַּרְתָּהּ Artt. 157. 18. 162, &c.); which, with the abbreviated form of the pronoun of the third person sing. masc. will be וְבִקַּרְתָּי he is, or becomes, visited, and, by Art. 76. וְבִקַּרְתָּי.

4. The third Species has been termed Pihél פִּיחֵל . This is of the active voice, and has, for the most part, a transitive signification (See Art. 154. 7, 8, &c.). The measure, proper for the leading person of the Preterite, is פִּיחַלְתָּ ; which is one of the augmented and intensitive forms given under Art. 154. 4, &c.

5. The form proper for the leading person of the Present Tense is, (Ib. Form I.) פִּיחַלְתָּ ; which, with the abridged form of the pronoun, will become פִּיחַלְתָּי .

6. The objective Species or passive voice, peculiar to this class of verbs, is termed Pūhál פִּיחַלְתָּ . Its leading word will be of the measure פִּיחַלְתָּ , and will always be a noun of the form given in Art. 154. Form V. This may be termed the fourth Species.

7. The fifth Species is termed Hiphhíl הִפְחִיל ; the leading form of which is cognate with those of the augmented nouns given Art. 160: that proper for the Preterite being of the measure הִפְחִילְתָּ ,—for the Present, הִפְחִילְתָּ ; the force of which will be seen in Art. 157. 2—9.

8. The sixth, and the objective Species, of Hiphhíl, is termed Hophhál הִפְחִילְתָּ . This takes, for the leading word of both tenses, a noun of the augmented form הַתְּפַקֵּד. See Artt. 157. 10. 160. F. VII. having an objective signification.

9. The seventh and last Species is termed Hithpāhél, הִתְּפַעֵל; which, as before, is the form taken in the old paradigm פָּעַל, in this species. Our form is הִתְּפַקֵּד. The leading forms, proper for both tenses, will always be of this measure, affording the sense common to nouns of this form, See Artt. 157. 13—19. 164. Ff. I. II.

184. These are the forms of the several Species of the Conjugation of Hebrew verbs, as usually given in the Grammars. But to these, a few others may be added: which, as they occur less frequently, have been considered anomalous. They are, however, according to our view of the subject, just as regular in their formation as those already mentioned: and, although they occur less frequently,—which might easily be accounted for,—they are quite as consistent with the analogy of the language, as any verbs can be.

2. These additional Species are thought to be analogous to those of Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél, because some reduplication of the letters, or syllables, of the root is generally found to take place in them, as it does in those forms; and, consequently, affording a similar shade of signification, although the same letters are not always doubled, nor the same vowels always found to accompany them.

3. It has been remarked (Art. 154. 5.), that nouns of excess formed from roots having ו, or ן, for their middle radical letter, or, which have the same letter for the second and third of the root, usually take the forms פּוֹדֵד, for the active, and פּוֹדֵד, for the passive, signification: as, פּוֹדֵד, פּוֹדֵד, פּוֹדֵד, for the active; and, קוּמַם, בּוּנָן, סוּבָב, for the passive of these words, respectively.

4. Instead of פָּקַד, and בָּקַד, therefore, which are the measures proper for the species Pihél and Puhál, we shall always have these forms from roots of this description; and here, the same form is taken for the leading word of each of the tenses respectively; יְקוּמַם, קוּמַם, active, and יְקוּמַם, קוּמַם, passive.

5. The first of these forms is also taken for the Hithpāhél Species, i. e. instead of הִתְפַּקַּד, we shall have הִתְבּוּדַד, for the measure; as, הִתְבּוּנָן, הִתְקוּמַם; and so of others.

185. There is, moreover, a considerable number of forms peculiar to certain verbs, as laid down by Schultens and Schröder, and, before them, by David Kimkhi, and other Grammarians: of these some notice should be taken. These writers, then, have supposed these forms of the conjugation to have sometime existed; and, hence, they have proceeded to derive nouns of similar forms from them, even when the verb itself has not occurred; all of which seems to me, to be proceeding in an inverted order. According to our system, the addition of one, or other, of the pronouns to any noun, simple or augmented, will always have the effect of investing it with the character of a verb; and hence it probably is, that we occasionally find this done, both in the Hebrew, and in all its dialects. This will sufficiently account for these rare augmented forms, as also for those instances, in which nouns, which were originally the mere names of substances, are found acting as verbs in these tongues.

2. But, to come to these remaining and rarer forms, which are sometimes found as verbs: הִתְפַּקַּד, is a passive form of הִתְפַּקַּד, just as הִפְקַד, or הִפְקַד, is of הִפְקִיד. Of this form, we have הִטְמַמַּה (for הִטְמַמַּה Art. 83. 1.) rendered impure, or polluted; prim. noun, טָמֵא. So הִתְנַשְׁנָה made fat, for הִתְנַשְׁנָה Is. xxxiv. 6, where, however, the Dāgēsh, proper for the שׁ, is omitted.

3. Another form, given by Schröder, is הִפְאָד, from which we have only one noun supposed to be derived, viz. בְּגוּרָה perfidious, Jer. iii. 7, 10. This, therefore, does not occur as a species of the Conjugation: it is also doubtful, whether it is to be referred to the form given by this Grammarian, or not. Surely, as the (τ) is immutable, הִתְפַּקֵּד would be the more suitable measure.

4. Another form is, הִתְפַּקֵּד. Of this is, יִתְפַּקֵּד, and הִתְפַּקְדוּ, occurring Judg. xx. 15. 17. But here, we have no necessity for introducing a new form; the omission of Dāgēsh in the ה, — which might have been merely accidental, — would make it necessary that the preceding vowel should be a perfect one (Art. 32.). This form, therefore, may be considered as belonging to Hithpāhél (Art. 183. 9.).

5. The next form, given by Schröder, is הִתְפַּקֵּד, or הִתְפַּקְדוּ, which may be referred to the first of these forms (No. 2.), with the additional consideration, that the Dāgēsh, proper for ה, has been omitted, and supplied as in the last. The examples occur, Numb. i. 47, 1 Kings xx. 27, &c.

6. His two next forms, viz. פִּיקֵד, and פִּיקְדוּ, having a reciprocal sense, are not supported by the passages adduced. We may dismiss them, therefore, without further enquiry.

7. The next form, הִתְפַּקֵּד, should have been הִתְפַּקְדוּ, his example being הִתְפַּקְדוּלָה, which is manifestly derived from the root פִּקֵּד. See Art. 184. 5.

8. In the form פִּיקֵד, as exemplified in אִתְּךָ, and אִתְּךָ, we have, I believe, nothing more than a form equivalent to פִּיקְדוּ, in which, the Dāgēsh being omitted, we have a perfect vowel supplied, to compensate for the defect thus occasioned. See Art. 109.

9. The next form given, is פִּיקֵד, which Schröder exemplifies by הִתְפַּקֵּד Is. xlv. 20: but this does not occur as a verb.

10. Of his next form פִּיקֵד, no example occurs; שִׁמְאֵל, as given by him, is fictitious. The noun is שִׁמְאֵל left hand, &c.: which, when augmented, becomes הִשְׁמְאֵל, signifying to proceed in that direction. Whether Schröder's derivation of it from שִׁמְאֵל, be correct or not, may be matter for dispute.

11. We next have פִּיקֵד, and the example given גִּרְעֵנָה green, which is said to be put for רִעֵנָה, or גִּרְעֵנָה. But, all this is extremely doubtful. The noun appears to be one of those augmented by the addition of ה (see Art. 168.); קוּיָם, for קוּיָם, as Schröder has put it, we think comes more properly under another form; which, however, is nothing more than a noun.

12. His next form קִיָּנַן , has, for the same reason, no connexion with קִיָּנָה . And the other example given, is manifestly a noun, אֲמָלַל , and is referable to the compound form (Art. 169. 7.).

13. The form הִתְפַּחֵד , should rather have been הִתְפַּחֵד , in order to admit of the form הִתְפַּחֵדִים . But, as we have already considered this form (Art. 184. 5), we need not dwell any longer on it here.

14. The form פָּתַרְתָּךְ , is that of a reduplicated noun (Art. 169.), which is often conjugated as a verb: as, פָּתַרְתָּךְ travelling about as a merchant, &c. of which examples will be given hereafter.

15. With respect to the other forms, viz. שָׁפַקְד , תִּפְקַד , מִפְקַד , the first does not occur; and the rest have been given under the different forms of the noun, and accounted for; we need not, therefore, add anything further on them now.*

186. The forms, therefore, proper for the leading words of every Species of the conjugation now in use, will be as follows:

SPECIES.	FORMS.	SPECIES.	FORMS.	GENERAL FORCE.
1	פָּקַד active. פָּקַדְתָּ id. פָּקַדְתָּ neuter.	2	נִפְקַד objective or reciprocal.	Simple, or translated, sense of the root.

* In the cognate dialects of the Hebrew, viz., the Arabic, Æthiopic, Syriac, and Chaldaic, we have a considerable number of forms seldom found in the common Grammars. In Erpenius's Arabic Grammar, we have only thirteen forms of the trilateral, and four of the quadrilateral, verb. In M. de Sacy's Grammar, we have two more noticed in the trilateral verbs, four under the quadrilaterals, and a few others, which are said to belong to the trilaterals, but which have been augmented by a letter or two. Scheidius gives upwards of forty forms in his "Primæ Lineæ Institutionum Arabicarum." Lugd. Batav. 1779. And Mr. Lumsden, in his elaborate Volume on Arabic Grammar, has given a list of still greater extent, amounting to fifty (Gram., p. 162, &c.), from which it appears, that it has often been a matter of difficulty, even with the native Grammarians, to determine whether many of these should be referred to trilateral, or quadrilateral, roots. Some of them do not occur more than once; and this should suggest, that the language itself acknowledges no such conjugations generally; but, on the contrary, that nouns, of these forms, have occasionally been made, by the usual adjuncts, to occupy the situation of verbs.

SPECIES.	FORMS.	SPECIES.	FORMS.	GENERAL FORCE.
3	פָּקַד active, causal, &c. פּוֹדֵד id.	4	פָּקַד objective. פּוֹדֵד id.	Transitive, when the root in Kal is not so. Sometimes intensitive, frequentative, or even causal. Names of substances often take this form when converted into verbs.
5	הִפְקִיד active, causal, &c.	6	הִפְקִיד objective. or הִפְקִד
7	הִתְפַּקַּד active. reciprocal, &c. or הִתְפּוֹדֵד id.	8	הִתְפַּקַּד objective. or הִתְפּוֹדֵד id. very rare.	Reciprocal. Passive. Reflective occasionally.
Rare.	9	פִּקְדָּה neuter.
	10	פִּקְדָּד, or פִּקְדָּדָה neuter.		Frequentative, Intensive, or the like.
	11	*תִּפְקִיד neuter.		Frequentative.
	12	†מִפְקִיד neuter.		Habit, or custom: it occurs however but seldom; and, therefore, little can be said as to its general force.

* It is remarkable that cases occur in the Arabic, in which ت, ن, occurs, even when the verb has already been augmented by that letter: as, تَلَقَّطْتَ she, or it has cut. The same excess occurs in the word تشابهت she resembled, in which the additional ت is implied in the (و) teshdeed over the ش.

† In Arabic we also have verbs augmented by م, م, as مرحب, and مسهل, as in the phrases, مرحبك الله ومسهلك "May God make matters broad and easy for you." Lumsden's Arab. Gram., pp. 147. 154, in which there can be no doubt these verbs are formed from nouns.

2. But, for particulars, as to their several significations, see Artt. 183. 184. &c., with the references.

3. It must be borne in mind, that any change occurring in the forms of the nouns, with respect either to the vowels or consonants, will also occur when they are used as verbs: i. e. whenever any guttural letter occurs in the root, certain changes may take place on that account in the vowels: even the consonants א, ק, ר, as well as the letters נ, and ל, may disappear in certain cases: of these we shall give examples hereafter, when we come to detail the forms of the conjugation at length; we shall then also point out the principles on which these changes, &c. are founded.

187. It should be premised, that there are in the Hebrew, as in other languages, three persons, each having the singular and plural number: that, in the verbs, there is no dual number; and, that the second and third persons, both singular and plural, have forms peculiar to both genders. The first person is, under one form, common to both genders, as in the pronouns (Art. 145. 2.).

2. These distinctions of the persons, however, do not arise out of the root itself, but out of the pronouns which are, either prefixed, or postfixed, to it in an abbreviated form.

* This, according to D. Kimkhi, is the form taken by certain nouns: as, חָכֵם wise; רָשָׁע wicked; נָבִיל intelligent, &c. The only difference being that the noun ends in Kāmêts, whereas the verb ends in Páthakh. But, he goes on to say, that the noun will end in Kāmêts, when at the end of a verse, or accompanied by certain accents: as, בְּאִשְׁרֵי אִמְרֵי as he had said, Gen. xxi. 1; לֹא יָשָׁב has not sat, Ps. i. 1. There are also, instances pointed out by him, in which Kāmêts is the terminating vowel, just as it is in the noun, when neither the position of the word, nor the accent, requires any change in the vowels: as, 1 Sam. vii. 17, שָׁפַט שָׁמָּה אֶת־יִשְׂרָאֵל, there he judged Israel. To which he adds a number of similar examples. Mikhlol. fol. ה, verso. et fol. ו, in which we have Kāmêts with the accent Zákéf. In all the forms, designating the persons, the personal pronouns are, either visibly, or by implication, inherent in them: visibly, wherever the fragments of them—as exemplified here—appear; by implication, where they do not. This is, moreover, the doctrine of the Arabians.

† The pronouns of the second and first persons sing. and pl. have been abbreviated by Art. 73. The third sing. masc. and fem. is merely the noun. In the third pl. the ה is dropt, also by Art. 73. The ו of the first pers. pl. is rejected by Art. 76.; and the guttural פ is omitted, perhaps for the sake of euphony.

2. In the other forms, viz. פָּקַד, and פָּקַדְתָּ, in this tense, the final vowel is also considered as mutable. The conjugation, therefore, will proceed thus :

1	יָכַלְתִּי,	יָכַלְתִּי,	יָכַלְנוּ,	יָכַלְנוּ.

3. It may be observed, that the conjugation of the preterite tense of every Species, will generally be carried on as in the instances here given ; that is, by attaching the same abbreviations of the personal pronouns to the leading word of the Species, whatever be its form or character ; whether it include one or more of the guttural letters, or whether it be defective by the loss of one or more of the letters אהוי, ל, or נ : due regard being had to the rules laid down respecting these letters, as well as to those concerning the changes of the vowels. The conjugation, therefore, is but ONE, however varied the ground-form, or leading word, may occasionally appear.

* Of this form are the following : חָמַץ fermenting, יָבֵן old, יָבֵשׁ dry, שָׂנְאָה hating, שָׂמְחָה rejoicing, מְלֵאָה filling, מְעַבְרָה defective, מְשֻׁמָּה guilty, מְשַׁבְּחָה ceasing, מְשַׁבְּחָה hypocritical, מְשַׁבְּחָה defective, מְשַׁבְּחָה cutting wood, מְשַׁבְּחָה impure, מְשַׁבְּחָה withering, מְשַׁבְּחָה corroding, מְשַׁבְּחָה becoming dry, מְשַׁבְּחָה forgetting, מְשַׁבְּחָה desolating, מְשַׁבְּחָה humbling ; to which many more may be added.

† These, according to D. Kimkhi (Mikhlol, fol. ה), are of the same form with מְגֹדֵל great, מְקַטֵּן small, מְרֹחֵק distant, מְקָרֵב near. The words so found as verbs are, מְיָרֵא fearing, מְקַטֵּן little, מְשַׁבְּחָה snaring as a hunter, מְשַׁבְּחָה able, מְשַׁבְּחָה bereaved, מְשַׁבְּחָה lighting, for מְשַׁבְּחָה, מְשַׁבְּחָה stealing ; some of which occur as nouns.

4. As the changes, which take place in the vowels in the process of conjugation, depend, in a great measure, on the situation of the accent; it may be proper here to advert to that subject.

5. It has been remarked, that in neither of the preceding leading words are the vowels immutable by usage. The nature of the syllabication, therefore, which very much depends on the situation of the accent, will regulate the vowels (Art. 95. 96, &c.).

6. It will be seen, by a reference to the paradigm, that the asyllabic adjuncts $\text{קָרַרְ$, רָרְ , as well as the syllabic ones קָרַרְ and רָרְ , take the tonic accent with them. The preceding vowels, therefore, of these words, will be shortened as far as circumstances will allow (Art. 98, &c.). In the first case, the vowel immediately preceding is rejected, in order to make way for the exertion of the accent; and, as this restricts the word to its primitive quantity, there is no necessity that any further change should take place: we have, therefore, קָרַרְ , and רָרְ , in these instances. In the second case, we have the syllabic adjuncts קָרַרְ , and רָרְ , with the tonic accent. The preceding syllable must, therefore, contain an imperfect vowel, in order to comply with the laws of syllabication. (Art. 33.) And, as the first vowel is not immutable, it is rejected: the whole word still retaining its primitive quantity, i. e. consisting of two syllables, as in the former case, and no more.

7. In all the other cases, the accent will retain its original situation: and, as the noun seems here to be in apposition, not in construction, with the pronoun; the vowels remain unaltered throughout.

8. Hence, in the second form, exemplified by וְרָרְ willing, the (..), when made imperfect, becomes (-) instead of (:), by what has been termed an oblique correspondence (Art. 96. 2.), as in וְרָרְ , וְרָרְ ; which is retained likewise, in every other case of increment, in which the accent remains on that syllable. In the remaining cases, when the verb receives the asyllabic augment, קָרַרְ , and רָרְ , it is rejected.

9. The first vowel is rejected in שָׁפַעַתְּ , שָׁפַעְתָּ , for the reasons already given. The substitute of Sheva (·) is added, on account of the guttural letter, see Art. 106. 4.

10. In the third form, שָׁפַעַתְּ , the vowels follow the paradigm of the first, and for the same reasons: except in the third person singular and plural, where the ו entirely disappears.

11. When, however, verbs receive the illative particle ו * as a prefix, the accent is occasionally removed to the first syllable of the verb, which will always be perfect, and the following one imperfect: as וַיִּשְׁכַּחְתִּי and I will visit; וַיִּשְׁכַּחְתִּי and thou wilt be able. The last syllable will be subject to the same law, when the accent is removed on account of any affixed pronoun: as, וַיִּשְׁכַּחְתִּי : I have prevailed (against) him, Ps. xiii. 5. (Art. 119.)

12. The (·) Tséré of the second form, and of the third and seventh species, viz. שָׁפַעַתְּ , and שָׁפַעְתָּ , will undergo the same changes during the process of conjugation, as it does in שָׁפַעַתְּ , in the paradigm.

13. The following examples present some anomalies, with which the Learner ought to be made acquainted.

On the Third Person Singular Masculine.

14. In one instance, the verb שָׁפַעַתְּ drops its first radical letter: as, שָׁפַעַתְּ he took, Ezek. xvii. 5; so, for שָׁפַעַתְּ , by a similar omission, we have שָׁפַעַתְּ he declined, Judg. xix. 11. But see Art. 76. note.

15. Whenever the third person singular, of either gender, is accompanied by a pause accent, the final vowel will be made perfect, and, in some instances changed: as, שָׁפַעַתְּ he has not

* This has generally been termed Vau conversivum. But, as I see no necessity whatever for supposing, that it possesses any such conversive power as this name implies, I have rejected it: as it has an illative power, however, and even in Arabic has a manifest influence on the vowels, and sometimes on the consonants of the verbs; I have thought it more consistent to give it the title of illative. See Schnabel's Commentary on the Agrumia, p. 26, where this property is ascribed to both و and ف . See p. 50, note. The use and force of this particle will be considered in the Syntax. See also my Heb. Lexicon, under و , p. 163.

stood, Ps. i. 1; שָׁבַד he dwelt, Deut. xxxiii. 12 (Art. 123. 5.). The same often happens in the feminine, as also in the plural number, whenever the accent is drawn back: as, דָּבַקְתָּ it adheres to, Job xxix. 10; גְּבַרְתָּ they were powerful, 2 Sam. i. 23 (Art. 120. 2.): all, apparently, belonging to the roots גָּבַר, שָׁבַד, and דָּבַק, respectively. These may, nevertheless, be of the form פָּקַד, although the other form most frequently occurs in the context. We have something similar to this in Gen. xliii. 14, אֲשַׁכְּלֵהוּ אֲשַׁכְּלֵהוּ even as I am bereaved, I am bereaved; where the first verb is of the form אֲשַׁכְּלֵהוּ, and the last of אֲשַׁכְּלֵהוּ.

On the Third Person Singular Feminine.

16. Our measure is פָּקַדְתָּ, in every case. In some few instances, however, we have the Chaldaic, instead of the Hebrew, feminine termination: as, אֲזַלְתָּ, instead of אֲזַלְתָּה, Deut. xxxii. 36. So קָרַאתָ, for קָרַאתָה, she called; עָשִׂיתָ, for עָשִׂיתָה, she made; which seems to shew, that this termination is not a part of the pronoun, but the form which marks the feminine gender, as stated above (Art. 188.). The same holds good in the Arabic dialect, where the feminine termination is also ת, which cannot be derived from the feminine pronoun. - See also Art. 137. 2.

17. When the accent is removed from the ultimate, to the penultimate, syllable, the original vowels of the root will return: as, נָתַתָּה she gave, Judg. v. 25; שָׂמְחָתָה she was glad, Esth. viii. 15. So נִשְׁתָּתָה it hath failed, Is. xli. 17, with an euphonic Dāgēsh in the ת, (Art. 120. 2.).

18. In Ezek. xxxi. 5, we have גְּבַרְתָּה, for גְּבַרְתָּה, the Chaldaic, for the Hebrew, termination.

On the Third Person Plural, Common Gender.

19. We have a final ך, sometimes added to this part of the verb, which is either intended to obviate a hiatus; or, as in the augmented nouns, to give some emphasis to the sentence: 'as, יָדְעוּן they knew, Deut. viii. 3; יָצְקוּן* for יָצְקוּ they poured out, Isa. xxvi. 16. See Art. 175. 17.

* The real force of this letter will be considered in the Syntax.

20. In some cases this plural form appears with the vowel (◌) and ה : as, שָׁפְכוּ they poured out, where the הָרִי, or marginal reading, is שָׁפְכוּ, which is most likely the true one. According to the Masora, as cited by Buxtorf, there are fourteen such instances as these in the Biblical text, (Thes. Gram., p. 102.*) In a few cases, neither ה, nor ו, appears: as, אָמְרוּ they said. (Art. 72.)

21. When the accent is, on any account, drawn back, the original vowels return: as, בָּאוּ they have brought forth, Gen. xxxi. 43; נָחְלוּ they ceased, Judg. v. 7; נָזְלוּ they became debased, Isaiah lxiii. 19, lxiv. 2; יָכְלוּ they were able, Exod. viii. 14. In a few instances, a paragogic נ is added: as, הִדְבִּירוּ־נָהְיִי־נָהְיִי־נָהְיִי Josh. x. 24 (Artt. 119. 175. 3.).

On the Second Person Masculine, Singular.

22. Instead of the termination הָ, we sometimes have הַה, which is the more usual termination of the pronoun (Art. 145. 2.): as, פָּנַדְתָּהּ thou hast dealt perfidiously, Mal. ii. 14; זָקַנְתָּהּ thou art grown old, Josh. xiii. 1, &c.

23. Whenever the root ends in ת, and also receives this pronominal affix, both these letters will coalesce by Dāgēsh: as, פָּרַתָּהּ thou hast cut, Deut. xx. 20, for פָּרַתְתָּהּ. When ו is the last letter of the root, and this, or any similar suffix, is added, the ו is dropped (Art. 76.), and for this a compensation is made by inserting Dāgēsh forte in the first letter of the affix; as, נָתַתָּהּ, for נָתַתְתָּהּ, thou gavest, Gen. iii. 12. So, נָתַתָּהּ, for נָתַתְתָּהּ, I gave; נָתַתָּהּ, for נָתַתְתָּהּ, you gave, &c.

On the Second Person Singular Feminine.

24. When the last radical letter happens to be either ח, or ע, (-) stands in the place of the first Shēvā (Art. 45.): as, לָקַחְתְּ, for לָקַחְתְּ, thou didst receive, 1 Kings xvi. 3; שָׁמַעְתְּ, for שָׁמַעְתְּ, thou didst hear, Jer. iv. 19; יָדַעְתְּ, for יָדַעְתְּ, thou didst know, Jer. l. 24. In roots ending in

* Ed. 1630.

† In some editions only.

ך, that letter will be dropped as before : תָּבִיָּה thou gavest, Ezek. xvi. 33.

25. In many instances, particularly in the Books of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, this affix assumes the form תִּי, for תָּי, which is also a termination of the original pronoun (See Artt. 145. 2. 194. 13.): as, תִּקְרָאתי thou wilt call, for תָּקְרָאתי, Jer. iii. 4; תִּשְׁמַעְתִּי thou hast heard, Ib. iv. 19; to which many others may be added.

On the Second Person Plural Masculine.

26. We have occasionally a Khirik with the second radical letter, instead of (-): as, יִרְשְׁתֶּם, for יִרְשָׁתֶם, ye shall possess, Deut. iv. 1. In others (·): as, שְׁאַלְתֶּם ye asked, 1 Sam. xii. 13; and, as before, נָתַתֶּם, for נָתַתְּתֶם ye gave, Jer. xxxvii. 18 (Art. 76.).

On the Second Person Plural Feminine.

27. Instead of the termination תֵּן-, we sometimes have תְּנֶה-, which is also a termination peculiar to the pronoun of this person (Art. 145. 2.); as, הִשְׁלַחְתֶּנּוּ ye cast forth, Amos iv. 3. This, however, is an example belonging to the Hiphhil species.

On the First Person Singular, Common Gender.

28. A few verbs have Khirik for their second vowel: as, *יִלְדֶתִי I have begotten, Ps. ii. 7, for יִלְדֶתִי. So, *שְׁאַלְתִּי, for שְׁאַלְתִּי,

* But perhaps these vowels do not belong to the form פָּקַד, but פָּקַד, or perhaps, פָּקַד. وَرث, وَرث is certainly the root in Arabic to which יִרְשְׁתֶּם must be referred; אָלַד a son, may be the root of the second, and שָׁאַל, Arab. سَأَلَ a beggar, of the third. And hence, perhaps, it is that the same root is occasionally found with different vowels. In Arabic, also, we have خَفِيَ hiding one's self; خَفِيَ concealing something; رَفَعَ he raised; and رَفَعَ he was elevated, ennobled; رَفَعَ he had a high voice, &c. De Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. p. 119. See also Art. 157. 8. note.

I asked, 1 Sam. i. 20. Here also, as before (Nos. 23. 24.), roots ending in ך or ך, will reject those letters, and supply their place by Dāgēsh.

29. In the first person plural, also, roots ending in ך, will cause that letter to coalesce with the ך of the pronominal suffix: as, ךַּךךַּ (for ךַּךךַּך) we gave, Lam. v. 7.

30. Upon the whole, then, these are rather apparent than real anomalies. It is consistent, with the analogy of this language, to make certain changes in the vowels, upon the occurrence of any of the guttural letters. The concurrence of any two identical letters, is also regularly expressed by placing a Dāgēsh in one of them, and omitting the other, provided no vowel intervene (Art. 47.). Nún ך, likewise, is regularly rejected, whenever it should receive a final Shēvâ (Art. 76.). Other varieties in the vowels may be accounted for, by supposing different nouns derived from the same primitive, to have been originally taken as the leading word.

31. N.B. The remarks here made on the preterite tense of the first species Kal, will apply, in a great measure, to those of all the rest.

On the Present Tense of the First Species KAL.

189. It has been remarked (Art. 182. 10.), that the leading word, of this tense in Kal, is always one or other of the Segolate nouns of the forms ךַּךַּך, ךַּךַּך, or ךַּךַּך. There are, however, a few examples in which ךַּךַּך is the form taken, as we shall see presently. These nouns are generally abstract as to sense (Art. 152. 10.): if, then, a personal pronoun, or any abridged form of it, be affixed, we shall have a meaning something like the following: He (is) a visiting; Thou (art) a coming, &c., where the words visiting, and coming, are not used as participles but as abstract nouns; which must necessarily intimate a present tense. How this, as well as the preterite, tense, is used in composition, will be shewn when we come to the Syntax.

3. Of יִפְקְדוּ the same may be said, which has been said of others (Art. 139. 7. note). As to the ת prefixed to the feminine, what has just been said of תִּפְקְדִי must suffice. The נָה suffixed is probably a fragment of the pronoun הֵיָהּ, as Jahn has observed (Gram., p. 177. Ed. 1809.). The derivations of the other forms are sufficiently obvious. 5. Paradigm of the Third Form פָּקַד.

This form never occurs, except in verbs which are subject to some defect, and then but seldom.

6. It has been remarked (Art. 189.), that the form of פָּקַד is sometimes taken, as the leading word of the present tense. The following are examples: viz. יִשְׁפֹּטוּ they judge, Exod. xviii. 26; תִּשְׁמֹר it (fem.) preserves, or keeps, Prov. xiv. 3; תִּעְבְּרִי pass thou over (fem.), Ruth ii. 8: אֶנְיָשָׁה, (for אֶאֱנִישָׁה Art. 72.) I am mortally pained, Ps. lxi. 21.

7. Of these forms, the first, פָּקַד, is the most generally used in

When the last letter is guttural, the final vowel is, for the most part, (-): as, יִשְׁמָע he hears, יִשְׁלַח he sends; יִגְבֶּה he rises, is exalted. This also will be the case when the middle letter is guttural, just as it is with the Segolate nouns (Art. 148. 7.).

Kal; and, for the most part, it has a transitive signification. פָּקַד occurs but seldom, and is mostly intransitive. פָּקַד is found in defective verbs only; as, אָמַר, or יֵאמַר, or יִשָּׁב, יֵאמַר, or יִגְלֶה, &c.

8. In all cases, in which the terminating vowel is perfect, and regularly accompanied by an accent; upon the accent's being withdrawn (which always takes place when the verb is joined with any other word by Makkáph, &c.), such final vowel will be changed for its correspondent imperfect one (Art. 96. 2. &c.): as, אֲשַׁמְרֶנּוּ I will keep for him, Ps. lxxxix. 29; אֲחַמְדֶּנּוּ I will sustain him, Is. xlii. 1, for אֲשַׁמְרֶנּוּ and אֲחַמְדֶּנּוּ respectively.* (Art. 133.)

9. The same verb is sometimes found to occur in more than one of these forms; as, יֵשֶׁבֶת he rests, Gen. ii. 2; and הִישָׁבֶת it rests, Neh. vi. 3; לֹא אֶחְפֹּץ I am not willing, Ezek. xviii. 52; and יִרְצֶה he will approve, Ps. xxxvii. 23; and יִטַּר he will tear, Ps. vii. 3; and יִטַּר Gen. xlix. 27. To which many others may be added. (See the Mikhlol of D. Kimkhi, fol. ב, verso.) This may be accounted for, by supposing that the Segolate noun, corresponding to both these forms, was once in use.

10. When, however, any paragogic letter is added, this distinctive vowel, be what it may, disappears (as it is the case with some of the Segolate nouns): as, אֲשַׁמְרֶנּוּ, not אֲשַׁמְרֶנָּה, I will keep, Ps. xxxix. 2; אֲשַׁפְּבֶנּוּ, not אֲשַׁפְּבֶנָּה, I will lie down, Ps. iv. 9; אֲהַרְגֶנּוּ I will kill, not אֲהַרְגֶנָּה Gen. xxvii. 41. In the last case, the substitute of Shévá is resolved by Art. 106. 2.

11. In a few instances, the letter ׀ is retained, which was

* It is a curious fact, that the tense corresponding to this in the Arabic verbs, is subject to a variation of ending, similar to that of the nouns, i. e. its terminations will answer to those of the nominative, or of the objective cases.

This tense they term ^{مضارع} alike, because it is said to be like the noun. In a few instances, indeed, it has the ^أ of the accusative; as, ^{لنفسعا} we will surely draw, &c. In others we have an additional ^ن, ^ن, as in the nouns of excess perhaps formerly a mater lectionis: i. e. was used instead of the vowel $\dot{\text{ı}}$ Khölém: as, $\text{אָשְׁקוּהָ} I \text{ rest}$, Isa. xviii. 4; $\text{אָשְׁקוּהָ} I \text{ weigh}$, Ezra viii. 25. In which cases, the קָה , or marginal reading, generally gives the more usual form. This קָ , however, is mostly omitted, and Káméts Khátéf then found to supply the place of the rejected Khölém (see Art. 152. 3.): as, $\text{אָשְׁעָה} I \text{ step}$, Isa. xxvii. 4; $\text{אָשְׁמָעָה} I \text{ hear}$, Dan. viii. 13; $\text{תִּשְׁרָבֵךְ} \text{thou bribest}$, Ezek. xvi. 33. In some copies, however, we have (:) Shévá only, in most of these cases.

(Art. 168.): as, ^{ينصرون} he will surely assist: but of this more in the Syntax.

12. With the third person plural masculine, we sometimes have a paragogic ן , supplied; as, $\text{יִשְׁמָעוּן} \text{they will hear}$, Exod. iv. 9. Sometimes the preceding vowel is perfect: as, $\text{יִשְׁאָלוּן} \text{they will ask}$, Josh. iv. 6; $\text{יִקְצְרוּן} \text{they will reap}$, Ruth ii. 9. (See Art. 175. 17.).

13. When the first radical letter happens to be a guttural, the Substitute of Shévá will be resolved into its cognate imperfect vowel: as, $\text{יִאָרְבּוּ} \text{they will extend}$ (for יִאָרְבּוּ , by analogy, יִאָרְבּוּ , see Art. 106. 2.).

14. In the feminine, we have תִּשְׁפָּדָה , for תִּשְׁפָּדָה , by Art. 175. 20., &c., Ezek. xvii. 23. The final ה is sometimes omitted by Art. 72.

15. The abbreviated pronouns are regularly prefixed to the present tense, in every species, with Shévá (:): as, יִפְקֹד ; but here, as two Shévás cannot concur at the commencement of a word, the first is changed to (\cdot), ($-$), or ($\cdot-$) as circumstances may require, (Art. 106., &c.): as, יִפְקֹד , יִפְקֹד , &c. Where, however, no such necessity exists, Shévá remains, as it does with the particles לְ , בְ , כְ , Art. 174. &c.): as in יִפְקֹד , יִפְקֹד , יִפְקֹד , &c.

16. The principles, therefore, by which the vowels, both of the verbs and nouns are regulated, are precisely the same. This is also true of the letters, as well as of the forms of words: for these, as we have already seen, are such as the nature of the several cases necessarily requires.

Of the Infinitives and Imperatives.

190. It is difficult to say which of these two ought to take the precedence, since both present the same form; but, as that which has been termed the Imperative is sometimes found conjugated with one, or other, of the pronouns, the Infinitive has usually been placed first, as exhibiting the more simple form of the verb.

2. It is now generally allowed, that the Infinitive (as it has been termed) is nothing more than a Verbal noun, having either an active, neuter, or passive, signification: as, פִּקֹּד, and in construction, פִּקֹּדָה, a visiting, visitatio, or the like; the acceptation of which may be, either active, or passive, (see p. 89. note.); and, שָׁכַב לְיָדָיו, which is neuter.

3. Any of these words, according to Schrœder, when pronounced with some emphasis, will become imperative in signification: as, פִּקֹּד, or פִּקֹּדָה, inspicere, i. e. “inspice, vel inspice.” So, continues he, “Ab initio nullum discrimen habuit numeri et generis: e. g. שָׁמֹעַ אֲדִירֶה! non tantum pro audi, sed et pro audite, Deut. i. 16; אֲדִירֶה infestare! pro infestate, Num. xxv. 17, &c.”

4. We may now come to the forms, and other particulars, connected with this species of words.

5. The forms of the Infinitives are various, and may be, either primitive, or augmented, according to the sense intended by the writer. We shall, at present, notice only the primitive forms, reserving the others till we come to treat on the augmented species of the conjugation.

Forms of the Infinitive or Verbal Noun, belonging to the First Species of the Conjugation KAL.

6. פִּקֹּד, constr. פִּקֹּדָה* is the most frequent; פִּקֹּד, פִּקֹּדָה, פִּקֹּדָה, פִּקֹּדָה, and פִּקֹּדָה, are more rare. These forms are peculiar to the masculine gender. The following are feminine: פִּקֹּדָה, פִּקֹּדָה, פִּקֹּדָה, פִּקֹּדָה, פִּקֹּדָה, פִּקֹּדָה, פִּקֹּדָה,

* Of this form in the nouns is נָדָה, constr. נָדָה, נָדָה, נָדָה, which imply habit, custom, &c., and occasionally have an abstract signification.

or פִּקְדָתָּ, פִּקְדָתָּ, פִּקְדָהּ, פִּקְדָהּ, פִּקְדָהּ, &c. These all, masc. and fem., excepting the last three, are of the forms of the Segolate nouns (Artt. 148. 149, &c.); and, as these nouns are generally abstracts (Art. 152. 10.), they are well suited for the functions which they here perform.

7. These, when in conjunction with any of the particles בכלם, will afford a sense similar to that of the Gerunds in Latin: as, בִּפְקֹד in visiting; לְפִקְדֹ for visiting; בְּפִקְדֹ according to a visiting; מִפִּקְדֹ from, or by, a visiting. In which cases, the form proper for construction is necessarily taken, on account of the following context.

8. In like manner with the pronouns, פִּקְדֵי my visiting; פִּקְדֵי thy visiting, &c. in which פִּקְדֵי is preferred.* We have, however, אֲכַלְכֶם your eating, אֲמַרְכֶם your saying, &c., of the form פִּקְדֵי, as well as the other forms.

9. When the terminating vowel (י of פִּקְדֵי) happens to lose the accent, it becomes imperfect as in the nouns: as, מְלֹךְ-מְלֹךְ a king's reigning, Gen. xxxvi. 31. In one instance we have an additional ׳ inserted: as, לְרִיֹשׁ הַדְּבָר לְרִיֹשׁ for investigating the matter, Ezra x. 16.

10. Buxtorf† thinks, that, in the phrases לְמִשְׁחָהּ for anointing, Exod. xxix. 29; לְגִבְהָהּ for elevating, Zeph. iii. 11; לְחַמְלָהּ for using patience, Ezek. xvi. 5, the o has been transposed, on account of the additional paragogic ה. But the truth of this is doubtful.

* The nouns, equivalent to these in Arabic, are subject to the same laws; and they are occasionally found in the plural number, which never occurs in Hebrew. In the last instance, (No. 8.) Grammarians have thought, that a transposition of the o has taken place, 'supposing פִּקְדֵי to have been the original form. But, as פִּקְדָהּ is regularly the feminine form of פִּקְדֵי, I do not see why פִּקְדֵי may not be derived from the same form, particularly as these forms are in use.

† Thes. Gram. lib. i. c. xiii.

First; because ה is here not paragogic, but feminine; as the situation of the accent is sufficient to shew. In the next place, it is not necessary to suppose that the o is transposed, for reasons just given (No. 8. note); and hence we have, in the very next example adduced by him, לְרַחֵקָה for removing far away, Ezek. viii. 6, where the o is not transposed, but remains in its original situation.

11. Again, in the other examples which he gives, viz. פְּשַׁמְעָתוּ, בְּקִרְבָּתָם, beyond all doubt, the ה, above mentioned, is of the feminine gender, but not paragogic. Other examples are, שִׁחַתָּה slaying, Hos. v. 2; שְׁאַלָה asking, Isa. vii. 11; יִרְאָה fearing, Deut. iv. 10. Which, however, Buxtorf confesses after all, are feminine forms of the Infinitive, and which the Jewish Grammarians term Verbal Nouns.

12. It will be difficult, perhaps, and certainly unnecessary, to lay down rules for the use of the other forms. The Student may note them down as they occur. We shall merely remark, that cases will happen here, as in the Arabic, in which it will be extremely difficult to say, whether a noun is to be referred to this class, or to that of the participles: and further, that in some, the very same word will occasionally be found in situations suitable to both.

On the Imperative belonging to the First Species.

191. This is usually either of the form פִּקֹּד, or פִּקְד, visit, for the second person singular masculine; פִּקְדִי, for the same feminine; פִּקְדוּ, masc. and פִּקְדְנָה, or פִּקְדְנָה, fem. for the same person plural. In which will be perceived some of the fragments of the pronouns as already mentioned (Art. 188.).

2. It has already been remarked, that the form פִּקְדוּ is sometimes used for both numbers and genders (Art. 190. 3.).

3. As the Imperative is generally formed on the same word with the Infinitive, it will occasionally be found with the feminine termination קָרַר , as also with the same vowels: as, שָׁמְרָה keep,* Ps. xxv. 20; זָכְרָה remember, 2 Chron. vi. 42. Khōlēm remains unchanged in זָעַמָּה vilify, curse, Numb. xxiii. 7. Judg. xix. 5, we have סָעַד support (from the form סָעַד), and v. 8, סָעַר with Makkáph (from סָעַר): and, 1 Kings xiii. 7, סָעַרָה (from סָעַר) with the paragogic letter הָ , whence it should seem, that each of these forms of the verbal noun was once in use.

4. שָׁבַב lie down, of the form פָּקַד , will, upon receiving the feminine termination, lose (-), and then change the first (:) into Khīrik: as, שָׁבַבָה . Upon the same principle, the o, of פָּקַד , is generally rejected: as in פָּקְדֵי , פָּקְדֵי , &c., as above (Art. 189. 10.). In כִּפְּרָה keep, Ps. cxli. 3, we have either an euphonic, or an intensive, Dāgēsh.

5. Of the form פָּתַרְבִּי , פָּתַרְבִּי destroy ye, Jer. ii. 12; מָשַׁבְּרֵי draw ye, Ezek. xxxii. 20; שָׂדְדֵי lay ye waste, Jer. xlix. 28, are instances. So מָלְכֵי reign thou, fem., Judg. ix. 10; צָעַקֵי cry thou, Jer. xxii. 20; (the medial τ has been added on account of the accent's being drawn back, Art. 120. 7.); so קָרַבֵי make thou dry, Is. xlv. 27.

6. When a guttural is the first letter of the root, (·) is taken instead of Khīrik (·) whenever any asyllabic augment is affixed to the word: as, הָשִׁפֵּי make thou bare, fem., Isa. xlvii. 2; תִּקְחֵי take thou, fem., Ruth iii. 15.

7. הִקְסֵי divine thou, 1 Sam. xxviii. 8; takes a Substitute of Shēvā with the second radical letter, upon the principle of assimilation, noticed Art. 108, for הִקְסֵי . This is sometimes found to take place in the present tense also.

8. The feminine plural will occasionally suffer apocope; as, שָׁמְעֵנָה Gen. iv. 23, for שָׁמְעֵנָה , hear ye; which will also happen occasionally in the present tense, as will be seen hereafter.

* See Ps. cxli. 3, where this word is used as a noun: unless, indeed, we construe the former word שִׁמְרָה with it, as the accents seem to require: thus, שִׁמְרָה שִׁמְרָה place, keep, i. e. keep constantly. But much reliance cannot be placed upon the accents.

On the Participles.

192. We now come to that sort of words, which has been termed, Participial, and has, accordingly, been classed with the verbs as such, contrary perhaps to every principle of Hebrew Grammar. The fact is, these are nothing more than attributives, into the etymology of which nothing having the least possible connexion with tense has ever entered. Nor is the force, usually ascribed to these words, exclusively applicable to nouns of their forms : חָכֵם wise, רָחוֹק distant, גֹּדֵל growing, being just as much participles, as פּוֹקֵד, masc., פּוֹקְדָה, and פּוֹקֵדֶת fem. visiting, or פִּקְדוֹן, masc., פִּקְדוּהָ, fem. visited, can possibly be; to which a very large number of other forms may be added. The truth appears to be, that all these nouns, together with those conjugated as verbs (which, indeed, is occasionally the case with some of these), are to be regulated in tense by other considerations, as will be shewn hereafter. Transitive verbs generally give the form פּוֹקֵד, for that of this participial noun : intransitives, פִּקְדוֹ, &c., as may be seen in the Lexicon.

2. It is curious enough to remark, that Simonis has, in his Arcanum Formarum, assigned a whole section to words of the form usually ascribed to the first participle, in which they occur as agents, without the least reference whatever to tense. Yet, in one of his notes he says,* “ Exinde vero non sequitur, omnia Participia mera esse Nomina, quod contendit PAGNINUS in Institut. Hebr., p. 229. If by this he means, that these words may occasionally be construed as participles, perhaps no one will object; but, if he contends, that they are not mere attributives, I believe he will contend for a position which is incapable of proof.

2. We have here given the Infinitives, Participles, &c., as usually found in the Paradigm, as we shall in all the other Species; not because we believe this arrangement the best, but because we would depart, as little as may be, from the usual methods; and, because we may, in this way, familiarize the mind of the Learner with the several forms of these nouns.

3. The sense afforded by this species is mostly objective; sometimes, however, it is subjective; as, נִלְחָם he fought; נִשְׁבַּע he swore; נִשְׁעָן he reclined; נִשְׁפָּט he contended; where co-operation seems rather to be implied: at others, it is reflective: as, נִשְׁמַר watching one's self; נִשְׁאֵל asking for self; and at others, its force may be expressed in English, by using, may, can, must, ought, or the like. See Gen. vi. 21; xvi. 10; xx. 9. All of which may be very well comprehended in the compound form of this word, when regulated by the circumstances mentioned in the context. See Art. 157. 18. 20.

On the Preterite Tense.

4. When the primitive word happens to begin with a guttural letter, the vowel accompanying נ may be either (◌◌) or (◌◌), but not (◌◌): as, נִחַשְׁבַּ accounted, Num. xviii. 27; נִאָּמַר said, Dan. viii. 26; נִבְּקוּ overturned, Esth. ix. 1; נִחַתְּמוּ sealed, Ib. viii. 8; נִבְּקוּ placated, 1 Chron. v. 20; where we have the form נִבְּקוּ, or נִבְּקוּ, instead of נִבְּקוּ. So נִבְּוּל, and pl. נִבְּוּלֵי circumcised, Gen. xvii. 27, for נִבְּוּל (Art. 76.). In one instance, נ seems to have been affixed to one of the augmented forms; as, נִבְּפַר it shall expiate, Deut. xxi. 8, for נִבְּפַר, in full נִבְּפַר (Art. 83. 1.), grounded on the form הִרְפַּקוּ.

5. In נִאָּשְׂאָר left, Ezek. ix. 8, the additional word had recourse to in forming this Species (see Art. 157. 18.) seems to be given more at length than usual. Buxtorf thinks that we have here a form compounded of both tenses; than which nothing can be more unlikely.* For הִרְ in נִבְּקוּ we sometimes have the Chaldee ת, as in Kal (Art. 188. 16.); as, נִשְׁכַּחַת forgotten, Is. xxiii. 15.

6. נִבְּאִלוּ they were polluted, Lam. iv. 14, on the form נִבְּאִלוּ, probably from גּוֹאֵל an avenger. Of the same form is, נִבְּאִלוּ they shall be possessed of, Num. xxxii. 30. In the word נִבְּאִרוּ, Exod. xv. 6, we have, perhaps, an abbreviated form for, נִבְּאִרוּ הִיא it is become glorious, the preceding word, נִבְּאִרוּ, being regularly of the feminine gender. This, therefore, need not be considered as anomalous, in any other point of view.

On the Present Tense, Imperative, &c.

7. The leading form mostly taken for this tense is, נִבְּקוּ, and sometimes the feminine form, נִבְּקוּ; נִבְּקוּ, and נִבְּקוּ, are also found, as in Kal: but, נִבְּקוּ is used only with the Infinitive, or verbal noun; examples of each of which will presently be given.

8. The א, of the first person singular, is sometimes regularly prefixed with (◌◌); as, אֶנְדַּרְשׁ I am enquired of, Ezek. xiv. 3; אֶשָּׁבַע I swear, Gen. xxi. 24. Also with the feminine form; as, אֶפְלֹטָה I escape, Ib. xix. 20; אֶפְבְּרָה I am honoured, Exod. xiv. 17; and

* Thes. Gram., lib. i. c. xiv. ad. particip. Niphthál.

אֶפְקֹדֶיךָ Hag. i. 8, where the ה seems to have been lost, as in other instances (Art. 72, &c.): in most of which, however, it is restored in the marginal reading.

9. For הִתְפַּקֵּד we have תִּשְׁבֵּר thou wilt be broken*, Ezek. xxxii. 28. So יִבְשֵׁי he was infirm, 2 Sam. xii. 15; יִבְרֵשׁ he was refreshed, Exod. xxxi. 17; יִגְמַל he was weaned, Gen. xxi. 8; יִאָּמַר it was said, Josh. ii. 2. So also, יִתְבַּרְכְּנָה they shall be commemorated, Isa. lxxv. 17; יִאָּכְלֶנָּה they shall be eaten up, Jer. xxiv. 2: to which many more may be added.

10. To the plural יִפְקְדוּ, a paragogic ך is often added, as in Kal: as, יִפְרְתוּן they shall be cut off, Ps. xxxvii. 9, &c.

11. We have in the Imperative, נִקְבְּצוּ assemble yourselves, Joel iv. 11, for הִקְבְּצוּ, which seems to be grounded either on the form פִּקֵּד, or פָּקֵד; if it is not the preterite used as an imperative.

12. Whenever here, as in other instances, the first letter of the root is such as to be incapable of receiving Dāgēsh forte, the preceding vowel is necessarily made perfect, as in יִאָּכְלֶנָּה &c. above given (No. 9.).

13. In the Infinitive, we have הֵאָכַל eating, Lev. vii. 18; הִפְתִּיחַ giving, Jer. xxxii. 4. And with נ, for the first letter, נִלְחָמוּ fighting together, Judg. xi. 25; נִשְׁאַל requesting, 1 Sam. xx. 28; נִדְּבַשׁ desiring, Gen. xxxi. 30; נִשְׁלַח sending, Esth. iii. 13; נִגְּפוּ, for נִגְּפוּ striking, Judg. xx. 39, grounded on the form פִּקֵּד, or פָּקֵד. To these may be referred הִנְדִּיף (by Art. 76.), for הִנְדִּיף, or הִנְדִּיף, propelling, Ps. lxxviii. 3. We also have שִׁאֲרָה enquiring, Ezek. xiv. 3, of the same form, with ש, instead of ה, prefixed, the letter usually taken by the Chaldees and Syrians.

14. The Dāgēsh forte, found in the first radical letter in these verbs, is merely compensative for the characteristic נ, which has been rejected according to rule (Art. 76.)

15. The noun given here as a participle, has, in a few instances, (·) instead of (τ): as, נִקְשָׁה, (for נִקְשָׁה, form נִפְקֵד Art. 87. 1.) taken in a net, Ps. ix. 17. Alting † is of opinion, that the plurals נִבְּאִים persons prophesying, 1 Sam. xix. 20, Jer. xiv. 15, Ezek.

* Reasons for translating this present tense by a future will be given in the Syntax.

† Sect. vii. §. 119. de verbo perfecto.

xiii. 16 ; נִחַפְּאִים hidden, Josh. x. 17 ; נִמְצְאִים polluted, Ezek. xx. 30, 31 ; נִמְצְאִים found, Esth. i. 5, iv. 16, 1 Sam. xiii. 15, and some others, are formed on the measure נִפְקַד. But this is by no means necessary. The (τ) of the singular is, it is true, mostly found with the second radical : as, נִבְּרָאִים, but then, this vowel is not immutable, and may become (:) for the mere sake of euphony, which is perhaps the case in all these instances.

On the Persons, &c. of the Third Species PĪHEL.

2. Whenever the last radical letter happens to be one of the gutturals, or ך, (-) Páthakh will be the terminating vowel; פָּקַד will, therefore, be the measure in such cases: as, שָׁבַר he broke, Ps. cvii. 16; בָּלַע he swallowed, Is. xxv. 8; שָׁלַח he sent,

Exod. ix. 7, &c. &c. Also when followed by Makkáph; as, לְמִדְרָעָה he taught knowledge, Eccl. xii. 9.

3. In a few instances (·) is the terminating vowel: as, הִבְרַח he said; כִּבְּשׁ he washed; כִּפְּרַח he expiated.

4. When any letter, incapable of receiving Dāgēsh, is the medial letter of the root, a compensation is made by changing the preceding imperfect vowel to its corresponding perfect one: as, מָאָן he refused, for מֵאָן. So בֵּרַךְ he blessed; and, in the participle מְבַרְךָ blessing; מְרַאֵב detesting, &c.; בֵּאֵר he explained; אָחַר he delayed (Art. 109.). In a few instances (·) Khīrik remains without any apparent compensation: as, בִּעַר he destroyed, 1 Kings xxii. 47; נָאָה he vexed, Ps. x. 3; לָהֵט he inflamed, Mal. iii. 19; נָחַם he consoled, Is. xlix. 13; אָחַרוּ they delayed, Judg. v. 28, where א occurs with Sēgól. So, in the Participles; מְפַחֵד fearing, Prov. xxviii. 14; מְנַהֵל leading, Is. li. 18, &c. In all which cases, Dāgēsh is said to be implied (Art. 109.).

5. When the accent is drawn back, in the feminine (פְּקֻדָּה), the characteristic vowel (·) returns: as, לִלְחָכָה it licked, 1 Kings xviii. 38; לְקַנְטָחָהּ she gleaned, Ruth ii. 18, &c. (Art. 119. 11.)

6. In some instances Dāgēsh forte is omitted, even when the letter is capable of receiving it: as, שְׁלְחָהּ she sent, Ezek. xvii. 7; שְׁלְחוּ they sent, Ps. lxxiv. 7. So, הַלְלֵי passim, for הַלְלֵי praise ye. See Art. 113.

7. We have, in the participle, מְלַמְנֵנוּ our teacher, Job xxxv. 11, for מְאֻלְפְּנֵנוּ, by Art. 73. And, Jer. xv. 10, מְקַלְלֵנִי cursing me, but in the margin, מְקַלְלֵנִי, which is probably the true reading, giving the participle, or concrete verbal noun, written as a verb, with the fragment of the first personal pronoun.

8. In the participle of the feminine gender (·) occasionally remains: as, מְשַׁבְּלָהּ causing abortion, Exod. xxiii. 26; we also have מְשַׁבְּרָתָהּ inebriating, Jer. li. 7; and, without Dāgēsh, מְנַאֲפָתָהּ (for מְנַאֲפָתָהּ) committing adultery, Prov. xxx. 20; and by contraction, מְשַׁרְתָּהּ (for מְשַׁרְתָּתָהּ), ministering, 1 Kings i. 15 (Art. 77.).

9. For the particular force of this species, see Art. 154. 7–9.

On the Objective Voice, or Fourth Species PŪHAL.

10. We sometimes have (τ) Khātúph in this species, instead of (·), e. g. כִּרְתָהּ it was cut, Ezek. xvi. 4; where it should be observed, that ך has Dāgēsh, contrary to the usual practice : שִׁדְרָה it is destroyed, Nah. iii. 7. So also the participial noun מֵאֲדָם made red, Ib. ii. 4 ; and, in the plural number, מֵאֲדָמִים,* Exod. xxv. 5.

11. In many instances, the Dāgēsh is implied (Art. 109.) ; as, וָרָחַץ washed, Prov. xxx. 12 ; מִחַרְמֵהוּ object of mercy, fem., Hos. i. 6. The Kāméts, found here in the penultima, is on account of the pause-accent (Art. 120. 4.). So, גִּחְזָהוּ consoled, Is. liv. 11.

12. When Dāgēsh is neither written, nor implied, the preceding vowel is necessarily made perfect ; as, הִנְרַג slain, Is. xxvii. 7 ; מִרְחַץ torn, Gen. xlv. 28 ; פִּרְשׁ declared, revealed, Num. xv. 34 ; סִעֲרָה agitated, (as with a whirlwind,) Is. liv. 11. In all which cases, the correspondence of the vowels is oblique (Art. 96. 2.).

13. In some instances the correspondence is direct ; as, יוֹלָד born, Judg. xiii. 8 ; יוֹקֵזִים taken in a net, Eccles. ix. 12 ; מוֹעֲדֵת out of joint, Prov. xxv. 19. In the first two examples, Dāgēsh is perhaps euphonic ; in the last, Kāméts is put for Sēgól on account of the pause (Art. 120. 4.). In Jer. xxii. 23, we have this participial noun, with several others, so combined with the feminine pronoun of the second person singular, as to have given considerable uneasiness to the Grammarians : the passage is,—

יִשְׁבְּתִי בְּלִבְנוֹן מְקַנְתִּי בְּאֲרוֹזִים מִדֶּגְחַתִּי בְּבֵאלֵךְ חֲבָלִים

Thou (who) dwellest in the Libanus,—art nestled in the cedars,—how shall thou be consoled when pains come upon thee ?

Here יִשְׁבְּתִי, is put for יִשָּׁב אֹתִי, מְקַנְתִּי, for מְקַנֵּן אֹתִי, and גִּחְחַתִּי, for גִּחְחֵן אֹתִי. In all which cases, we have nothing more than the feminine form of the pronoun in conjunction with a participial, or verbal concrete, noun. In the example מְקַנְתִּי, Rabbi Jona was of opinion, according to Buxtorf, that some of the vowels

* In some editions, and as cited by Buxtorf, this word is written מֵאֲדָם, with Kāméts Khâtéf under ם, which is contrary to the first principles of Hebrew syllabication. They are also thus cited by Kimkhi, in the Mikhlol, from which Buxtorf probably took his examples.

only had been retrenched; by which he probably meant, that the pronoun was added, some abbreviation being first made. (See Art. 175. 15. note.)

14. In a few instances we have a Substitute of Shěvá, where analogy requires the Shěvá, which seems to have been introduced for the sake of euphony: as, לָקַחְתָּ taken, Gen. ii. 23; תִּבְקָשִׁי thou shalt be sought, Ezek. xxvi. 21 (Art. 106. 5.).

15. For the particular force of this Species, see Art. 154. 7—15. 16.

2. The characteristic ה, of this species, occurs also with (◌), (◌◌), or (◌-), but this happens only when a guttural letter follows: as, הֶאֱמִין he believed, Gen. xlv. 26; הִצְמִיד he caused to stand, Lev. xiv. 11; הִאֲמַרְתָּ thou hast professed, Deut. xxvi. 17; הִצְעַבְרָתָּ thou hast caused to pass over, Josh. vii. 7. We also have הִעֲבַרְתָּ Exod. xiii. 12; and הִעֲבַרְתִּי Zech. iii. 4, &c. And with (◌) under the guttural in הִחֲתִים it is obstructed, Lev. xv. 3.

3. In one instance we have (◌) with the middle radical letter: as, הִשְׁאַלְתִּיהוּ I have requested him, 1 Sam. i. 28. See the notes on Kal (Art. 188. 28.).

4. On the word הִחֲדַלְתִּי shall I leave? Judg. ix. 9, 11, 13, much has been written, but perhaps not very conclusively. Let us endeavour to analyze it. It will be seen, by turning to the lexicons, that חֲדַל is the form of the Imperative in Kal: which, according to our system, will give חֲדַלְתִּי, for the primitive Segolate noun. Here, then, we have nothing more than a Segolate noun, conjugated with the pronoun, which, in the first person, will regularly be חֲדַלְתִּי, and, by rejecting the Khōlēm (as in the Segolates, Art. 152. 3.), and retaining the correspondent substitute of Shëvâ, in order to preserve the form, we shall have חֲדַלְתִּי, which, with the interrogative ה prefixed (Art. 179.), we shall have הִחֲדַלְתִּי am I a leaving? i. e. shall I leave? According to this analysis, therefore, this word belongs not to the fifth, but to the first species, conjugated with the abstract, instead of the concrete, noun, which is unusual.

5. In another instance, viz., הִאֲנַלְתִּי I have polluted, Is. lxiii. 3, we have the augmented verbal noun, commencing with א, instead of ה: i. e. the form usually taken in the Chaldee and Syriac (Art. 157. 2, 158.).

6. Again, we have in Amos iv. 3, הִשְׁלַכְתֶּנּוּ, which is an unusual, but more regular, way of writing the second person plural feminine of the preterite tense: i. e. הִשְׁלַכְתֶּנּוּ, usually הִשְׁלַכְתֶּנּוּ (Art. 188. 27.), ye have cast. In Isaiah, chap. xix. 6, we have הִאֲזַנְיָרוּ they shall abhor, with two letters of augmentation, א and ה; but here, אֲזַנְיָר is perhaps the ground-form.

7. In the present tense, we also have the form הִפְקֵד; and, in both, the characteristic ך is frequently omitted. With the paragogic ה, however, ך is always added: as, אֲשַׁלְיֶקָה I will cast, Neh. xiii. 8. With (ֿ); as, יִאֱמֵן he may believe, Job xv. 31. And by a further contraction, יִבְטַח he will give confidence, 2 Kings xviii. 30, for יִבְטַחֿ, or יִבְטַיֿ.

8. In some instances every trace of the characteristic ך is lost; as, יָדְבִקוּ they arrived at, 1 Sam. xxxi. 2; יִדְרְכוּ they bend, tread, or direct, as a bow, Jer. ix. 2. Where the primitive form seems to have been taken, instead of the usual one of the measure פְּקִיד.

9. אֶסְפָּה I will collect, 1 Sam. xv. 6, is put for אֶאֱסִיף (for אֶאֱסִיף Artt. 72, 87. 1.), root אֶסֶף, or אֶסֶף. So, אֶבְרִיחַ I will ruin, Jer. xlvi. 8 (for אֶבְרִיחַ Ib. for אֶבְרִיחַ), root וְבַד, Arabic وَبَد cognate with אֶבַד.

10. א is sometimes rejected, together with the characteristic ה, to facilitate the pronunciation perhaps: as, אֶזְעִן I will hear, Job xxxii. 11 (for אֶזְעִנוּ Art. 72.). So, אֶמְסִיחֵם I will destroy them, Jer. viii. 13, for אֶמְסִיחֵם; יִהַל he shall pitch a tent, for יִהַלֿ, Is. xiii. 20; יִהַר he tarries, 2 Sam. xx. 5, is, perhaps, for the passive form יִהַרֿ, for יִהַרֿ (Art. 73.); and, as the quiescence of א after Kāméts Khātúf is rather unusual in Hebrew, the ך may have been taken to avoid this. The final (ֿ) is probably euphonic, and taken on account of the guttural, as in other cases.

11. Some are of opinion, that יִהַרֿ 1 Sam. xv. 5, is put for יִהַרֿֿ, by omitting the א, as above, by Art. 73.

12. In the Imperative we may have a paragogic ה, which will then, as before (No. 7.), take the characteristic ך: as, הִצְלִיחֶהָ prosper thou, Neh. i. 11. (Art. 175. 5.)

13. Whenever the second, or third, radical letter is, either a guttural, or ר, the terminating vowel will be (-): as, הִנְחֵרְתִּי cause to come down, Joel iv. 11; הִרְחֵקֵם remove far away, Job xiii. 21; הִיֶּשֶׁרֵם, margin הִיֶּשֶׁר make straight, Ps. v. 9.

14. In the Infinitive, or abstract verbal noun, the characteristic ה has (-) for the most part; as, הַכְרִיתַת cutting off, Jer. xlv. 8; הַזְכִּירַת commemorating, 2 Sam. xviii. 18. When any one of the particles, contained in the word בְּכַלֵּם, is prefixed, this form is always adopted; when this is not the case, we may have הַפְקִידַת, or הַפְקִידַת: as, הַשָּׁבִיבִים rising early, Jer. vii. 13; הַצְמִידַת setting up, Neh. vii. 3; הַשְׁמִיֵד destroying, Amos ix. 8.

15. When either the second or third letter is a guttural, or ר, we then have (-) for the final vowel, as before : as, הִפָּצַר resisting, 1 Sam. xv. 23; הִזְפִּירְכֶם your bringing to recollection, Ezek. xxi. 29.

16. In many instances, we have the first vowel of the Infinitive the same with that of the Preterite tense : as, הִרְפִּיעַ giving rest, הִרְפִּיז shaking, Jer. l. 34; הִמְלִיט liberating; הִצִּיל saving, Is. xxxi. 5.

17. לְאַדְרִיב 1 Sam. ii. 33, is probably put for לְהַאֲדִיב (Art. 73.), derived from the root אָדַב; אָדַב he punished. Whence תַּדְיִב correction, punishment. But see my Hebrew Lexicon.

On the Objective Voice, הוֹפְהָל.

18. This voice is grounded on nouns of the form of הִפְקֹד, or הִפְקֹדָה (Art. 157. 10.). And here, as in the Pūhāl, the agent never appears ; and hence, both are called by the Hebrew Grammarians, as are also those corresponding to them in Arabic by the Arabians, Conjugations the agents of which are not named.*

19. Kibbúts occasionally accompanies ה, instead of (ר) Khātúph; as, הִשְׁכַּב thrown down, Ezek. xxxii. 32; הִשְׁלַךְ cast down, Dan. viii. 11.

20. When the first radical letter happens to be a guttural, (ר) occupies the place of Shévá : as, הִרְבָּה she is laid waste, Ezek. xxvi. 2, where the Kāméts Khātúph becomes a perfect vowel, and remains under the characteristic ה, by analogy (see Art. 55.).

21. The participial nouns frequently occur with (ו), instead of

* Heb. בָּנִין שֶׁלֹּא נִזְכָּר שִׁם בְּפִעֻלָּה, Arab. صَيْغَةُ مَا لَمْ يَسْمُ فَاعِلُهُ. The reason of this seems to be, that, as the nominative is included in the verb, and as, in these passive conjugations, this nominative is not the agent, but the patient on which the influence of the verb is exerted; if any other word were added as a nominative, (which would then be in apposition with the pronoun so included,) it would not represent the agent, but the patient; and further, it is unusual in the Shemitic dialects to use a periphrasis; as, Judah was killed by Simeon; for then it would be shorter to say, Simeon killed Judah; the Grammarians, therefore, have laid down this apparent omission as a rule, although some instances are to be found to the contrary.

(τ) Khātúph: as, מִשָּׁבַב laid down, 2 Kings iv. 32. So in the feminine, מִשָּׁלְכֶת cast down, 1 Kings xiii. 25. In one instance, the characteristic ה is retained, as is often the case in the Chaldee: as, מִהֲזַעְעוֹת (for מִהֲזַעְעוֹת), made angular, Ezek. xlvi. 22. But, when the first radical is a guttural, it will take (τ), as before: e. g. מִעֲמַד set up, 1 Kings xxii. 35: מִסְּאִיִּים contained, held, 2 Chron. ix. 18; מִחֲרָבוֹת wasted, Ezek. xxix. 12. So יִחְרַם (who is) forbidden, Exod. xxii. 19. Here also Kāméts Khātúph is equivalent to י.

22. The characteristic ה, of this and the last species, is generally rejected, when preceded by any preformative taking an initial Shévá: as, יִפְקִיד, for יִהְפְּקִיד; יִפְקֹד, for יִהְפְּקֹד, &c. See Art. 73.

23. For the peculiar force of this species, both subjective and objective, see Art. 157. 2—10.

2. The last vowel in both tenses, as well as in the Imperative, is frequently (-): as, הִתְחַזַּק he seemed strong, 2 Chron. xiii. 7: הַתְּנַלֵּךְ he shall be shaved,* Lev. xiii. 33, and, with the Chaldaïc prefix אֶתְחַבֵּר he joined himself, 2 Chron. xx. 35. So in the present tense, אֶתְנַחֵם I will console myself, Ps. cxix. 52 (the primitive word being נָחַם, not נָחַם); תִּתְהַדָּר thou arrogatest praise to thyself, Prov. xxv. 6; תִּתְחַפֵּד thou shewest thyself kind, 2 Sam. xxii. 26; תִּתְמַם thou shewest thyself perfect, Ib. et Psalm xviii. 26; תִּתְפַּלֵּל thou shewest thyself perverse, 2 Sam. xxii. 27. See Ps. xxxvii. 4, and 1 Kings xx. 22, for the Imperative. Here the primitive word seems to have had (-) for its last vowel.

3. In נִפְכַּר he shall be expiated, Deut. xxi. 8, we have a contracted form for נִתְפַּכַּר, a compound of both the Hithpāhél, and Niphhál, forms. To which I see no good ground for objection; because I hold, that the augment of the Niphhál species may be prefixed to a noun commencing with ח, with just as much propriety as it can to any other. The Rabbinical writers often use this form.

* The future signification of this tense will be accounted for in the Syntax.

4. Any root, having a medial letter incapable of receiving Dāgēsh, will make the usual compensation (See Art. 109.) The verb here also, as in other instances, may have the paragogic ה (See Art. 175. 4.).

5. In a few instances (·) attends the medial radical letter; as, הִתְהַדְּתִי I will shew myself holy; הִתְגַּדְּתִי I will shew myself great, Ezek. xxxviii. 23. (See Lev. xi. 44.) We have also Khōlēm: as, הִתְנַעְּצוּ they shall be moved; הִתְהוֹלְלוּ they shall be made mad, Jer. xxv. 16. The primitive nouns here, are perhaps קֹדֶשׁ, גִּדּוּל, גַּעַשׁ, and הִלָּל; which will account sufficiently for the vowels.

6. In the participial noun, we have מְהַלְּלִים irritated, Isa. lii. 5, for מְהַלְּלִים, where the primitive noun is of the form פְּתוּדָה.

7. The feminine form has sometimes a segolate termination; as, מְתַמְּצֶמֶת strengthening herself, Ruth i. 18; מְתַלְּקֶמֶת contained, Exod. ix. 24.

8. In Exod. ii. 4: וַתִּשָּׁב and she stood, we have a very singular anomaly, and one which has given great trouble to the Grammarians, among whom Albert Schultens seems to me to have approached nearest to the truth. His solution of the difficulty is:—"It is not only," says he, "in the sibilants that a transposition might take place (Art. 83. 2. 3.), but also in any other letter, as in the Arabic species ^{أَفْعَل} أَفْعَل. If then we take יִצָּב for the root, and write הִתְיַצָּב for הִתְיַצָּב and then drop the ' (Art. 72.) we shall have הִתְיַצָּב, which will be sufficiently analogical. Altling refers the form to a Syriasm. Heb. Gram., § 163.

9. Of the objective form of this species, only a few instances occur; as, הִתְיַצָּבוּ they were set in order, arranged, Numb. i. 47, ii. 33, xxvi. 62, 1 Kings xx. 27. In our authorized version, this word is translated by numbered, for which there seems to be no good authority. For some account of (τ) instead of (-) under the first radical letter, see Art. 185. 4. 5; 157. 10, note.

Other examples are: הִתְמַמְּצָה polluted (for הִתְמַמְּצָה, where ט and ת combine under ט, Art. 83.), Deut. xxiv. 4; and הִתְשַׁבָּה made fat, Is. xxxiv. 6, for הִתְשַׁבָּה Art. 83. 1.

10. For the properties of this species, see Art. 157. 12—16; and for the transpositions which sometimes take place in the letters, Art. 83.

On the remaining and less usual Species of the Conjugation of Hebrew Verbs.

197. Of these, the forms פוֹקֵד, פוֹקֵד, and הִתְפוֹקֵד classed under the third, fourth, and seventh species (Art. 186.), will be considered when we come to treat on those roots which have ו, or ו, for their middle radical; or, have the second and third the same; because those verbs alone are subject to these forms.

2. It must have appeared from what has already been said, that, although the roots or words to be conjugated may be multiform, the conjugation is but one: that is to say, the different persons, &c., are formed in all cases by one general and regular process. The persons, for example, are formed either by prefixing, or postfixing, the defective forms of one or other of the pronouns (Artt. 188. 189.): the Imperative and Infinitive by taking the root, and suffixing the pronouns or not; and the participles, by prefixing מ; which may then be inflected like other nouns. The following examples taken from the Mikhlol of D. Kimkhi will sufficiently illustrate this subject, as applied to pluriliteral roots.

כִּרְבֵּל* he put on a garment so called.

PRETERITE TENSE.

3 pers. כִּרְבַּל; 2 כִּרְבַּלְתָּ; 1 כִּרְבַּלְתִּי, &c. as before.

* This—which does not occur at length, as a verb, in the Sacred Text—is here given merely as a paradigm.

PRESENT TENSE.

3 pers. יִכְרֹבֵל; 2 תִּכְרֹבֵל; 1 אֲכַרְבֵּל, &c.

ACTIVE PARTICIPIAL NOUN.

Masc. מְכַרְבֵּל, fem. מְכַרְבֵּלָה or מְכַרְבֵּלַת, sing.;
 masc. מְכַרְבֵּלִים, fem. מְכַרְבֵּלוֹת, pl.

PASSIVE PARTICIPIAL NOUN.

מְכַרְבֵּל, &c., 1 Chron. xv. 27.

3. So also, כָּרַם he cut off; רֹטַף he was full of moisture; פָּרַשׁ he spread; תַּרְקַר he undermined; חִרְחַר he inflamed, &c., which are nothing more than reduplicated nouns. See Art. 169.

4. From the noun תַּחְרָה a breast-plate, we have תַּחְתַּחְתַּח thou puttest on a breast-plate, Jer. xii. 5. And as a participle, מִתַּחְתַּחֵה Ib. xxii. 15.

5. Of primitive words, dropping the medial ו, or י, and reduplicating the first and last radical letters (Art. 169. 5.), the following are leading forms of verbs: כִּלְכַּל sustaining; פָּרַפַּר leaping; כִּבְּכוּ arming; צִפְצַף chirping; תַּרְקַר (rather תַּרְקַר, as above), undermining. Many of these, however, are placed by other Grammarians under roots having the second and third radicals the same. In one instance, we have an objective form, כִּלְכַּלְתִּי they were sustained, 1 Kings xx. 27.

6. The following are supposed, by Kimkhi, to have been formed by reduplicating the first and second letter of the root (Art. 169. 3.): as, שִׁעֲשַׁע causing to increase; שִׁעֲשַׁע soothing, delighting; תִּצְתַּח ridiculing. Whence מְתַעֲתַע Gen. xxvii. 12; יִפְיִיף thou art exceedingly beautiful, Ps. xlv. 3.; טַאטַא bowing down, debasing.—these, by reduplicating the last two, and dropping the first, radical: הִפְכַּפַּח turning about, tortuous; הִמְרַמַּר becoming very hot; סִתְרַרַר perambulatory (see Art. 169. 6.); and the following, by prefixing the particle הַה: as, הִתְמַחַח delaying.

7. All these, as far as they are found conjugated, follow the general analogy already laid down: e. g. סִכְסַכְתִּי I (will) arm, Is. xix. 2; יִסְכַּסֵּךְ he will arm, Ib. ix. 10. From שִׁעֲשַׁע, שִׁעֲשַׁעְתִּי, thou (fem.) causest to grow, Is. xvii. 11. So הִתְמַחַחֵה he delayed;

הִתְמַהְמְהוּ they delayed, Judg. xix. 8 ; הִתְמַהְמְהוּ we delayed, Gen. xliii. 10. Infinitive, הִתְמַהְמְהוּ delaying, Exod. xii. 39. Participle, מִתְמַהְמְהוּ, It. הִתְמַהְמְהוּ he will, may, &c. delay, Hab. ii. 3.

In the last instance, the final ׀ is radical, and therefore it has the Mappik, and remains unchangeable ; of which more will be said hereafter.

8. It should be observed, that these verbs are found in a very few of the persons at most, and some only as participles, or verbal nouns : in no case, perhaps, is any verb found conjugated throughout all the species.

On these pluriliteral verbs, see Jauhari under جَرَّ, Martelotto's Gram. Arab., pp. 185. 162-3. Bochart. Hierozoicon, tom. II., col. 689. Orig. Edit. Hariri, by Mr. de Sacy, p. 10 in voce حَصَصَ. See also Jauhari, and the Kamoos, under these and similar words.

LECTURE XII.

ON THE DEFECTIVE VERBS.

198. We now proceed to consider those verbs, which present certain defects in their several forms. We shall be brief, however, because a table of the conjugation of every kind of verb will be given at the end of these remarks. Our principal business now will be, to shew how these defective verbs are reduced to the analogy of those already considered.

2. It has already been shewn, that primitive words having a ׀, in certain situations (Art. 76.), or either of the letters אָרױ (Art. 72.), will occasionally drop it ; and, that one of the two last radical letters of any word, when both are the same (Art. 77.), will also be rejected. We now remark, that, when words thus circumstanced are conjugated with the pronouns, they will be affected both in their vowels and consonants by these considerations. We do not think it necessary here, to divide these verbs into Defectives, and Quiescents, as has usually been done; because that would, perhaps, be multiplying distinctions without sufficient reasons for doing so.

3. All the anomalies or defects, then, that can possibly occur, must arise from one, or more, of these letters occurring as the first, second, or third, radical letter of the root; or, when the second and third radicals are the same.

4. Let us begin with those commencing with נ. The rule is (Art. 76.), to this effect: Whenever נ is affected by a final Shěvá (:), it will be dropped: i. e. whenever the ה, in נקִּי of our paradigm, has a final Shěvá, then, putting any verb commencing with נ in the same situation, the נ will be rejected, and the defect supplied by Dāgēsh forte.

5. All verbs of this kind, then, will be conjugated regularly in the Preterite tense of Kal; as, נִּגַּשׁ, he approached; נִּגַּשְׁתָּ, נִּגַּשְׁתָּ, נִּגַּשְׁתָּ, &c., as also in the Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél, throughout: because, in these cases, the initial נ of the root, will not be thus affected.

In the Present tense, the leading word is נִּגַּשׁ; here, then, we should have נִּגַּשׁ; but, by Art. 76. נִּגַּשׁ, נִּגַּשׁ, נִּגַּשׁ, and so on.

6. In the same manner, in the preterite of Niphhál, נִּגַּשׁ, for נִּגַּשׁ; and so on, by the same rule, through the Hiphhíl, and Hophhál, species.

7. The Infinitive, or abstract verbal noun, is here, for the most part, of the form פְּקֹדֶת; as, נִגְשֶׁת, and, dropping the נ (Art. 76.), נִשְׁת; but, if a guttural be the last radical letter, (וּ) will become (וּ) as it is the case with segolate nouns (Art. 108.).

8. The Imperative is גִּשׁ, for נִגְשׁ, which is regularly conjugated: as, גִּשׁ, גִּשְׁי, גִּשְׁו, גִּשְׁנָה. (Art. 76.) It will be unnecessary to notice this verb farther.

9. As the verb נָתַן, he gave, placed, &c., has a little peculiarity about it, in having ך also for its final letter, it will be necessary briefly to notice its conjugation.

10. Here, then, the final ך will also be rejected by our rule (Art. 76.), whenever that has a final Shévá: as, נָתַן, for נָתַן, &c. And, as נָתַן is the leading word for the present tense, we should have, regularly, יִנְתֵּן, יִנְתֵּן, &c.; but, by our rule, יִתֵּן, יִתֵּן, &c. This, however, does not universally take place in other verbs commencing with נ, as will presently be shewn.

11. In the Infinitive, for נָתַת, or יִתֵּת, according to our last example, we have יִתֵּת, by a further contraction, as if יִתֵּת, or יִתֵּת, had been the primitive form; and hence, with the affixed pronouns, יִתֵּת my giving; יִתֵּת his giving, &c.

12. In these, as in other verbs, we may have (-), (·), or (ם), for the last vowel of either of the tenses; hence יִתֵּת thou shalt exact, Deut. xv. 3; יִתֵּת it shall wither, Ps. i. 3; the primitives being, perhaps, נָתַת, and נָתַת, respectively.

13. When the second radical letter is, either a guttural, or ך, and therefore incapable of receiving Dāgēsh, the compensation, when נ is dropped, is either expressed or implied, (Art. 109.); as, first, יִתֵּת, for יִתֵּת (for יִתֵּת), he will descend; second, יִתֵּת, for יִתֵּת, he will receive consolation.

14. In most cases, when the middle radical is a guttural, the נ is not dropped; as, יִנְאֵה he groans; יִנְהֵה he rages; יִנְחַל he will possess; יִנְעַם he is mild. There are also a few instances in which the נ is retained, when the second radical is not guttural; as, יִנְמֹר he will keep, Jer. iii. 5; יִנְבְּשׁוּ ye will exact, Is. lviii. 3, &c.

15. The נ, is also occasionally preserved in the Infinitive; as, נָבַל withering; נָגַעַ touching: and in the Imperative; as, נָטַשׁ leave; נָצַר keep; נָדַר dig; נָטַעַ plant, &c.

16. As one verb commencing with ל, namely לָקַחַ he took, is subject, in some degree, to the same rule, it may be proper to notice it in this place.

This verb, then, is found in the species Kal, Niphhál, and Pūhál only. In Kal, the ל is dropped, whenever it is accompanied by a final (:), as also in the Imperative, and occasionally in the Infinitive. In the preterite tense, therefore, it will retain all its letters regularly. In the present, we shall have לָקַחַ, for יִלְקַחַ: and so on. In the Imperative, we have לָקַחַ, and לְקַחַ, לְקַחַי, and לְקַחַי, &c. In the Infinitive, we have also two forms, לְקַחַת (once תְּקַחַת 2 Kings xii. 9.), and לְקַחַ, Deut. xxxi. 26.

17. In Niphhál, the ל is retained; as נִלְקַחַת, and נִלְקַחַתָּה, it is taken, 1 Sam. iv. 11. 17. 22. Infinitive, לְקַחַתָּה being taken, Ibid. 19, 21.

18. In Pūhál, we have לָקַחַתָּה, in the preterite, and יִלְקַחַתָּה, in the present. But, in the third person singular feminine of the preterite, לְקַחַתָּה (for לְקַחַתָּה), Gen. ii. 23, which has probably been effected by attraction.

19. The participles are regular, as far as they are found: as, לֹקַחַתָּה one who takes, &c.

On the Verbs commencing with נ or י.

199. The next class of roots we shall notice, as subject to certain defects, are those having either an נ, or י, for their first radical letter.

2. Now, as these letters, being the first of any word, will lose their power as consonants, only when preceded by certain vowels (Art. 37.); the consequence is, the conjugation will be regular, as in נָפַקַתָּה, in the preterite of Kal, the Infinitive, and Participles; as also in the whole of Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél; but, in this last, they seldom occur. We need not, therefore, give any table of these forms. Let us now proceed to consider those parts, in which any defect, or contraction, will arise, in consequence of either of these letters losing their powers as consonants; and, first, of those which have א, for their first radical letter.

3. The leading word, for the preterite tense of Kal, may be of either of the forms פָּקַד, or בָּקַד: as, אָמַר he said; אֹר he shone (for אָר perhaps, Art. 75.); that of the present, of either פָּקַד, בָּקַד, or פָּקַד, rarely בָּקַד: as, אָמַר, (for אֶאמַר Art. 87. 5.), I say; אָזַר binding; תֵּאָזַר thou bindest; תֵּאָזַר thou art angry; יָאֵתָה he comes. A few have two forms: as, אָחַז and אָחַז; אָמַר, and אָמַר.

In one case, we have פָּקַד: as, אָנוּשׁ; so אָנוּשָׁה, contr. for אֶאָנוּשָׁה I am languid, Ps. lxix. 21.

4. Taking אָמַר, then, or any other of these leading words, and prefixing the abbreviated pronouns with (:), (Art. 189. 15.), we shall have וְאָמַר, תֵּאָמַר, תֵּאָמְרִי, תֵּאָמְרִי, אֶאמַר he, she, thou, I, speak, &c.: but, by contraction, (Art. 87. 5.), וְאָמַר, תֵּאָמַר, תֵּאָמְרִי, אָמַר; and, with apocope, or the accent drawn back, וְאָמַר, תֵּאָמַר, &c.: also with (-), וְאָמַר, תֵּאָמַר, &c.; אָחַז he held, has וְאָחַז, and וְאָחַז, תֵּאָחַז, and תֵּאָחַז, &c.; many other verbs also, of this kind, have two forms in the present tense.

5. In the Imperative, אָמַר, אָמְרִי, &c. the Infinitive is אָמַר, or אָמַר; the participle active, אָמַר, plural אָמְרִים, &c. as in בָּקַד. So in the Passive Participle, אָמוּר.

6. In Niphhál, the initial א, is treated like any other guttural; as, גָּאָמַר, גָּאָמְרָה, גָּאָמְרֵת, &c.; and, in the present tense, גָּאָמַר, גָּאָמְרִי, &c.; אָחַז has in this species, נָאָחַז, (for נָאָחַז Art. 87. 5.), plural נָאָחַזוּ they are taken, Josh. xxii. 9; the leading word taken here, being similar to that in the present tense of Kal. The participle is regular, נִאָמַר, נִאָחַז, &c. It will be observed, that the syllabication differs here, in a slight degree, from that in which a non-guttural letter is the first of the root; as, נִאָמַר Nē-ēmár, נִפְקַד Niph-kád. In the first case, the preformative with its vowel forms the first syllable; in the second, the preformative with its vowel together with the first radical letter.

7. In Hiphkál, and Hophhál, the same rule prevails; as, הֶאֱמִין הֶאֱמִינָה, הֶאֱמַנְתָּ, הֶאֱמַנְתִּי, הֶאֱמַנְתִּי, הֶאֱמִינוּ, הֶאֱמִינוּ, &c. Present tense, יֶאֱמִין, יֶאֱמִינָה, יֶאֱמַנְתָּ, יֶאֱמַנְתִּי, &c.; or, with the י omitted, יֶאֱמִן, יֶאֱמִנָה, as in other cases.

8. So in the Participial noun, מֶאֱמִין, fem. מֶאֱמִינָה, pl. מֶאֱמִינִים, &c.

9. In a few instances, the radical א is dropped; as, הֹאֲכִיל consuming, for הֶאֱכִיל, where we have, also, a contraction of the vowels (Art. 87. 5.), Ezek. xxi. 33. So יֹרֵב, for יֶאֱרֵב, he lies in wait, 1 Sam. xv. 5; אֶזֶן I will hear, for אֶאֶזֶן, Job xxxii. 11; אֶסְפֵּי, for אֶאֶסְפֵּי I will collect, Zeph. i. 2, 3; אֶרְיֶצְנוּ for אֶאֶרְיֶצְנוּ I will depress him, Jer. xlix. 19; to which several other of the same kind may be added. So in the participle מֶזֶן, for מֶאֶזֶן, or מֶאֶזֶן, hearkenings, Prov. xvii. 4.

10. In Hophhál, מֶאֱחִזִּים things, or persons, held, contained, or the like, 2 Chron. ix. 18, is agreeable with this analogy.

11. Enough, perhaps, has been said to shew what the process of conjugating these verbs is: we may now proceed, therefore, to those which have י, for their first radical.

200. One remarkable circumstance attends these verbs, which is this: There is a difficulty in ascertaining, whether ך, or ך, has the greater claim to be considered the first letter of the root. The same is the case in the Arabic: and, from the frequent substitution of one for the other in the Hebrew, the same difficulty must have long existed in this language.* We shall, therefore, in considering the conjugations, take it for granted, that the primitive forms were written with either ך, or ך, and, that the one, or the other, of these letters has been occasionally taken, as the most convenient for enunciation, when preceded by some vowel depriving it of its power as a consonant.

On the KAL, PIHĒL, PŪHĀL, and HITHPĀHĒL Species of Verbs commencing with ך.

2. In Pihĕl, Pūhāl, and Hithpāhĕl, as before, we have no defect, which is also the case in the preterite of Kal. In the Infinitive, Imperative, and Present tense, of Kal, and in the Niphhāl, Hiphhāl, and Hophhāl, species, therefore, our only defects will occur; and these we now proceed to consider.

3. In the present tense of Kal, then, as in former cases, the last vowel of the root may be either (-) (·) or (i), which may be accounted for in every case, by supposing a different form of the primitive word to have been originally taken. So far all is as before.†

* Thus we have ך, for ך, descending, 1 Sam. xxx. 24; ך, progeny, Gen. xi. 30; ך, id., 2 Sam. vi. 23; ך, heavy, Prov. xvii. 27; ך, laden, Ib. xxi. 8. In all which cases, and indeed in almost all others in the Arabic, ך is taken for the first radical: but, in the Hebrew, ך.

† I must dissent from Schræder, who says that many of these roots are

4. In the next place, when the preformatives are brought in contact with י, two modes of adjustment will take place among the vowels and consonants; the one, by contraction and occasional omission also: the other, by a sort of accommodation and omission: e. g. 1st. יִבֶּשׁ becoming dry; present יִיבֶּשׁ, by Art. 87.5. יִיבֶּשׁ; and, by omission, יִבֶּשׁ, where (·) is taken as a perfect vowel by analogy. So יִירֶשׁ he will possess; אִישָׁן I shall sleep; יִיקָץ he will awake; יִישֵׁם he will place; יִיצֹר he will form.

5. The second method is, by contracting the (·) and (:·) into (··), and omitting the radical י: as, יִישָׁב, for יִישָׁב he will dwell; אֵלְךָ I will go; אֲדַע I shall know; תִּרְד she shall descend. This sort of contraction generally takes place, when the last vowel of the leading word is (··), probably for the purpose of promoting euphony, as in the Segolate nouns. See Art. 108. In the following examples, (ו) is the last vowel of the primitive form: נִאֲוֹת we agree, Gen. xxxiv. 15; יִאֲתוּ they agree, 2 Kings xii. 9; יִבּוֹשׁ he blushes: but these two may be derived from אוֹת, and בוֹשׁ, as the roots.

6. Of this kind the following are, according to Altling, the only verbs which occur; viz., יִאֲתוּ he agreed; יָדַע he knew; יָלַד he begat; יָלַח he went; יָצָא he went out; יָקַע it was dislocated; יָרַד he descended; יָרַע it seemed evil; יָשָׁב he dwelt. The following have both forms; יָהָם he became hot; יָצַר he formed; יָקַד he burned; יָקָר it was precious; יָשַׁם i. q. שׁוּם; יָשַׁם he desolated, and יָבֵשׁ he became dry, to which יִבּוֹשׁ, above noticed, conjugated like those commencing with נ (Reg. 72.); because, the analogy of the language requires a different process, when certain vowels precede נ, from what it does when they precede י, or ו; and because the signification of these roots, though cognate, requires no such sacrifice of principle.

is referred by some. In a few the ʿ is retained with (·): as, אֵילְכָה I will go, Mic. i. 8; יִיקֶר he shall be precious, Ps. lxxii. 14.

7. The former of these modes may, therefore, be considered as conformable with analogy; the latter, as accommodated to euphony.

8. In all those verbs which conform with the analogy, (and all do so except the few above noticed,) the Imperatives, and Infinitives, follow the general paradigm: יִרְקֶה spitting, יִסֵּד founding, יִרָא fear thou, &c.

9. But, when an elision takes place, Art. 76, the first radical letter is dropped, the final vowel remaining: as, רָר Infinitive and Imperative; fem. רָרָה, and רָרְתִי. This verb has also יִרֵד, and יִרְדֵּ, for the Infinitive. So the Imp. הִקְבִי, and הִקְבִי, give, root יָקַב; יָדַע know thou; and, with the paragogic ה, יִדַעְהָ. Infin. יִדַעְתָּ, for יִדַעְתָּ, and יִדַעְתָּ. What verbs are used in the several forms, can be known only from usage.

10. Several forms of the Infinitive are, occasionally, derived from the same root: i. e. according to our system, sometimes the abstract noun of one form is taken, and sometimes that of another; as, יָלוֹד bringing forth, Job xv. 35, form פָּקֹד; לָדַת Gen. xvi. 16; *לָת (for לָדַת, form פָּקַד) 1 Sam. iv. 19. So רָדָה descending, Gen. xlii. 3; יִרְדֵּ (form פָּקַד) my descending, Ps. xxx. 4.

11. To this variety of forms may be referred the following examples; אִם-שׁוּב תֵּשָׁבוּ Jer. xliii. 10, If ye will still abide; where שׁוּב, is probably put for יִשׁוּב; the י being dropped, by Art. 76. כִּי-כָל הַיּוֹכֵל that thou shalt wholly prevail; or, prevailing shalt prevail, Job xlii. 2, where כָּל, stands for יִכָּל (root יָכַל), by the same rule.

12. This verb יָכַל forms the Present tense in Kal, as if the root had been יָכַל; as, הַיּוֹכֵל, הַיּוֹכֵל, &c., for הַיּוֹכֵל, הַיּוֹכֵל. See Art. 87. 2. Which will be in the species Hophhál.

* Kimkhi tells us, that his brother derived this word from לל, thus: taking לָלָה, and striking out the latter ל, we have לָת; and, varying the vowel, לָח. In the Mikhlol, we generally have the leading word, for the Present tense, given thus: the root יָבִיג; root יָבִיג; whence we are to infer, that the persons of the Present tense will be יָבִיג, יָבִיג, &c., root יָשֵׁב; whence Pres. יִשָּׁב, and so on.

13. In the other species, viz., Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél, the analogy of the paradigm פָּקַד, is regularly followed; excepting only, that in the verbs, יָרַע he knew, יָרָה he threw, and יָבַח he contended, the י, of the root, is changed to ו: as, הִרְוִיַע he made known; הִרְוִיַח he confessed; הִרְוִיַח he disputed. In Pihél, however, we have יִגַּה (for יִגָּה Art. 73.) he shall make grieve, Lam. iii. 33; יִדְוּ (for יִדְרוּ) they shall cast out, Ib. iii. 53. In Pūhál we have מִוִּדְּקִים for מִיִּדְּקִים Jer. v. 8.

14. We now proceed to the others; viz. Niphhál, Hiphhíl, and Hophhál, in which the first letter of the root, will lose its power as a consonant.

15. It has already been remarked, that these verbs are sometimes conjugated as if ו, had been the first radical letter; this is the case in the three species before us. In Niphhál, for example, we shall have in the Preterite נוֹשַׁב (for נִוְשַׁב Art. 87. 1.), from the root יִשַׁב, or וִשַׁב. Present tense יוֹשַׁב (for יִוְשַׁב), where ו retains its power as a consonant. In a few instances י, remains in the Present: as, יִקְרַה he shall be pierced with a dart, Exod. xix. 13; יִקְהַל he waits, Gen. viii. 12; גַּהֵם, for נִיַּהֵם, made hot, Is. lviii. 5. The Imperatives and Infinitives are regularly formed; as, הוֹשַׁב. The participial noun, נוֹשַׁב, fem. נוֹשַׁבָּה, נוֹשַׁבָּת; pl. נוֹשַׁבִּים, and נוֹשַׁבוֹת. We have, however, נוֹגְוֹת made mournful, fem., Lam. i. 4, and נוֹגְוִי id. masc., Zeph. iii. 18 (for נִוְגְוֹת &c. Art. 87. 2.).

16. In Hiphhíl we have הוֹשִׁיב, (for הוֹשִׁיב Art. 87. 1.), and, in the Present tense, יוֹשִׁיב, or תוֹשִׁיב, and so on throughout.

17. In some roots, however, the (י) remains, and either forms a diphthong with the preceding vowel, or coalesces with it by contraction; as, first, הוֹיִצָּא, or הוֹיָצָא according to the Kéthiv (for הוֹצִיא, root יָצָא) lead out, Gen. viii. 17; הוֹיִשָּׂר, or הוֹיָשָׂר, direct thou, Ps. v. 9; אִיִּסֵּר I will chastise, Hos. vii. 12. So in the Participle or noun of agency, כְּיַמִּינִים using the right hand, 1 Chron. xii. 2. In the second place, the contraction may take place by the preceding letter taking (·): as, הִטִּיב, (for הִטִּיב Art. 87. 3.) he gave prosperity, Gen. xii. 16. So הִטִּיב, הִטִּיב, or הִטִּיב &c. throughout; אִיִּמְנָה I will take the right-hand direction, Gen. xiii. 9. Inf. הִמְיִן &c. In Exod. v. 7, we have הִאֲסִפּוּן repeat ye, where א stands in the place of ו or י: but, here the leading word might be יִיטִיב, from the root אִסַּף, cognate with יִסַּף: in יִיטִיב, for יִיטִיב,

Job xxiv. 21; יִלְלִי, for יִלְלִי Is. xvi. 7; and יִלְלִי, for יִלְלִי Jer. xlviii. 31, none of the contractions, common to other words, have taken place.

18. In Hophhál, the ו of the root takes ו throughout: as, הוֹשֵׁב (for הוֹשֵׁב, see Art. 87. 2.) he was made to dwell. So in the Present tense, יוֹשֵׁב, הוֹשֵׁב &c.; or, in both cases, with (ו), for ו: as, הוֹשֵׁב, יוֹשֵׁב &c. Art. 72.

On the Conjugation of those Verbs which have either ו, or י, for their Medial Radical Letter.

201. When these verbs terminate either in a quiescent ה, or in ח, ע, or ר; as also when conjugated in those species which have Dāgēsh in the middle radical, they follow the general paradigm; as, רִוְהָ it was watered; הִיָּה it became; רָוַחַ he breathed; גָּוַעַ he expired; הָוַיַּה he became white. So also קָוַיַּה vomit ye, Jer. xxv. 27, from קָוַיַּה; אָוַיַּבַּ he acted as an enemy, עָוַיַּה he was weary; which are perhaps only nouns.—With Dāgēsh in the middle radical; as, עָוַיַּתַּ he made crooked; עָוַיַּתַּ, and הִתְעָוַיַּתַּ, he was made crooked. So in verbs with a medial י, הִיָּבַ he criminated; הִצְטָוַיַּדַּ he procured by hunting. In all other cases, the medial radical ו, or י, loses its power as a consonant, and gives rise to several apparently defective forms.

2. Whenever a single medial ו, or י, is preceded, either by a vowel, or a final Shěvâ, and is, at the same time, followed by any vowel, it will be dropped, with the preceding vowel or Shěvâ, and its own vowel will be transposed to the first radical letter (Artt. 73. 75.); as, קָמַ, for קָמַ, he stood; מָתַ, for מָתַ, he died; אָוַרַ, for אָוַרַ, he shone; טָבַ, for טָבַ, he was good; קָוַמַ, for קָוַמַ, to rise. In Niphhál, נָקָוַמַ, for נָקָוַמַ; Hiphhál, הָאָוַיַּרַ, for הָאָוַיַּרַ, הָקָיַ, for הָקָיַ; Hophhál, הוֹקָמַ, for הוֹקָמַ, &c. In like manner, when י is the middle radical, בָּן for בִּין, he understood; בִּין for בִּיין, or בִּיין, to understand; Hiphhál, הִטִּיב, הִטִּיב, for הִטִּיב, הִטִּיב, for הִטִּיב; Hophhál, הוֹבִן, or הִבֵּן, for הִבֵּן, &c.*

3. For the forms בִּקֵּךְ, and בִּקֵּךְ, which are usual in the Imperatives and Infinitives, we here have קוּם (for קוּם or קוּם Art. 87. 2.), and, בִּין (for בִּין, or בִּין Ib. 4.)

4. In the Pihél, Pühál, and Hithpähél, Species, when the middle radical is not doubled, and this is mostly the case; the leading forms will be, בּוֹדֵד, בּוֹדֵד, and בּוֹדֵד, respectively (Art. 197.): as, קוּמָה he raised; קוּמָה, and הִתְקוּמָה, he was raised. In these cases, the process of the conjugation is regular throughout. Nouns of agency, &c. will be מְקוּמָה, מְקוּמָה, and מְתַקְוָה, respectively; the feminines and plurals of which, are regularly formed when in use.

5. The Participial noun in Kal is, for the most part, of the same form with the Preterite: as, קָם, pl. קָמִים &c.: מָתָה, pl. מָתִים; בָּן, pl. בָּנִים &c. The passive, לָוֵט, for לָוֵט, involved, form פָּקֵד; מָל, for מָל circumcised. So שָׂם, for שָׂם placed, form פָּקֵד. In a few instances, the Participle, or noun of agency, seems to be of the form פָּקֵד: as, קוּם, for קוּם standing, 2 Kings xvi. 7; בּוֹם treading, for בּוֹם Zech. x. 5.

6. In the first and second persons of both genders and numbers, and in the Preterite of Niphhál, the leading word seems to be a segolate of the form פָּקֵד, or פָּקֵד, i. e. קוּם, for קוּם, בִּין, for בִּין, Art. 87. 2. 4; in which cases, the vowel (ו) is, in the process of conjugation, introduced between the root and the abbreviated pronoun: as, בְּקוּמָה, בְּקוּמָה, בְּקוּמָה, &c. So בְּבִינָה,

* In הִטִּיב, הִטִּיב, הִטִּיב, הִטִּיב, and הִטִּיב, the first vowel is made perfect, in order to complete the syllable; which is necessary, because the first radical is taken to commence the next syllable. The (-) is taken in Hiphhál, being the vowel obliquely corresponding to (-) of the regular paradigm. See Art. 96. 2.

† That is, dropping the middle radical letter out of our common measure פָּקֵד, as is the case in these verbs; then, assuming the proper vowel, and doubling the last radical letter, we have בּוֹדֵד, &c.

נְבִיכֹתָ, נְבִינֹתָ, and so on. Alting thinks this has been done, in order to give the fuller pronunciation to the accent, as in נְקִימוֹתָ; but, in נְקִימוֹתָ, the accent does not accompany that syllable. That reason, therefore, will not hold good. I am inclined to believe, that the ם has been introduced, in order to avoid the concurrence of two quiescent letters after one vowel (Art. 33.), as would be the case, had the form נְקִימֹתָ been adopted: and if so, this vowel has been introduced, just as the (·) has in the segolate nouns (Artt. 108. 148. 2.).

7. In every other case, Niphhál takes the leading word קוֹם; as, נְקוֹם, for נְקוּם, as in נְקוּמוֹם, נְקוּמוֹר, &c. (Art. 193. 4.).

8. A similar anomaly takes place in the corresponding persons of the Hiphhíl species, which may perhaps be accounted for in the same way; as, תְּקִימוֹתַי, תְּקִימוֹתַי, תְּקִימוֹתַי, &c., but here, we also have the regular form; as, תְּקִימֹתַי, תְּקִימֹתַי, תְּקִימֹתַי.

9. It must be remembered, that whenever the first radical letter is, by any accident, made to commence a syllable; the preformative must, by our laws of syllabication, either take Shěvá, or a perfect vowel. When the accent is far removed, it will be Shěvá; but, when not, the vowel will be perfect: as, Present tense, Kal, יָקוּם, יִתְקַוֶּה, pl. יִתְקַוְּוּהוּ, &c. So in the nouns of patience and agency, in Niphhál and Hiphhíl, נְקוּם, fem. נְקוּמוֹה, pl. נְקוּמוֹים, &c. Hiph. מְקוּים, fem. מְקוּימה, pl. מְקוּימים, &c. In Hophhál, however, no such change takes place: as, הִתְקַוְּוהוּ, 2 pers. pl. הִתְקַוְּוהוּ, &c.

10. Verbs having a medial (·) will sometimes drop it, and supply its place by (·), as it happens in other verbs in the Hiphhíl species; as, תִּלְוֶנִי, for תִּלְוֶנִי, thou shalt lodge; and, with the accent drawn back, תִּלְוֶנִי 2 Sam. xvii. 16. But, when either the first, or last, radical, happens to be a guttural, we shall have (-): as, יָצַף, he was wearied, 1 Sam. xiv. 28; יָנַח, he rested, Exod. x. 14, for יָנַח, or יָנַח. So with ר, יָרַח, he put away, Gen. viii. 13. The same will occasionally take place with a pause accent: as, תִּלְוֶנִי Judg. xix. 20.

11. Hence it will appear that verbs, having a medial ם, may, in the present tense of Kal, take the same form which they, as well as those having a medial ך, will in Hiphhíl; and that, they can be distinguished only by the context.

4. If this be the case, then, we need not be surprised in occasionally finding the vowels, and even the signification, of one cognate root applied to another; as, רָפָה, for רָפָא, heal thou (root רָפָה becoming lax), Ps. lx. 4; אָרַפָה, for אָרַפָא, I will heal, Jer. iii. 22. So, with respect to the vowels only; as, כָּלַאתִי, for כָּלַאתִי, I restrained, Ps. cxix. 101, as if the root had been כָּלָה; מוֹצָא, for מוֹצָא, finding, Eccles. vii. 26; רָפְאוּנוּ, for רָפְאוּנוּ, we have healed, Jer. li. 9; הִנְבְּאוֹת prophesying, Zech. xiii. 4; הִמָּא sinning, Eccl. viii. 12, where the vowels belong to roots having ה, or י, for the last radical.

5. The following assume the vowels, and in some instances the forms, of a cognate root; נִשְׂוִי taken away, Ps. xxxii. 1, where the form is derived from נִשְׂוָה, while the sense is that of נִשְׂא. So, תִּרְפִּינָה, they (fem.) will heal, Job v. 18; יִרְפוּ they (masc.) will heal, Jer. viii. 11, and נִרְפְּתָה she, or it, was healed, Ib. li. 9, r. רָפָא; נִבְלִיתִי I wondered, Ps. cxxxix. 14, r. בָּלָא; צָמַתְּ thou hast thirsted, Ruth ii. 9 (for צָמִית, as if the root had been צָמָה, but which is צָמָא). In like manner, we have נִשְׂוּ they bear (root נִשְׂא Ezek. xxxix. 26; מְלוּ they are granditas stili, sæpe ansam præbuere, ad geminæ Radicis formas in unam confandas." The first example he gives is הִבְאִישׁ Is. xxx. 5, which he calls "specimen insigne. Hiphh. Radicum הִבְאִישׁ aruit, et הִבְאִישׁ fatuit, signantissimi præse ferens: ex הִבְאִישׁ fatere fecit, et הִבְאִישׁ acescere fecit, coalitum." Remarks of this kind are often met with in the Thesaurus Grammaticus of Buxtorf, in the Mikhlol of Kimkhi, the Rabbinical Commentaries, &c. I must confess, however, I can see but little in all this, but the occasional adoption of one or other of the cognate roots,—as indeed it occasionally happens in the Arabic,—without any intention whatever on the part of the writer, to combine more ideas than one in such verb. In the above instance, then, I believe הִבְאִישׁ has been the root taken, to be used, nevertheless, in the sense of הִבְאִישׁ. I must object to the vowel (י) Kholém: because, I think, it may have been introduced for the mere purpose of supporting this hypothesis. In Eichhorn's edition of Simonis's Lexicon, sub voce הִבְאִישׁ, א is said to be otiose.

full, Ib. xxviii. 16, r. מלא; נטמינו we are vile, Job xviii. 3, r. טמא, to which many more may be added; but, as they are always noticed in the Lexicons, they need not be detailed here.

6. In the first place, then, every root, terminating with a radical ה, that is, with ה having Mappik inscribed, will be regularly conjugated like פקד; as, גבה he was high; גבהת thou wast high, גבהו they were high, &c. This letter, therefore, is not subject to any elision, either here or elsewhere.

7. It is when ה is a substitute for either ו, or י, only, that any departure from the general paradigm can take place in any case.

8. In the following instances, however, no such substitution takes place, but ו, and י, retain their original places; שָׁלוֹתִי I have been tranquil, Job iii. 26; Infin. Kal, fem. שָׁלוֹת; Participial noun, שָׁלוֹ, of the same root שָׁלו. So רָאוֹת, Infin. Ezek. xxviii. 17, from the root רָאו, usually רָאָה. In Pihel, אֲרִיִּי I will water, Is. xvi. 9. But, in Job xii. 6, we have (י) for the last radical: as, יִשְׁלִי, they will be tranquil (where the accent has been drawn back), Art. 119. 11. So, חֲסִיָּה it trusted, fem., Ps. lvii. 2; יִרְבְּיוּ they multiply, Deut. viii. 13, where, in the next member, we have יִרְבְּוּ; יִדְבְּיוּ ye assimilate, Is. xl. 18. 25; עֲטִיָּה becoming languid, Cantic. i. 7; בּוֹכִיָּה weeping, Lam. i. 16. So also, מְמֵחָם things full of marrow, Is. xxv. 6. In all other instances, ה will be substituted for either ו, or י, and then will be subject to elision by the general rules affecting the letters אהוי.

9. In the preterite tense, therefore, of all the species, ה־ will be the termination for the third person singular masculine, instead of י־ or ו־; ת of the feminine, just as it is in the feminine nouns in construction. In all the others, י will represent the third radical: as, גָּלָה he revealed, discovered; fem. גָּלְתָה; 2 pers. masc. גָּלִיתָ, id. fem. גָּלִית; 1 pers. com. גָּלִיתִי; pl. 3 pers. com. גָּלוּ, for גָּלְהוּ , or גָּלְיוּ , Art. 73. ; 2 masc. גָּלִיתָם , id. fem. גָּלִיתָן ;

1 com. גָּלִינוּ .

10. It must be remembered, however, that in every other species (· ·) is generally the vowel which precedes ' in the Preterite. Even in Kal, (· ·) would be more agreeable with the analogy than (·), because גָּלִיתָ &c. should be, according to the general paradigm, גָּלִיתָּ , which by Art. 87. 3. would become גָּלִיתָּ : but, as (· ·) preceding the ' , may also become (·) Art. 87. 4, this may have been adopted in this species.

11. The Present tense, of every species here, ends in ה־ ,* as do also the Participles. The Imperative has ה־ , but this is the form of construction assumed by all nouns ending in ה־ (Art. 143. 5.), and such will the Imperative generally be.

12. The Infinitives follow the general paradigm, and end in ה־ in the masculine ; as, רָאָה , and רָאָהּ seeing. † The feminine form always ends in ת־ ; as, גָּלוֹת , or גָּלוֹתָּ (for גָּלוֹתָּ Art. 87. 1.).

13. The agent, or active participle, will end in ה־ ; as, גָּלָהּ ; fem. גָּלָהּ (for גָּלָהּ Art. 73.). The patient, or passive participle, ends in וי־ ; as, גָּלוּי , form פָּקוּד , regularly where the final י is quiescent, fem. גָּלוּיָהּ , pl. גָּלוּיִים and גָּלוּיוֹת : here י appears as the proper radical letter. ‡

* Except the 2 pers. sing. fem. and pl. masc. and fem., as also the 3 masc. and fem. pl., where ה is dropped, or changed to ו־ ; as, 3 m. יִגְלֶה , f. יִגְלֶהּ ; 2 m. תִּגְלֶה , f. תִּגְלֶהּ (for תִּגְלֶהּ Art. 73.); 1 com. אִגְלֶה . Pl. 3 m. יִגְלוּ (for יִגְלוּ Art. 73.), f. תִּגְלוּ ; 2 m. תִּגְלוּ (for תִּגְלוּ as before), f. תִּגְלוּהָ ; 1 com. נִגְלֶה . In the same manner are the Present tenses of all the species conjugated.

† In acquiring, 2 Sam. xxiv. 24, and conceiving and meditating, Is. lix. 13, Schröder thinks we have a final וי for the last radical letter: but this is far from being certain; קָוֶה, דָּוֶה, and דָּוֶהּ, will terminate regularly according to our paradigm; and, omitting the final ה by Art. 72, we shall have the forms, קָו, דָּו, and דָּוָה. The other example, viz. חָפֵי חֹסֵי Hos. v. 9, adduced by him, is probably a plural noun in construction.

‡ In Is. iii. 16, we have a various reading, viz. נְשֻׁאוֹת, and נְשֻׁאוֹתָהּ, as also

On Verbs having an ם, for the Third Radical Letter.

203. The only departure from the general paradigm in verbs of this kind is, in the ם becoming quiescent in the preceding vowel; as, Pret. Kal. םָצָה, for םָצָה, he found, f. םָצָהָ, 2 m. םָצָהָת, f. םָצָהָת, 1 com. םָצָהָתִי; plur. com. םָצָהָו, 2 m. םָצָהָתִם, f. םָצָהָתִן, 1 com. םָצָהָנּוּ.

2. The Present tense is, םָצָה, םָצָה, and so on.

In every other species, in the persons of both tenses, except the third singular and plural of the Preterite of both genders, those of Pūhál, and of the Present of Hiphhál, the vowel preceding ם is (·). As Niphhál, 3 m. םָצָה, f. םָצָהָ, 2 m. םָצָהָת, f. םָצָהָת, 1 com. םָצָהָתִי; plur. com. םָצָהָו &c. Pres. tense, םָצָה &c.; Hiph. םָצָהָ, f. םָצָהָה, 2 masc. םָצָהָת &c. Pres. 3 m. םָצָהָ, f. םָצָהָת &c. In Pihél and Hithpāhél all is regular. In Pūhál we have, Pret. 3 pers. masc. םָצָה, f. םָצָהָ; 2 m. םָצָהָת, f. םָצָהָת &c. Pres. 3 m. םָצָה, f. םָצָהָ; 2 m. םָצָהָת, f. םָצָהָתִי &c. and so on throughout.

We have, however, םָצָהָ: it shall be changed, Eccl. viii. 1, where, according to Kimkhi, the vowels belong to the root םָצָהָ. Mikhlol, fol. קעד.

3. In the Infinitives and Participles, a contraction mostly takes place; as, םָצָהָת, or םָצָהָת, for םָצָהָת, or םָצָהָת, bearing; root םָצָהָ; םָצָהָת, for םָצָהָת; root םָצָהָ finding. We also have םָצָהָת. So also םָצָהָת, for םָצָהָת hating, form םָצָהָת, root םָצָהָ; םָצָהָת, or םָצָהָת, calling; םָצָהָת, or םָצָהָת, filling (Art. 87. 5.).

in 1 Sam. xxv. 18; םָצָהָת, and םָצָהָת, no reliance, therefore, can be placed on Schröder's remark, that these are words retaining their primitive radical ם. So likewise םָצָהָ Job xli. 24, may be a verb, and םָצָהָ Ib. xv. 22, for םָצָהָ by Art. 72. By the same rule we have םָצָהָ clear, innocent, for םָצָהָ &c.

4. Some verbs here, as in the other classes, have (·) for the last vowel of the Preterite of Kal: as, יָרָא he feared; מָלֵא he filled; שָׂנֵא he hated; צָמֵא he thirsted, which they will retain throughout that tense, where other verbs have (τ): as, 3 m. יָרָא, f. יָרְאָה; 2 m. יָרְאֵת, f. יָרְאֵת; 1 com. יָרְאֵת; and so on. In every other tense and species, they are conjugated like מָצֵא.

5. For the rules and examples relating to Apocope, when happening to these or any other verbs, see Artt. 74. 119. 3—8.

LECTURE XIII.

ON THOSE VERBS WHICH HAVE THEIR SECOND AND THIRD RADICAL LETTERS THE SAME.

204. It has been laid down as a rule, that whenever the last two letters of any primitive word happen to be the same, one of them may be dropped for the sake of euphony (Art. 77.) There are cases, however, in which this will not take place: these we shall notice first, and then proceed to shew in what instances, and in what way, our rule applies.

2. First, then, in the reduplicated species, i. e. in Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél, the middle radical letter will either receive Dāgēsh forte, as in בָּקַד, or, the reduplication will take place on the measure בּוֹרַד, בּוֹרְד, or הִתְבּוֹרַד; or, lastly, on one or other of the reduplicated forms (Art. 197.). In these cases, therefore, no defect will take place.

3. In the next place, the following examples follow the general paradigm; as, יָזַם he intended, Deut. xix. 19; יָזַמְתִּי I intended, Zech. viii. 14; פִּלְלֵי they finished, Ezek. xxvii. 11; סָבְרוּ they surrounded, Eccles. xii. 5, &c.; עָשָׂתָה it decayed, Ps. vi. 8; חָנֵן being gracious, Isa. xxx. 19.

4. The Participial nouns of Kal; as, סָבַב surrounding, Gen. ii. 13, pl. סֹבְבִים 2 Chron. iv. 3; אָרַר cursed, Gen. xxvii. 29, pl. אֲרָרִים, Josh. ix. 23, &c. r. אָרַר.

5. In some instances, the Infinitive also takes the form פִּינֹד; as, לְסָבַב for surrounding, Numb. xxi. 4;—לְחַמֵּם for warming, Isa. xlvii. 14, form פִּקֵּד, with (-) changed to (τ) on account of the pause, (Art. 123. 5.).

6. Again, in no case, in which either the first or third radical letter of any root is subject to elision or contraction, will our rule take place; as, in the first case, יִרְדּוּן for יִנְדְּדוּן they flee, Ps. lxxviii. 13; הִיָּלֵל he exclaimed, root יָלַל; הִחַתַּתִּי I broke to pieces, Jer. xlix. 37, for הִחַתַּתִּי. So, חָיָה, for חָיָה. But, when this is not the case, and the last radical retains its power as a consonant, one of the two is dropped: as, חָיָה, for חָיָה, he lived, Gen. v. 5.

7. Whenever, therefore, one or other of these exceptions does not take place, one, of the two last radical letters of these verbs, will regularly be rejected in both the tenses—in the Imperative, and occasionally in the Infinitive of Kal,—the whole of the species Niphhál, Hiphhál, and Hophhál.

8. The most convenient method, perhaps, of stating this defect will be by saying, that the second radical with the preceding vowel, or Shěvá, is rejected; as, סָבַב, for סָבַב; Niph. נִסְבַּב, for נִסְבַּב, &c. which will generally hold.

9. In both tenses, then, of the species Kal, Niphhál, Hiphhál, and Hophhál, as also in their Infinitives, Imperatives, and Participles,—excepting those already mentioned,—will the second radical letter of all such roots be rejected; but, whenever any asyllabic augment takes place, this rejected letter will be restored by the operation of Dāgēsh forte (Art. 77.).

10. If, in the next place, we except the first and second persons of both numbers and genders, throughout all the Preterites of these species, the abbreviated pronouns, which are asyllabic, will be the same in these as in other verbs. But, in all the first and second persons of these preterites, the vowel i is introduced, as in Art. 201. 6. between the root and the pronouns; e. g. taking קָבַב for the root, 3 m. קָבַב, f. קָבְבָה, 2 m. קָבַבְתָּ, f. קָבַבְתְּ; 1 com. קָבַבְתִּי; pl. קָבַבְתֶּם. So in Niphhál; 3 m. נָקַב, f. נָקְבָה, 2 m. נָקַבְתָּ, f. נָקַבְתְּ, and so on.

11. It should be observed, that, as the first letter of the root in the Present necessarily commences a syllable, the preformative will either take Shěvá (:), or a perfect vowel. It will take Shěvá when the accent is on the third letter, or farther from the beginning of the word; in all other cases, the vowel will be perfect: as Pres. Kal, 3 pers. m. יָקַב, fem. יָקְבָה; pl. m. יָקַבּוּ, f. יָקַבְינָה, &c. Niphhál, Pret. 3 m. נָקַב, fem. נָקְבָה, 2 m. נָקַבְתָּ, f. נָקַבְתְּ, &c. Hiphhíl, Pret. 3 m. הָקַב, f. הָקְבָה, 2 m. הָקַבְתָּ, f. הָקַבְתְּ; 3. pl. com. הָקַבּוּ, 2 m. הָקַבְתֶּם, f. הָקַבְתֶּן, &c. Pres. 3 m. sing. יָקַב, f. יָקְבָה, 2 m. יָקַבְתָּ, f. יָקַבְתְּ; 1 com. יָקַבְתִּי, 3 pl. m. יָקַבּוּ, f. יָקַבְינָה, &c.

12. It should be remembered, that the y, usually found between the second and third radical, and which is considered as characteristic of the Hiphhíl species, never appears in these verbs.

13. In Hophhal, y is inserted after the characteristic h, in order to complete the initial syllable; after which, this species is conjugated like the preceding : as, Pret. 3 m. sing. הוֹסַב, f. הוֹסְבָה, 2 m. הוֹסְבוֹת, f. הוֹסְבוֹת; 1 com. הוֹסְבוֹתַי, &c. Present : 3. sing. m. יוֹסַב, f. תוֹסַב 2 m. תוֹסַב, f. תוֹסְבִי; pl. תוֹסְבֵינָה. In the last, and every similar, case in this species, the first vowel is necessarily immutable : it must, therefore, remain perfect. So in the Imperative, and Participle, הוֹסַב, f. הוֹסְבִי, &c. מוֹסַב, f. מוֹסְבָה, &c.

14. In these, as in all other verbs, the final vowel of both the tenses in Kal may be (-), (·), or (י). The root above given exemplifies (-) for the last vowel of the Preterite, and (י) for that of the Present. The only variety, however, which occurs is, in having (י) for the last vowel of the Preterite, and (-) for that of the Present : as, רָבוּ they cast, of רָבַב Gen. xlix. 23; הָלַה he hath devolved upon, Ps. xxii. 9. So in the Infinitives and Imperatives, which are generally constructed on the same form with the Present, with (-) : as, הָלַל, for הָלַל devolve thou, Ps. cxix. 22. Present : יִקְלוּ they shall be vile, for יִקְלְלוּ 1 Sam. ii. 30. In Hiphhāl also we have occasionally (-) : as, הִקְלַל he made light, for הִקְלַל Is. viii. 23. Participle, מִצֵּל giving shade, for מִצֵּל Ezek. xxxi. 3.

15. In the species Pihél, Pūhál, and Hithpāhél, the forms assumed for conjugation must be determined by usage, i. e. whether they are to be פִּקַד, פִּוּדַד, פִּוּדַד, פִּוּדַד, הִתְפַּקַד, הִתְפַּוּדַד, or any other of the reduplicated forms (Art. 197.); and, when this is done, the process will be analogous to that of the general paradigm.

16. Of the verbs terminating in נ, or ת, enough has been said, Artt. 198. 10; 188. 23. 26. 28.

On the doubly Defective Verbs : i. e. Verbs in which more than one of the Radical Letters may be subject to quiescence or elision, by the operation of the preceding Rules.

205. Roots may be supposed to exist consisting of such letters, as may all be subject to elision or quiescence, when occurring in certain situations ; but, that they all should be subject, at the same time, to such rule, the nature of the case makes impossible : because, quiescence can take place, only when some homogeneous vowel precedes ; and this presupposes that such vowel will be enounced by a consonant. And, in the case of one of the two last radical letters of a verb being dropped, it is also supposed that some preceding vowel is enounced, but which cannot be done without the influence of a preceding consonant.

2. Hence it will follow, that such part of any root as is unaffected by the influence of a preceding vowel will remain unaltered : and also, that no two contiguous letters can, at the same time, be subject to defect by the process of conjugation, if we except the operation of apocope, and those cases in which any of the ׀׀׀ letters are dropped, as unnecessary to the pronunciation. But, when the first and last are subject to quiescence or elision, the middle radical letter, be that what it may, will generally retain its character as a consonant, and may receive a Dāgēsh forte ; or, if not capable of being doubled, may be compensated in the preceding vowel being made perfect.

3. In this case, therefore, as in all the preceding ones, the general paradigm holds good : but, as the concurrence of certain sounds is incompatible with the pronunciation of the Hebrews, some changes will take place in order to avoid this difficulty. Example, however, is always easier to be understood than precept; we shall now give, therefore, a few examples of all the cases that occur; which, after Schröder, we shall divide into three classes.

First Class.

4. This class will have the first, and third radical, letters subject to elision, or quiescence. And first, both are subject to elision, as נתן he gave, placed; נגן he played on the psaltery; נהת he descended: which will drop either the נ, or ת, or both, by rules already detailed (Art. 198. 10; 188. 23. 28. &c.): e. g. in Niphhál, Pret. 2 pers. נהתת, נהתת, נהתתי, for ננהתנת, ננהתנת; and so of the rest.

5. The first will be subject to quiescence, and the third to elision, as in נאמן he was faithful; ישן he slept; נאפת, or נפת, he was handsome. Here the ך will be rejected, as before, whenever it is affected by a final Shévá (:) by analogy; the final ת, by Art. 188. 23; and the initial י, or נ, will be quiescent, according to the rules detailed in Artt. 199. 200.

6. In the next place, the first will be subject to elision, and the third to quiescence, in such roots as נשא he bore; as, Present tense, 3 p. m. Kal, נשא for נשא (Art. 198.); Imp. נשא; Inf. שוא, שאת, or שאת. Niph. Pret. and Part. נשא. Hiphál, Pret. השיא. Hoph., השא: also in roots terminating in ה, for ו, or י: as, נטה he extended; Pres. Kal, נטה; and, by apocope (Art. 74. 2.), נט, or נט. But here, the Imperative and Infinitive are sometimes written at length: as, נטה extend, Exod. viii. 1, &c.; נטות declining, Numb. xxii. 26. In Niphhál, נטו, for ננטו, and, with a pause accent (Art.

119. 11.), נִטְּיוּ are they extended, Numb. xxiv. 6. Hiphhíl, הִטְּתוּ, 3 sing. fem. with the pronoun וּ, for הִנְטְתָהּרוּ she subdued him, Prov. vii. 21. Pres. הִטְּ for הִטְּהָ, by apocope, incline, Ps. cxli. 4, and Imper. הִטְּ for הִטְּהָ incline thou, Ps. xvii. 6.

7. Again, verbs having both the first and third radical letter subject to quiescence; as, יִתָּא (for יִתָּא, contraction of יִתָּא Art. 87. 5, from the root אִתָּא) he will come, Deut. xxxiii. 21; יִאֲפֶה (for יִאֲפֶה Ib. from the root אֲפֶה) he will bake: and 1 Sam. xxviii. 24, תִּפְּהוּ she bakes it, where the first and last radicals are dropped; יֵצֵא he will go out, for יֵצֵא, root יֵצֵא. Imper. יֵצֵא. Infin. יֵצֵא, יֵצֵא, יֵצֵא, and יֵצֵאת. So יִרָא he feared; Pres. Kal, יִרָא, or יִרָא; Infin. לִירָא, for לִירָא. Niphhál, Pret. or Part. נִירָא; יִרָה he cast, Pres. Kal, יִרָה. Hence נִירָם we shoot them, Numb. xxi. 30. In Hiphhíl, יִירָה, and, by apocope, יִירָה he shot, 2 Kings xiii. 17: יִירָה he grieved; Pret. Hiphhíl, הִירָה; Pres. pl. תִּירָו; and Job xix. 2: תִּירָו, with a paragogic Nún (Art. 120. 8.). Hophhál, הִירָה, whence תִּירָה pain. Participle of Niphhál, נִירָה persons (fem.) pained, Lam. i. 4, &c.

Second Class.

8. The second class of doubly defective roots includes those which have a medial וּ, or י, subject to quiescence; and the third radical letter subject to elision; as, בִּין, or בִּין, he understood; לוּן he lodged; שׁוּת he placed; as, שָׁתָּ, for שָׁוּתָּ, thou hast placed; לָנוּ we have lodged, for לָנוּנוּ (Artt. 76 : 188. 23.). But, in these verbs, the final ׀ is not universally rejected; as, בִּנְתָהּ thou hast understood, Ps. cxxxix. 2.

Third Class.

9. The third class comprehends those verbs, which have ו, or י, for the middle radical, and נ, or ה, for the third; each of which may be subject to quiescence, and in certain cases to rejection.

10. Of the first sort, בוא entering in; נוּא being crude, and קוּא, or קיא, vomiting, are examples which may thus be conjugated.

PRET.

KAL.

PRES.

3 p. m. sing. יִבֵּא, f. תִּבְּאֵ; 2 m. תִּבְּאֵ, f. תִּבְּאֵי; 1 com. אֵבֵא. Pl. 3 m. יִבְּאוּ, &c.

IMP.

INFIN.

בּוּא, or בּא, בּיא, בּיאָה.

PART.

Masc. sing. בּא, f. בּאָה. Pl. בּאִים, f. בּאִות.

11. In those cases, in which Khōlēm would accompany the middle radical, ו may be inserted or not: as, יבּוּא, תּבּוּא &c., or יבּא, תּבּא &c. And, in others, where Kāméts attends the radical נ, נ is occasionally omitted (Art. 72.): as, בּכּי, for בּכּני we came in, 1 Sam. xxv. 8.

In Hiphhíl we have, Pret. הִבּיֵא, הִבּיֵאת, or הִבּיֵאוּת, &c. Pres. יִבּיֵא, or יִבּיֵא, or יִבּיֵא, תִּבּיֵא, and so on. Infinitive, הִבּיֵא, הִבּיֵא, and with נ dropped, הִבּי. Part. מִבּיֵא, or מְבִי. Pret. Hophhál, הוֹבֵאָה, הוֹבֵאָה, הוֹבֵאָתָּ, הוֹבֵאָתָּ, הוֹבֵאָתִי. Pres. יוֹבֵא, יוֹבֵא &c. Part. מוֹבֵא &c.

12. Examples, in which both a medial ו, or י, and final ה, are at the same time quiescent, seldom occur, if we except those forms of the Present which are said to be subject to apocope: as, יִהְיֶה, for יִהְיֶה he shall, or may be; so יִהְיֶה for יִהְיֶה by apocope (Art. 74. 2.) and having a paragogic א; root הִוָּה, for הִוָּה, Eccles. xi. 3. In all other cases, the middle radical letter retains its character as a consonant, the third only being subject to quiescence: as,

PRET.

3 p. m. sing. הִוָּה, f. הִוָּתָּה; 2 m. הִוָּתָּתָּ, f. הִוָּתָּתָּ; 1 com. הִוָּתָּתִי.
3 p. com. pl. הִוָּתָּתָּ, 2 m. הִוָּתָּתָּם, f. הִוָּתָּתָּן; 1 com. הִוָּתָּתִי.

PRES.

3 p. m. sing. יִהְיֶה, once יִהְיֶה, apoc. יִהְיֶה, f. יִהְיֶה, apoc. יִהְיֶה, &c.

INFIN.

הִוָּה, הִוָּה, constr. הִוָּתָּה, הִוָּתָּה.

IMPER.

2 p. m. sing. הִוָּתָּה, id. fem. הִוָּתָּה.

PART.

Masc. sing. הוֹבֵאָה Ens: whence, probably, the Divine name יְהוָה, lit. Being. (Artt. 139. 7. 159. 2.)

13. Verbs of this kind are seldom found conjugated beyond the first or second species; and perhaps never throughout those.

It must be borne in mind that, in any of these verbs, the paragogic א or ו, may occur in their usual places—that any of the אהוי letters may be dropped, or not, when the preceding vowels will preserve the pronunciation of the word,—that the second persons singular, of the Preterite, may have ה added: as, הִוָּתָּתָּ thou gavest,—and, that Dāgēsh forte may occasionally be omitted, and a compensation made, by the preceding vowel becoming perfect. But, as the Dictionaries and Concordances will always shew in what cases these take place, it will be unnecessary to note them all down here.

On the Inseparable Pronouns when attached to Verbs.

206. When the inseparable pronouns are attached to nouns, the meaning of the compound will, as we have seen (Art. 145. 1.), be propriety, possession, or the like ; because in no other way can nouns, and personal pronouns, be construed together ; but, when the same pronouns are combined with verbs, which are already compounded with pronouns by the process of conjugation ; then, if the verbs are transitive, these further affixed pronouns must be considered as complementary of the signification of such verbs, and as placed in the objective case : but, if such verbs be intransitive, then must they be translated by introducing some preposition, or other word, explanatory of the connexion thus formed ; as, נִדְלַנִי he grew up (for) me, or (with) me, Job xxxi. 18 ; קִדְשָׁתִּיךָ I am holy, (as to) thee, i. e. I am holier than thou, Is. lxxv. 5. So יִגְרָךְ shall dwell (with) thee, Ps. v. 5. We shall have occasion to speak more particularly on this subject when we come to the Syntax.

207. The next question will be, How will the addition of these pronouns affect the vowels and consonants of the verbs ? Generally, having the vowels of the affixed pronouns given, those which precede, and are mutable, will be regulated by the general laws prevailing in the nouns ; that is to say, any mutable vowel, situated at some distance from the accent, will be rejected, while any perfect vowel, deprived of the accent and followed immediately by a consonant, will be changed for its corresponding imperfect one. But, as a table will make all plain, we shall now give one with the regular triliteral verb : verbs subject to any defect will receive the same affixes, due attention being paid to their particular characters, as given above.

Remarks.

209. It will be seen, by the Table, that every possible combination of the verb with the pronoun thus affixed is not given: I visited myself, thou visitedst thyself, and the like, would rather fall under the province of one of the reciprocal species: as, נִבְקֵדְתִי, or הִתְבְּקֵדְתִי, in Niphhāl, or Hithpāhēl, and would not, therefore, be made in Kal by affixing the pronouns; but, which of these species is to be adopted, custom alone can determine. We have, nevertheless, a very few examples, in which this combination is made in Kal: as, עָשִׂיתָנִי אֲנִי I made myself, or, (for) myself, Ezek. xxix. 3, in which, the repetition of the pronoun seems to add some emphasis to the passage.

2. With respect to the vowels of the root, it will immediately be perceived, that they are subject to the same laws which prevail in the nouns, when receiving similar additions. In the asyllabic affixes, for example, as the last consonant of the root must be taken in order to enounce the syllable, the preceding vowel must either be perfect, or rejected. But neither of the vowels of the root in Kal is immutable; and, as the first is the farthest removed from the accent, it is rejected as in the nouns; and we have פָּקַדְתָּנִי, just as we have יָדְבַרְתָּ (Art. 153. 2.). In like manner, when the affix is syllabic, we have the first vowel rejected, and the second made imperfect, as often as the accent is with the affix: as, פָּקַדְתָּנִי, just as we have יָדְבַרְתָּ in the nouns. This necessarily holds good in the Present tense, the Imperative, Infinitive, and Participles; as also in all the other species Niphhál, Pihél, &c., as well as in the defective verbs, nouns, and participles: due respect being had to the etymology of the words.

3. In a few instances the affix of the first person has (ַ) instead of (-): as, שָׁמְעָה עָנְנִי he hath heard me, Ps. cxviii. 5; בָּזְדָּתָנִי thou hast despised me, 2 Sam. xii. 10. But in the last case, this seems to have been brought about by the influence of the accent (Art. 120. 7.).

4. For the feminine affix תָּנִי, we sometimes have תָּנִי; as, קָרָאתָנִי he hath called thee (fem.), Is. liv. 6. So בָּרָאתָנִי thy being created, Ezek. xxviii. 15; which are generally thought to be Chaldaisms. In the last case, however, the pause-accent will be sufficient to account for the anomaly (Art. 123. 4.).

5. When, however, the accent is on any occasion drawn back, the vowel accompanying the affix will necessarily be imperfect; as, אָהַבְתָּנִי she hath loved thee (fem.); גָּנַבְתָּנִי she hath stolen them, &c. Art. 119. 3. cor.

6. It should also be observed, that, whenever the root ends in either ך, or ך־ by the process of conjugation, &c., the affixes are simply added; as, פָּקַדְתָּנִי without any previous vowel or Shévá; and that, when the affixes are found both in the syllabic, and asyllabic, forms, the syllabic must be taken in these cases: as, פָּקַדְתָּהּ, not פָּקַדְתָּהּ they visited her; פָּקַדְתָּהּ, not פָּקַדְתָּהּ they visited him. The reason is obvious: one vowel following another would be unutterable; and, in order to avoid this, a consonant must be introduced.

7. In פָּקַדְתָּ, the terminating vowel gives place to the vowel of the affix; as, פָּקַדְתָּ מֵי, thou visitedst me.

8. The form פָּקַדְתָּ, is found in a few instances with the pronominal affixes; as, הִשָּׁבַעְתָּנוּ, thou (fem.) hast adjured us, Josh. ii. 17, 20: but, most frequently, the form פָּקַדְתָּי is taken (see Art. 188. 25.): as, פָּקַדְתָּי מֵי, thou (fem.) hast visited me. When this is the case, the context alone must determine whether the verb is of the first or second person. In a few cases also, (·) takes the place of (·); as, הוֹרַדְתָּנוּ, thou (fem.) hast caused us to descend, Josh. ii. 18.

9. The second persons masculine and feminine plural take the forms פָּקַדְתָּם, instead of פָּקַדְתָּם, or פָּקַדְתָּן, before the affixed pronouns; as, פָּקַדְתָּם יָי, ye (com.) visited me. In this case, the latent pronoun seems to be of the Chaldaic form, אַתָּם you, instead of the Hebrew one אַתְּם, or אַתְּן.

On the Vowels of the Present Tense, the Imperative, Infinitive, and Participles.

210. As the terminating vowel of the Present tense is mutable in the regular trilateral verb in Kal, it will be rejected upon receiving any asyllabic affix; as, יִפְקֹדְנִי, he visits me; but, when the affix is syllabic, it will be changed for its correspondent imperfect vowel; as, יִפְקֹדְךָ, he visits thee, &c., due regard being had to the vowel as determined by usage: i. e. whether it be (וּ), (-), (·), or (·), and to the following consonant, whether it be a guttural or not.

In a few instances, the vowels proper for the affixes of the preterite tense, are found with those of the present; as, יִשְׁבִּיעַנִי, he will fill me, Job ix. 18; יִפְקֹדְנוּ, he will acknowledge us, Is. lxiii. 16; יִנְקֹדְנוּ, we will strike, or pierce, them, Numb. xxi. 30, &c. And, vice versá, those proper for the present, with the preterite; as, יִפְקֹדְנִי, he hath corrected me, Is. viii. 11.

2. These observations will apply to the affixing of the pronouns to the present tenses of verbs of every species and sort.

3. In the Imperatives, however, which receive no preformatives, the vowels will be regulated as they are in the nouns (which in reality the Imperatives all are); and, as the form proper for construction will take the affixed pronouns, the ultimate, or penultimate, vowels alone can be subject to change, as in the nouns; e. g. שְׁלַחְנִי send me, from שָׁלַח send: שְׁמַעְנִי hear ye me, from שָׁמַע hear. So יָדַעְתָּהוּ know thou him, from יָדַע.

4. Those terminating in (ו), have been thought subject to a transposition; as, שְׁמַרְנִי keep thou me, from שָׁמַר. I believe, however, that שָׁמַר, is the primitive word taken in these cases; whence we shall regularly have, שְׁמַרְנִי, &c.

5. The Infinitives are subject to the same general laws with the Imperatives of Kal, and these also prevail in every species of the Segolate nouns; i. e. we must inquire, in the first place, what form of the primitive has been taken, and then add our affixes, &c. just as we do to those nouns. Examples; מְלִכּוֹ his reigning, from מָלַךְ, or rather מָלַךְ, רַדְפִי my persecuting, from רָדַף, or רָדַף. So מְאַסְקֶם, for מְאַסְקֶם (Art. 106. 2.) your spurning, from מָאָס or מָאָס; הַרְבֵּבְם, for הַרְבֵּבְם your drawing near, from הָרַב, or הָרַב. Sometimes obliquely (Art. 96. 2.): as, הוֹצֵרְם your reaping, from הָצִיר, or הָצִיר.

6. It may be observed, that, with the affixes ה-, כ-, and נ-, both forms are found; as, אֲכַלְתָּ thy eating, Gen. ii. 17; אֲכַלְתֶּם your eating, Gen. iii. 5; שָׁמַעְתָּ thy hearing, 2 Sam. v. 24; שָׁמַעְתֶּם your hearing, Josh. vi. 5. But it seldom happens that the same word is found in both forms: which seems to shew, that in one case, one primitive form has been preferred, and in another, another.

7. Infinitives of other forms are subject to the general laws which prevail in nouns of the same forms.

8. Nothing further need be said on the manner, in which the participles receive the pronominal affixes. They are nothing more than nouns; and are, therefore, subject to the same variations with them, as may be seen in the examples given of the several species of the conjugation.

On the mode of affixing the Pronouns to the different parts of the Defective Verbs.

211. It will be quite unnecessary to detain the Student long on this subject. He will only have to bear in mind, what has been laid down in our rules on the mutable and quiescent characters of the letters קֶטֶף ,—on נ , as occasionally rejected,—on roots having the second and third radical letter the same, and hence occasionally losing one, which will, however, return whenever circumstances will allow it, under the form of Dāgēsh forte,—and on the vowels, as regulated by the occurrence of gutturals, the addition of syllabic, or asyllabic augments, and the like; all of which has been abundantly exemplified in the preceding pages. We shall now, therefore, take leave of this subject.—The following are tables, intended to show the full conjugations of the different kinds of verbs, in illustration of the rules detailed and exemplified in our present, and preceding Lecture.

These Tables have been taken from the “Lehrgebäude der Hebraischen Sprache” of Dr. Gesenius, with some slight alterations. Page 438, seq.

LECTURE XIV.

ON THE SYNTAX.

212. IN our endeavour to lay down the principles of the Hebrew Syntax, we shall first consider the nature and construction of propositions; secondly, those of their several parts; and, lastly, shew how these have been combined, according to the Authors of the Accents.

2. In the first place, then, every proposition will be either general, or particular. A general proposition is that, which contains a complete sentence expressive of some general truth: as, "Men die." A particular, or singular, proposition (as it is sometimes called), expresses only that, which relates to particular individuals: as, "The men die." Hence,

3. When any general proposition is enounced, in the Hebrew, the word or words used for the purpose of enouncing the Subject will, generally, be indefinite; i. e. will not have the definite article, or be otherwise limited;* while that which is intended to be the most impressive, will stand first in the order; e. g. זָרַע לְעֹלָם

* In such expressions as, הַיְוָה הַקָּדוֹשׁ הַמְּבֹרָךְ the law of the Lord is perfect, &c., Ps. xix. 8, &c., although the truth is general, the proposition is not so; because it relates to one particular law, not to any general one.

The subject and predicate are, according to the Grammarians of Arabia, two words so placed, as to be independent of each other in a grammatical or formal point of view, their relation being purely logical. The author of the Hidāyat oon Nahve (p. ۳۶) says, المبتدأ والخبر هما اسمان مَجْرُوران من العوامل اللفظية أحدهما مسندٌ إليه ويسمى المبتدأ والثاني مسندٌ به ويسمى الخبر نحو زيدٌ قائمٌ والعامل فيها معنويٌّ יִקְצֹר-אֶן (any one)* sowing iniquity, reaps vanity, Prov. xxii. 8; מֵיִם עֲמֻקִּים עֵצָה בְּלֵב-אִישׁ (as) DEEP WATERS (is) counsel in the heart of man, Ib. xx. 5.

4. And, on the contrary, when any particular proposition is to be enounced, the word or words, expressive of its subject, must be made definite: as, הַשֶּׁמֶשׁ יָצָא (as to) THE SUN, IT HAD ARISEN, Gen. xix. 23; פְּקוּדֵי יְהוָה יִשְׂרָיִם THE PRECEPTS OF JEHOVAH (are) right, Ps. xix. 9. This holds good, whether the proposition be affirmative or negative.

5. Propositions will also be either Incomplex, or Complex; Simple, or Compound.

6. Incomplex propositions (which may be either general or particular), are those which contain no qualifying, or otherwise modifying, words in connexion with either the subject or predicate. Complex propositions are those which have such words. Of the first, יִבְנֶה בַּיִת a وهو الابتداءُ “The subject and predicate are two words, construed independently of any GRAMMATICAL government. The first is that of which something is predicated, and is called المبتدأ or, the beginning: the second is that, by which this predication is made, and is termed الخبر the enouncer: as, Zaid (is) STANDING. The government of them is regulated by the sense (or, is logical), that is, by the beginning,” or subject matter of the discourse.

This conjunction of words is termed by them, الكلام, and is thus described by Ibn ul Hájib: ما تضمن كلمتين بالاسناد ولا يتأتى ذلك الا في اسمين او في فعل واسم “It is that which comprehends two words in connexion with each other; which cannot happen except in the concurrence of two nouns, or of a verb and noun.” The word constituting the subject (المبتدأ) is, according to El Hazeri, placed first, on account of the importance which it holds in the estimation of the speaker or writer.” See Commentary on the Agrumia by Schnabell, Amsterdam, 1755, pp. ۴۰ ۴۱ house is built, Prov. xxiv. 3, is an example. Of the second, בִּתְחִלָּה יִבְנֶה בַּיִת, in, or by, wisdom is a house built, Ib.

7. Simple propositions are those, which have no supplementary, or subordinate, parts. Compound propositions are those which have such parts. Example of the first, בִּתְחִלָּה יִבְנֶה בַּיִת in wisdom is a house built: of the second, וַיִּזְעַק הַמֶּלֶךְ וְשָׂרָיו וְכָל-הַקְּהָל, so the king, and his princes, and the whole congregation, took counsel, 2 Chron. xxx. 2. In this case the Subject only, is compound: others occur in which the predicate is also compound.

8. We now proceed to point out the relation of the Subject with the Predicate; which is the same in every sort of proposition. We shall next shew, how the complex, and compound, parts of propositions are constructed, i. e. on what principles their several parts are connected together.

On the Predicate of Propositions.

213. The predicate, of any proposition, may consist of nouns attributive, or substantive (if expressive of character, &c.), or of verbs, or pronouns, as in other languages.

2. Every proposition, whether general or particular, will,—unless something particular require the contrary,—have its predicate indefinite. (Verbs, of course, when in the predicate, do not come under this rule, because it cannot be said of them, that they are either definite or indefinite): e. g. זֹנָה עֲמוּקָה זֹנָה a whore (is) a deep ditch, Prov. xxiii. 27.

3. Here, זֹנָה, the Subject being indefinite, the proposition will be general: and, as the rule requires the Predicate also to be indefinite, this becomes a case in which some ambiguity might arise, as to which of the substantives is the Subject of the proposition.

The sense requires here, that the last word זֹכָה be the Subject, although שְׂוִיחָה a ditch, precedes: the sentence may be thus rendered, (as) a deep ditch (is) a whore: the particle ׀ being omitted by the ellipse. See my Lexicon under כ, p. 280. seq.

4. Examples of particular propositions: וְהָאָרֶץ הָיְתָה וְיְהוָה and (as to) THE EARTH (it) existed,—Gen. i. 2; יְהוָה
* מְלִךְ Jehovah (is) King, Ps. x. 16. With a verb: בָּרָא
אֱלֹהִים HE CREATED (i. e.) GOD, Gen. i. 1.

5. When, however, any thing very specific is intended to be enounced by the predicate, it will be made definite: as, יְהוָה הוּא הָאֱלֹהִים יְהוָה הוּא הָאֱלֹהִים Jehovah he is THE GOD, Jehovah he is THE GOD, 1 Kings xviii. 39.

6. Here, as both the Subject and Predicate are made definite; and unless a pronoun (as הוּא in this instance) were introduced in the place of the logical copula, or, the construction should otherwise contribute to explain the intention of the writer, an ambiguity would arise, as to which of the words, so defined, should be considered the Subject: e. g. אֲנִי־הוּא הַמְדַבֵּר I (am) he who speaketh, Is. lii. 6. Or taking הוּא as the logical copula, I am the speaker. But, by inverting the proposition, we shall have, (as to) the speaker, it is I. In these cases, however, the sense afforded is generally the same, whichever way we read the proposition. In others, where it is not, we have no other resource than the order of the construction, or the general sense of the context, to guide us.

7. From this, and the case above noticed (Art. 213. 3.), some difficulties will occasionally arise in construing the Hebrew text, particularly in the books of Job, the Psalms, the Proverbs, and the Prophets, where the style is often sententious, and the order inverted.

It may be remarked, that, as the Hebrews have no abstract verb which can stand for our logical copula is, and, as any pronoun may stand in the Predicate of a sentence; due regard must be had to the Subject of the context, in order to ascertain which of the pronouns,

* Exod. xxxiv. 6, &c. יְהוָה יְהוָה אֵל רַחוּם וְרַחוּם יְהוָה Jehovah, Jehovah, (is) a God merciful and gracious, &c. Both the construction and accents require that this passage be thus taken. Our translators, however, have taken it differently.

when more than one is used, is in the predicate : e. g., In Is. xli. 4, we have אֲנִי־הוּא I he, where a very slight consideration of the context will shew us, that אֲנִי, is to be considered as in apposition with the subject of the sentence הוּא־הוּא, and that הוּא must be in the Predicate. See also Deut. xxxii. 39, Neh. ix. 7, Jer. xiv. 22, Isa. xli. 4, xliii. 25, &c.

Of the Concordance of the Subject with the Predicate.

215. Whatever is predicated of any thing must not be incongruous with it, in sense at least : what the grammatical agreement may be we shall see presently.

2. As the grammatical forms of words were, perhaps, not much attended to in very early times, a difference in termination for the purpose of distinguishing between the feminine and the masculine gender would, probably, be among the first wanted, particularly in cases wherein there was no other means of intimating of what sex the person spoken of was. Number would soon be in the same predicament ; and hence, such terminations generally agreed upon, and allowed to intimate these particulars, or other words used at first as attributes, and afterwards abridged and adopted as terminations, would be made to supply these defects. The latter of which I am inclined to believe was the case.

3. If, then, it was ever necessary to make any such distinctions as these, it must have been so in the Subjects and Predicates of sentences : because, as the one must be known to refer to the other ; and, as this could not be pointed out, in many cases, without some mark to apprise us of its relation, these terminations would naturally be employed in such cases.

4. In process of time, however, recourse would be had to the figures of Rhetoric, such as Personification, Epanorthosis, Metonymy, or the like ; each of which would exert a very considerable influence on the construction of sentences : and this is often found to be the case. When, therefore, we have to consider the relation of a subject with its Predicate, in the Hebrew, it will, occasionally, be necessary to have recourse to one or other of these figures.

5. Generally, then, the Predicate is found to agree with its Subject, both in gender and number, considered either in a logical, or a formal, point of view.

By logical we mean, when the gender, number, &c. is regulated, not according to the grammatical forms of words, but, by their significations ; in which case, they may be influenced by any of the figures of rhetoric or not. By formal we mean, when the gender, number, &c. are considered with reference to the grammatical forms only : e. g. יְרוּשָׁלַיִם יָרְדוּ וְיְהוּדָה נָפְלוּ Jerusalem hath stumbled, and Judah hath fallen, Is. iii. 8. Here יְרוּשָׁלַיִם is considered as feminine, not as to form, but signification (Art. 135. 5.) ; its predicate, therefore, יָרְדוּ is said to be in logical, not in formal, concordance with it. In the next member, יְהוּדָה, though feminine in form, is not so in signification, its Predicate, therefore is put in the masculine gender, נָפְלוּ.*

6. In the example, וְהִיְתָה כִּסְלָה And (there) shall be a high way, Isa. xi. 16, the concordance is purely formal. The same may be said of אֱלֹהִים קְדוֹשִׁים God (is) holy ones, Josh. xxiv. 19. הִתְעַר אֶתִּי אֱלֹהִים They caused me to wander, i. e. God, Gen. xx. 13. See also Gen. xxxv. 7. 2 Sam. vii. 23. Jer. x. 10. In all which cases, the agreement seems to have been made with reference to the forms only, and not to the significations, of words.†

* Hence, the names of nations, tribes, or families, may be taken as collective, and singular nouns ; and those of regions, cities, &c. as singular feminine nouns, considered as containers, &c. See Exod. xiv. 30, Jer. xlvi. 11, 1 Kings xx. 20, 2 Sam. xvi. 3, Ps. cxiv. 2, Job i. 15. When, however, a verb is used as a predicate,—as it will be presently seen,—the apparent nominative, is not considered as the real nominative, to it ; but, as this must be in apposition with the real nominative, the rule respecting the concordance will still be the same.

† I am well aware, that these, and similar passages, have been appealed to

7. The following is an instance of Personification :
 חֶסֶד וְאֱמֶת נִפְגְּשׁוּ צָדִק וְשְׁלוֹם נִשְׁקָו
 MET (each other), righteousness and peace have SALUTED (each other), Ps. lxxxiv. 11; i. e. they have met and saluted as men generally do, when on good terms with one another.

8. The following constructions involve a Metonymy : *
 הַבָּל בְּנֵי־אָדָם כְּזָב בְּנֵי־אִישׁ the sons of mean men (are) vanity, the sons of eminent men (are) a lie, i. e. they are in effect as deceptive as vanity, or a lie; קִירָתוֹ עֵץ its walls (are) wood, i. e. made of wood, Ezek. xli. 22; יְהִיו כְּלֵי הַנְּעָרִים קֹדֶשׁ the vessels of the young men are holiness, i. e. are made holy, 1 Sam. xxi. 6; הַמְּלָאכָה † הַרְבָּה The work (is) an increasing, Neh. iv. 13, i. e. is in a state of progress. So we say in English, "Knowledge is power," i. e. it is the cause of power; "Money is a defence," is the means of obtaining a defence; "a man goes a hunting," and the like.

9. When one Predicate answers to several Subjects, differing from each other in gender or number, or both,
 it may be put in the plural number, as referring to them all; or, it may be made to agree, both in gender and number, either with the nearest, or, with that which may in support of the doctrine of the Holy Trinity; but, until it shall be made probable, that the Sacred Writers did usually involve doctrines of this kind in the mere forms of words, I must be allowed to object to such methods of supporting an article of faith, which stands in need of no such support. be considered the most worthy:* e. g. וְאַבְרָהָם וְשָׂרָה וְיִצְחָק and Abraham and Sarah (were) OLD, Gen. xviii. 11: וַיָּקָם אַבְיִמֶלֶךְ וּפִיכֹל שָׂר־צָבָאוּ וַיָּשָׁבוּ So he arose, (i. e.) Abimelek and Phicol the captain of his host, AND THEY RETURNED, Gen. xxi. 32.

10. When, however, the Predicate precedes, it generally agrees with the nearest noun; when it follows, it will mostly take the plural form, as in the last example. See also Gen. viii. 16. 18, xxxi. 14, xxxiii. 7, Exod. xvii. 10, xxi. 4, xxix. 15, Numb. xii. 1, xxvii. 21, Deut. xxviii. 32, Judg. xiii. 20, Ruth i. 3, Esth. ix. 31, 1 Chron. xxv. 1, Job xix. 15, Prov. xxvii. 9, Is. xvi. 10, li. 3, Jer. vii. 20, Ezek. i. 11, xxxv. 10.

11. When the subject is a Collective noun, the Predicate may be in the plural number, agreeing with its subject logically: e. g. כָּל-עַמָּה נֹאֲנָחִים the whole of her people (ARE) SIGHING, Lam. i. 11; עֶשְׂרֵת צְמֵדֵי-כָרֶם בַּת אֶחָת יַעֲשׂוּ בַת אֶחָת ten acres of vineyard (THEY) YIELD one bath, Is. v. 10.

12. When the Subject, of any Proposition, is found in the definite state of construction with any word (see Art. 143.), the Predicate is mostly made to agree, in gender and number, with the last of these, provided the sense of the predicate will apply to both (by the figure Zeugma): e. g. קוֹל רִמְי אָחִיד צֹעֲקִים אֵלַי the voice of thy brother's bloods (THEY ARE) CRYING to me,† Gen. iv. 10; קִשֶׁת גְּבִרִים חֲתִים the bow of the mighty (ones, THEY ARE) BROKEN, 1 Sam. ii. 4.

* The plural is considered as more worthy than the singular, and the masculine than the feminine gender. But, in the last case, the mother will be considered more worthy than the children.

† M. de Sacy says on the Arabic construction, which is parallel to this: "On peut regarder la concordance, en ce cas, comme une concordance logique, parce qu'on y a plus égard au rapport logique qui unit les idées, qu'au rapport

13. In some cases, however, the Predicate is made to agree with the Subject: as, כָּל-מְלָאכָה לֹא יַעֲשֶׂה the whole (i. e. any) work (it) SHALL not BE DONE, Exod. xii. 16.

See also Gen. v. 23, 31, Is. lxiv. 10, Nah. iii. 7, &c. And particularly when the Predicate stands first in the order: as, כָּרָה קְנֵאתָ, אֶפְרַיִם the envy of Ephraim (it) SHALL DEPART, Isa. xi. 13.

Of the Concordance of the Nominative with its Verb.

216. The Concordance of a real nominative with its verb, is that of a Subject with its Predicate. By a real nominative we mean, the pronoun always inherent in the verb when in the state of conjugation (See Art. 188. note). What, therefore, is usually taken for the nominative is, in fact, either a noun, or a pronoun, put in apposition with this real nominative; and, as before, agreeing either logically, or formally, with the verb, now the Predicate. Considered, therefore, in this point of view, all the cases of apparent discrepancy, which can happen under this head, may be resolved into one or other of the preceding ones: e. g. בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים he (i. e.) GOD, created, Gen. i. 1.

Here the word אֱלֹהִים is manifestly a plural form; but, as the Being designated by this word, is every where affirmed to be ONE, the agreement between the pronoun inherent, by implication, in the verb בָּרָא, viz. הוּא, and this word (אֱלֹהִים) is logical, not formal: and,—as these two words are in apposition, and therefore grammatical qui se trouve entre les mots." Vol. ii. Art. 332. e. g. ^{رَحْمَةً} ^{لِلْمَسْكِينِ} إِنَّ رَحْمَةَ اللَّهِ قَرِيبٌ مِنَ الْمَسْكِينِ Surely the mercy (fem.) of God (it is) NEAR (masc.) to those who do good. And Storr, (Nomen) rectum numerari debet principale. Observ. p. 362.

meaning the same thing (Art. 217. 4.),—the same is the case with יֹאמֵר אֱלֹהִים and פָּרָא . The same may also be said of יֹאמֵר אֱלֹהִים he says (i. e.) God; and of innumerable other similar constructions.

2. Examples of apparent discrepancy, in gender and number: 1st, $\text{הַפְּלֹחָמָה . . . הָיָזָק}$ it (masc.) became strong (i. e.) the war (fem.), 2 Kings iii. 26; 2d, $\text{הָבִיא שְׂפָחָתָךְ}$ he hath brought (i. e.) thy handmaid, 1 Sam. xxv. 27; 3d, $\text{יְהִיָּה נַעֲרָה בְּתוּלָה}$ he (some one) may be (i. e.) the young woman, a virgin, Deut. xxii. 23; 4th, $\text{מָה־יְהִיוּ הַלְּמֹתָיו}$ what they (masc.) will be, (i. e.) his dreams (fem.) Gen. xxvii. 20.

3. With the apparent nominative preceding: 5th, $\text{יִנְעַם . . . דַּעַת}$ knowledge . . . it, or he, is pleasant, Prov. ii. 10; 6th, עָרֶיהָ עָלָה (as to) her cities, it, or he, has ascended, Jer. xlvi. 15; 7th, $\text{זְרָעוֹת יְתָמִים יִדָּבֵא}$ (as to) the arms of the orphans (fem.), it is broken (masc.), Job xxii. 9.

4. The first four of these examples seem to involve an Epanorthisis: a figure frequently used in the Arabic, under which something enounced in a vague manner, is afterwards restricted by the addition of other words. Of this the Arabs count four sorts, 1, بَدَلَ الْكُلِّ

بَدَلَ الْكُلِّ i. e. the change of the whole from the whole, or, when any thing is enounced by one or more words, another enunciation is added to the same effect, but in a different point of view; as, جَاءَنِي عَمْرٌ $\text{بَدَلَ الْبَعْضِ مِنْ أَخْوَكْ}$ Amru came to me (I mean) thy brother; 2, $\text{بَدَلَ الْقَوْمِ بَعْضُهُمْ}$

$\text{بَدَلَ الْقَوْمِ بَعْضُهُمْ}$ the change of a part from the whole; as, $\text{جَاءَنِي الْقَوْمُ}$

$\text{جَاءَنِي الْقَوْمُ}$ the people came to me (I mean) some of them; 3, $\text{بَدَلَ الْإِسْتِمْرَالِ}$ the change of the contained for the container, or, vice versa; as, the change of error; as, مَرَرْتُ بِكَلْبٍ فَرَسٍ I passed by a dog (I mean) a horse. See M. de Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. ii. pp. 225. 394: the الكانيه شرح by Moolla Jami, pp. ٢١٤٠-٢١٤٥. Glass. edit. Dathe, on the Epanorthosis, pp. 1350—2.

بَدَلَ الْغُلَطِ $\text{سَلَبَ زَيْدٌ ثَوْبَهُ}$ Zaid was stripped (I mean) his garment; *4, بَدَلَ الْغُلَطِ

In the first example, then, it is vaguely or generally enounced, that some person or thing has acquired power; it is then added by way of restriction, that this is the war. The same may be said of the four following ones. In the sixth example, either a personification is resorted to, or some such word as דָּבָר affair, matter, thing, or the like, is to be supplied by the ellipsis: as, knowledge (it is a thing or person), that gives pleasure. In the seventh, and eighth, the plurals seem to be taken collectively: as, her cities (the whole), has gone up.* The arms of the orphans (the whole), is broken.

5. When the verb הָיָה is thus introduced, it is sometimes found to agree with the Subject, at others, with the Predicate: e. g. יְהִיָּה שְׂכָרְךָ thy reward SHALL BE the spotted ones, Gen. xxxi. 8; נִשְׁמָמָה תִּהְיֶה הַר-שֵׁעִיר IT SHALL BE a devastation (i. e.) Mount Seir, Ezek. xxxv. 15. So, “The wages of sin is death.”

6. So, also, when a personal pronoun occupies the place of this verb: e. g. הַקּוֹת הָעַמִּים הִבֵּל הוּא (as to) the statutes of the people, IT (the whole) IS VANITY, Jer. x. 3, i. e. taken collectively.

7. When, however, either inanimate, or irrational, beings are represented as agents, the feminine form of the verb is often taken: † e. g. תִּשְׁטֹף סִבְיֹתֶיהָ עַבְרֵ-אֶרֶץ

וַתִּשְׁטֹף So they strip Joseph, his coat, the coat of many colours which was on him. See also Ps. lxxi. 18. 22; lxxvi. 6. The whole of the men of might (I mean) their hands (powers) have not prevailed: Jer. ix. 2; Job xxxviii. 12.

* So, in sense, the Greek, πάλιν ἄρδην ἐξολοθρεῦσαι,—aliquando (ἄρδην) significat sublime, Viger., Ed. 1813, p. 294.

† This is constant in the Arabic; and generally, in all the dialects of this family of languages. It is generally when the agent is supposed to be rational that the concordance is formal.

it bears away (i. e.) her effusions, the dust of the earth, Job xiv. 19; שְׁפָתַי הַחֲכָמִים תִּשְׁמֹרֵם the lips of the wise, it preserves them, Prov. xiv. 3. See also 1 Sam. iv. 15, 2 Sam. x. 9, Job xii. 7, xx. 11, Ps. cxix. 98, Is. lix. 12, Jer. xlvi. 41, li. 56, Mic. iv. 11.

8. When the apparent nominative is in the definite state of construction (see Art. 215. 12.) with another noun, the verb will occasionally agree with the latter: e. g. בְּיֹלְגָשׁ כָּלֵב מֵעֵבֶרָה יָלַד שֵׁבֶר * the concubine of Caleb (he) begat Sheber, 1 Chron. ii. 48.

9. When courage, virility, fortitude, efficiency, or the like, is intended to be predicated of females, verbs expressive of acts, &c. done by them, seem to be put in the masculine gender to intimate this; e. g. כַּאֲשֶׁר עָשִׂיתֶם עִם־הַמֵּתִים וְעִמָּדִי as ye (women) HAVE DONE (masc. courageously) with the dead and with me, Ruth i. 8; וַיִּדְעֶתֶם כִּי אֲנִי יְהוָה וְאֲדַנִּי יְהוָה and ye (women) SHALL KNOW (masc. effectively) that I am the Lord Jehovah, Ezek. xxiii. 49; וַתַּעֲשִׂי הָרָעוֹת וַתִּבְקָלִי and thou (fem.) doest evil things, and thou PREVAILEST (masc. manfully), Jer. iii. 5. †

10. It has been laid down as a general rule, that the word, intended to be considered as the most important in a sentence, will stand first (Art. 212. 3.). When, therefore, this happens to be the apparent nominative to a verb, it is usually termed the Nominative absolute.

11. The office of this nominative is, to enounce the

* But here we may have an ellipsis, and כָּלֵב be the nominative.

† It is a curious fact that the Grammarians of Arabia consider females as unintelligent agents, not absolutely, but relatively; and hence they account for these agents having, in grammar, the same government with collective inanimate nouns. See the Shurho Moolla Jámi, p. ۳۱۱.

subject matter of discourse (Art. 212. 3. note); which, as it is done in a manner independent of any of the following context, in a formal point of view, has been termed absolute. Any nouns, pronouns, &c., following, and referring to this nominative, must, however, agree with it, either logically or formally: e. g. נִפְּשׁ כִּי־תִחַטָּא &c. (as to) a soul, when it shall sin . . . AND HE DO, &c., Lev. iv. 2; i. e. as spoken of a rational person. וַמְּבִישֶׁת בֶּן־אֲדִנְיָהּ יֹאכֵל and (as to) TEN MEN, they were found among them, Jer. xli. 8; וַתִּמְדּוּ but (as to) Mephibosheth, the son of thy master, HE SHALL EAT continually, 2 Sam. ix. 10; וּבִילְגָשׁוֹ וּשְׁמָהּ and (as to) his concubine, and her name (was) Reumah, SHE ALSO BROUGHT FORTH, Gen. xxii. 24.

12. A great number of instances moreover occur, in which the Subject of the discourse is thus absolutely enounced (Art. 212.) by one or more words, not apparent nominatives to verbs, but which are, nevertheless, termed NOMINATIVES ABSOLUTE: e. g. הַדְּבָרִים אֲשֶׁר שָׁמַעְתָּ (as to) THE WORDS which thou hast heard, &c., 2 Kings xxii. 18; הַדְּבָר אֲשֶׁר־דִּבַּרְתָּ אֵינָנוּ שׂוֹמְעִים (as to) THE WORD which thou hast spoken . . . we regard it not, Jer. xliv. 16; וְדַמוֹת הַחַיּוֹת מִרְאִיהֶם and (as to) THE SIMILITUDE of the living creatures, THEIR appearances, &c., Ezek. i. 13; וְיִמְצְאוּם וְכָל דְּבַר חֵכְמַת בִּינָה and (as to) EVERY MATTER of the wisdom of discrimination . . . so he found them, Dan. i. 20; אֲנִי הִנֵּה בְרִיתִי אִתְּךָ (as for) ME, behold, my covenant is with thee, Gen. xvii. 4, &c.

13. The relative pronoun, אֲשֶׁר, is often subject to this kind of construction, though always in a subordinate point of view, and when the subject matter of the proposition in which it is found, is not the real subject of the discourse, but nevertheless relates to it: e. g. אֲשֶׁר הִדְּבַרְנוּ

רוּחַ (as to) WHICH, the wind disperses it, Ps. i. 4; אֲשֶׁר צִוִּיתִיךָ לְבִלְתִּי אֲכָל-מִמֶּנּוּ (as to) WHICH, I commanded thee for not eating of it, &c., Gen. iii. 11; אֲשֶׁר הָיָה דְּבַר-יְהוָה אֵלָיו (with respect to) WHOM, the word of the Lord came to him, &c., Jer. i. 2. This is a sort of subordinate nominative absolute.

14. This view of such constructions will account for the apparent pleonasm of the pronoun in Hebrew; and which has, in some instances, been adopted in our own version. See also Exod. vi. 4, Lev. xviii. 5, Numb.
 xiii. 27, Deut. xxviii. 49, 2 Kings xiii. 14, Jer. xiv. 1, Ezek. xx. 11, xxxvii. 25, Joel iv. 2, Ps. xc. 5,—with וְ Eccles. ii. 21.

15. From the independent situation of words thus placed, it will be necessary to render them in our language, by prefixing some such expression as, with reference to, with respect to, as to; otherwise our translations will appear bald and obscure.—This will account for many of the additional words, found within brackets in this work.—There are instances, however, in the Hebrew, in which these supplementary words are expressed in the text: * e. g. לְקַדּוּשֵׁים אֲשֶׁר-בְּאֶרֶץ AS TO the saints who are in the land, Ps. xvi. 3; לִמְסַמְרֵהוּ תְּהִי אֵת-הַחֵסֶד AS TO the afflicted man, from his friend (there ought to be) kindness, Job vi. 14; אֵת-מְקוֹם בְּסֵאֵי WITH RESPECT TO the place of my throne, &c., Ezek. xliii. 7;
 וְאֵת-דִּירוֹ and, AS TO his generation, &c., Is. liii. 8.
 (Art. 171. 11.).

16. Any other word may, like אֲשֶׁר, be employed as a subordinate nominative absolute, at the pleasure of the writer ; but, when this is done, its connexion with some former word, &c., involving the real subject matter of the discourse, will be pointed out by the intervention of some other word : e. g. כִּי הַמְּגִיד לִי לֵאמֹר וְהוּא הָיָה FOR (as to) him who announced to me, saying and he was, &c., 2 Sam. iv. 10 ; גַּם־אֲנִי יִקְרָנִי EVEN, (as to) me, it will happen (to) me, Eccl. ii. 15.

* So in the Arabic, Gram. Arabe, vol. ii. Art. 158. Also with ل ف ا وما &c., passim.

17. In many instances, also, we find both the leading, and subordinate, subject of a discourse placed together, without any mark of distinction : e. g. שִׁבְעִים מְלָכִים בָּחֲנוֹת יְדֵיהֶם וְרַגְלֵיהֶם מִקָּצְצִים הָיוּ מִלְּקָטִים (as to) seventy kings, the thumbs of their hands and (the great toes) of their feet being cut off, they were gathering, &c., Judg. i. 7, which however will, according to the Arabic idiom, admit of another solution and translation ; viz. (as to) seventy kings deprived of their thumbs and great toes, they were gathering, &c. The accents suggest the former.

18. The recurrence of ו, in all such constructions as this, is said to have the effect of pointing out the comparison or correspondence, intended to be instituted, between the preceding and following member, i. e. the relation between the prothesis, and apodosis : e. g. וְאִם יִלְקַח יִמְעַט הַבַּיִת AND if the house be small THEN let him take, &c. Exod. xii. 4.

LECTURE XV.

ON THE GENERAL DEPENDENCE OF WORDS UPON ONE ANOTHER.

217. HAVING considered the principles of concordance as found to prevail in this language, we now come to consider the dependence of words upon one another generally, and to investigate the principles by which this is regulated.

2. It will readily be admitted, that, when words are added, either for the purpose of defining or modifying the signification of others, or, for completing the ideas partially perhaps conveyed by them; the relation, which such words will bear to one another, must be regulated by some easy and intelligible principles. We now proceed to shew what these are.

3. The principles found in this respect to prevail in the Hebrew language may be reduced to two: viz. Apposition, and what has been termed The definite state of construction, (Art. 143.)

4. By Apposition is meant, the juxta-position of two or more words, being either different names for some idea or thing, or, terms added for the purpose of presenting it in a different point of view, or of otherwise modifying and defining it: as, יהוה אלהים Jehovah Elohim. By the first of these, the reader is put in mind of that Being alone, who had revealed himself to the Jews under this name; by the second, the name of any Deity, either true or false. But, when these two are thus combined, the sense of the latter is so restricted, as to be applicable to none but the God of Israel. Again, in the example, הַמֶּלֶךְ דָּוִד the King David,* by the first word, we shall understand the king, without knowing what king is meant. It may be the king of Assyria, Samaria, Egypt, or of any other country; when however the word David is added, the phrase becomes perfectly definite. The first of these may be termed Apposition of identity; the second, of specification.

5. Apposition may, also, be either immediate, or mediate: immediate, when the words so connected have no intervening word or particle: as, וַיְהִי הָאֱלֹהִים; mediate, when some such word, &c. intervenes: as, יְשִׁי בֵּית הַלְּחָמִי Jesse the Bethlehemite.

6. Under this head we shall consider the construction of attributives with their substantives, or, of either of these when used as adverbs; also nouns substantive used as specificatives, i. e. when in apposition with others signifying number, weight, measure, &c.: also the Pronouns demonstrative, interrogative, and personal, when added for the purpose of defining, specifying, or otherwise restricting the significations of other words.

7. The other principle, just mentioned, by which two or more words are so connected as to present one definite idea, is that which regulates the juxta-position of two or more substantives, or of attributives used as substantives,† which are not names for the same thing, but

* Sophocl. Cedipus Rex. l. 27—28, ὁ πυρφόρος θεὸς....λοιμὸς ἔχθιστος, &c.

† It is usual with writers on the Arabic Grammar to say, when speaking of (what we term) adjectives or attributives, that they are put to stand for the essence or being of the person or thing described, including also the properties expressed by such words. So the Moolla Jámi, on the Gram. of Ibn ul Hájib, p. ۴۱, الرّصف وهو كون الاسم دالاً على ذات مبهمة مأخوذة مع, ۴۱, which, having a certain relation to one another, will, by their combination, afford the idea of propriety, materiality, peculiarity, or the like, which exists between them. This we term the Definite state of construction, generally (Art. 143.); but, when the first of two, or more, such words in construction is an attributive used as a substantive, we shall for the sake of distinction, term this the distinctive state of construction.

8. This construction may be either immediate or mediate, as before, and for the same reasons.

9. The complements of all verbs (i. e. their objective or other oblique cases, as considered in the Latin Grammars), whether transitive, intransitive, or neuter; also the construction of prepositions, adverbs, or interjections, we shall consider as regulated by one or other of these principles.

Remarks.

218. All indefinite attributives, found in the predicates of propositions, may be considered as in the state of immediate apposition with the noun, either expressed or implied, which is the real predicate; e. g. יְהוָה יְרַחֵם יִרְפּוּן יְרַחֵם merciful and gracious (is) Jehovah, Ps. ciii. 8, &c., which, Exod. xxxiv. 6, &c. is given יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵי יְרַחֵם יְרַחֵם Jehovah (is) A GOD merciful and gracious. So the passage יְרַחֵם יְרַחֵם יְרַחֵם Jerusalem hath stumbled, might be thus fully expressed, יְרוּשָׁלַיִם עִיר פֶּשְׁלָה, Jerusalem (is) a city (that) hath stumbled; and hence perhaps, פֶּשְׁלָה is put in the feminine form. So Gen. vi. 9, נֹחַ אִישׁ צַדִּיק, Noah (was) a just man.

بعض صفاتها سواء كانت هذه الدلالة بحسب الوضع مثل احمر فانه موضع لذات ما اخذت مع بعض صفاتها التي هي الحمرة .

مشبهة. and Mr. de Sacy's Gram. Arabe, vol. i. p. 228. The same is found to prevail in the Persian, Sanscrit, and Bengali. On the last, see Mr. Haughton's Gram., p. 35. Art. 120. See also Lumsden's Pers. Gram., vol. i.

2. It is obvious from the first of these examples, that both רָחֹם and רַחֲמֵיךָ, are to be considered as in apposition with אֱלֹהִים, which is there implied, but is expressed in the second. In the last example also, the real predicate is expressed (אִישׁ), with which the following word צַדִּיק is in immediate apposition. In like manner, in the Arabic, ^ساللَّهِ ^ككَرِيمٍ, is put for ^ساللَّهُ ^{إِلَّا} ^ككَرِيمٍ ^ساللَّهُ God (is) a bountiful God. Hence, also the absence of the article universally after the negative particles, لֹא, אֵל, מֵ, &c. no, not, &c. because the word, thus negated, must necessarily be a predicate, not a subject as in the European languages.* Hence ^ساللَّهُ ^{لَا} ^{إِلَّاهَ} ^{إِلَّا} ^{هُوَ} (as to) God, there is not a God besides him, &c. In all such cases as the above, we have a Nominative absolute (Art. 216. 10.), or a Subject attended by its predicate: e. g. as to Jehovah, (he is) a merciful and gracious God: and so of the rest: in which the subsequent words may also be considered as specific (Art. 217. 4.).

3. In all cases, in which both the subject and predicate are made definite, we have nothing more than nouns placed in immediate apposition; where the following ones may be considered as specificatives as before: and hence, the rules relating to the concordance of the subject with the predicate will hold good in this point of view also.

4. The construction of apparent nominatives with their verbs has been shewn to be nothing more than nouns, &c., in immediate apposition with the real nominatives; and which must always agree with them, either in a logical or formal point of view.

* We say in English, No one came; not so, in the Hebrew, &c. Here we must say, Any one came not, which is much more correct. So ^أابن ^ممالك

Ibn Málik, in the Alfia, ^ععمل ^أأن ^أاجعل ^للأفئ ^ننكرة. ^ممفردة ^ججاء ^تتلك ^أأو. ^ممكررة. Its government is such, that ^للا must accompany an indefinite word, whether it be single or repeated.

Of Words in Immediate Apposition with one another.

219. When two or more substantives, or attributives used as substantives, are in Apposition, one of them at least may be considered as occupying the place of adjectives in other languages.* Examples of immediate apposition: אֲנָשִׁים מְעַט men, a FEW, i. e. a few men, Neh. ii. 12; אֱמָרִים אֱמֶת words, TRUTH, i. e. true words, Prov. xxii. 21: שֶׁה בְּרִיהַּ a sheep, FATNESS, i. e. fat sheep, Ezek. xxxiv. 20.

2. Examples in which the latter designates the materials, metal, &c. out of which the first is made: כֶּפְרִים

* Nouns put in apposition, may, as already observed, be considered in two points of view: the one may be termed Identity, as in the phrase יהוה אלהים Jehovah Elohim; the other, Specification, as in the instances above.

This last is termed by the Arabian Grammarians تَمْيِيز specification, and is thus explained in the Hidáyat oon Nahve, p. 139—

التمييز هو نكرة— تذكر بعد عدد او كيل او وزن او مساحة او غير ذلك مما فيه الابهام وترفع ذلك الابهام نحو عندي عشرون رجلاً وقفيزان براً ومنوان سمناً وجريبان قطناً وعلي التمرة مثلها زبدًا وقد يكون من غير مقدار

نحو خاتم حديدًا وسوار ذهبًا— وقد يقع بعد الجملة لرفع الابهام عن

نسبتها نحو طاب زيد نفسه او علماً او اباً. “The (noun of) SPECIFICATION is always indefinite, and is placed after a noun of NUMBER, MEASURE, WEIGHT, DISTANCE, &c., in which the signification is vague, in order to render it SPECIFIC: as, twenty MEN, two measures (termed قفيز) (of) WHEAT,

Two pounds (of) FAT, Two measures (termed جريب) (of) COTTON:

or, when speaking of a single date (fruit, saying) زبدًا THE CREAM. It is also used when quantity is not meant; as, a ring (of) IRON, a bracelet (of) GOLD. It sometimes comes after a sentence, in order to mark the thing referred

הַבָּקָר * two talents (of) SILVER, 2 Kings v. 23; הַבָּקָר *
הַנְּחֹשֶׁת the oxen, THE BRASS, i. e. brazen, 2 Kings to with the greater precision; as, Zaid (is) fortunate (in) PERSON, or, LEARNING, or (in his) FATHER." The following is the account given of it in the Alfiya of Ibn Málík: أَسْمٌ بِمَعْنَى مَن مَبِينٌ نَكْرَةٌ يَنْصَبُ تَمْيِيزًا بِمَا كَشَبِرِ أَرْضًا وَقَفِيْزِ بَرًا وَمَنْوِيْنِ عَسَلًا وَتَمْرًا. i. e. A noun which, in the signification of مِن of, explains something that is vague, is placed for the sake of specification in juxta-position with the word so restricted: as, a span (of) EARTH; a measure (termed قَفِيْزِ) of WHEAT; two pounds of HONEY, or of DATE FRUIT.

According to the opinion of El Akhfash, الاخفش, and Soheili سهيلي, as recorded by El Azherí (Schnabell's Com. on the Agrúmia, p. ۸۲)—and condemned by him,—this construction may be considered as a species of the Izáfat, or definite state of construction.

* We have a construction perfectly parallel to this, which M. de Sacy has put down in his Gram. Arabe, (vol. ii. p. 110.), as anomalous; it is given in these examples: viz. القُرَامِي الخَشَبِ the billets, (i. e.) of the wood,

i. e. the wooden billets. So الخَرَارِيْبِ الذَّهَبِ, and الصُّلْبَانِ الخَشَبِ, and

الخَبْزِ الشَّعِيْرِ, So in the tale of Sindbad, by Langlés, السُّرُوْجِ الخَشَبِ

p. ۴, and without the article خَشَبِ أَوْح, p. ۱۶. There is no reason however for supposing, as M. de Sacy does, that this construction is modern, for it also occurs in the Koran; nor, that these are to be considered as nouns in the definite state of construction. This construction may also be explained, either by supposing the preposition مِن to be omitted, as done by Ibn Málík above, or by El Azherí, (الازهرى) in his Commentary on the Agrúmia, published by Schnabell, p. ۸۳; or by supposing an ellipsis of the first word in each case: e. g. السُّرُوْجِ (اعْنَى) سُرُوْجِ الخَشَبِ: or, which is still better, xvi. 17; טוֹרִים אָבֹן orders (rows) stone, i. e. of stone, Exod. xxviii. 17.

3. So also, when the latter word points out only the person, thing, &c. numbered, measured, or weighed; the preceding one, the name of the measure, &c.; e. g. יָמִים שְׁנַתִּים two years, DAYS, i. e. the space of two years, Gen. xli. 1; יָמִים שָׁבָעִים weeks, DAYS, i. e. the space of certain weeks, Dan. x. 3; אֵיפָה שְׁעָרִים an ephah, (of) BARLEY, Ruth ii. 17; סָאֵה-סֶלֶת a seah (of) FINE FLOUR, 2 Kings vii. 1.

See also Gen. xv. 1, Num. ix. 19, 20, xxviii. 23, 1 Kings xxii. 17, Prov. xxii. 21, Is. x. 19, xxx. 20, 33, &c.

4. Apposition may also take place mediately, i. e. when one or more words intervene between the nouns to be thus construed.

Under this rule may be placed all those examples, in which Schröderus has said, "Emphatica est construendi ratio," &c. (Syn. R. 18.), which, however, are nothing more than words put in mediate apposition with others, i. e. having an intervening particle expressed: which appears to have been added, rather for the purpose of modifying the signification of the preceding word, than for adding emphasis to the context: e. g. כִּי בָרַע הוּא for he is in evil, i. e. in a calamitous situation, Exod. xxxii. 22; בְּקִדְשׁ דְּרָבְדָּד in holiness (is) thy way, Ps. lxxvii. 14; יְהוָה יִהְיֶה בְּבִסְלָךְ Jehovah shall be in (or for) thy confidence, Prov. iii. 26; אֲדֹנָי בְּסִמְכָי * the Lord, (is) among the sustainers of my soul, Ps. liv. 6.

by supposing each of these constructions as presenting instances of immediate apposition. See also Josh. iii. 14, 2 Kings ix. 4, 1 Chron. xv. 27, 2 Chron. xv. 8, Ps. lix. 6, Jer. xxxviii. 6: where there seems to be an excess of the definite article; which may be accounted for without having recourse to the ellipsis, as Schröderus has done. Synt. R. III. See also Freytag's Hamasa, vol. i. p. 3.

* M. de Sacy remarks on the expression, ^{حَكِيمًا} ^{لَقْمَانُ} ^{كَانَ} Lockman was a wise (man), Gram. Arab., vol. ii. p. 74. . . . "enfin ^{حَكِيمًا} sage est un

See also Ps. lxxxix. 14, cxviii. 7, Prov. xvi. 6, Is. xl. 10, Hos. xiii. 9.

5. Words are sometimes put in the mediate state of apposition by means of a conjunction. This is generally termed Hendiadys. Examples: עִיר וְאִם a city AND mother, i. e. a mother city or metropolis, 2 Sam. xx. 19; בְּרַמָּה וּבְעִירוֹ in Ramah, AND in his own city, i. e. in his city Ramah, 1 Sam. xxviii. 3; בְּבֵלִי הָרָעִים וּבִילְקוֹט . . . in the shepherds' vessel, AND in the bag, Ib. xvii. 40.

See also Is. xxxvii. 18, 2 Chron. xvi. 14, Ps. lxvi. 20, lxxiv. 16, Dan. iii. 5, viii. 10, &c. And in the New Test., Mark xvi. 7, Acts xiv. 13, xxiii. 6, Eph. ii. 3, &c.

On the Nouns of Time and Place.

220. Under this head may be placed words, implying the time, or place, in which any thing is done; the construction of which in the Arabic is considered as absolute.* These words may, therefore, be construed as terme circonstanciel ou modificatif, un sur attribut . . . exprime sous une forme adverbiale, e qui équivaut à ^{بِحَكِيمٍ}بِحَكِيمٍ, ou à ^{وَهُوَ حَكِيمٌ}وَهُوَ حَكِيمٌ." And in a note,

"C'est ainsi que l'on peut dire ^{مَنْ الْكَاذِبِينَ}مَنْ الْكَاذِبِينَ ou ^{بِكَاذِبٍ}بِكَاذِبٍ ou ^{مَا زِيدَ كَاذِبًا}مَا زِيدَ كَاذِبًا à la lettre, non Zeidus mendacem, ou in mendaci, ou ex menducibus." So Sophocl. Œdip. Rex. l. 287, οὐκ ἐν ἀργείοις. Schol. τὸ ὄνομα ἀντὶ ἐπιρρήματος. οὐκ ἀργῶς. Whence it will be seen, how easily nouns thus situated assume the functions of adverbs.

* These are termed ^{ظُرُوفُ الْمَكَانِ وَالزَّمَانِ}ظُرُوفُ الْمَكَانِ وَالزَّمَانِ, containers of time and place,

e. g. ^{صَوْمُوا أَيَّامًا مَعْدُودَةً}صَوْمُوا أَيَّامًا مَعْدُودَةً, fast ye (for) days numbered; ^{أَمَامَ الْمَسْجِدِ}أَمَامَ الْمَسْجِدِ, before the mosque, Gram. Arab. M. de Sacy, vol. ii. p. 59, 60, &c.

if in the objective case, and as standing in need of no intervening particle: e. g. יָמִים שְׁנַתִּים יָמִים two years (as to) DAYS, the space of two years, Gen. xli. 1; וְהוּא יֹשֵׁב פֶּתַח-הָאֹהֶל and he standing (in) THE OPENING of the tent, Gen. xviii. 1; וְעַמֹּד פֶּתַח הָאֹהֶל and it stood (at) THE OPENING of the tent, Exod. xxxiii. 9; עֲמֻדִים מִזְרָח לְמִזְבֵּחַ standing (at) THE EASTERN PART of the altar, 2 Chron. v. 12.

As the construction of the numerals will, occasionally, require the application of the other principle, which we have termed that of "definite construction," its consideration will be postponed till we come to treat on that subject.

The preposition, however, is sometimes used: e. g. יָתִיצְבוּ בְּתַהֲתִית הָהָר they stood BENEATH the mount, Exod. xix. 18.

2. In all these cases, as the qualifying word appears to have no formal connexion with the word qualified; its position may be termed absolute: and, in this point of view, it may be said to have the same relation to the word qualified, that an adverb has when used for the purpose of qualifying a verb.

3. We sometimes, however, find a pronoun joined with the first of such nouns: as, מָדוּ בָד HIS GARMENT (of) linen, Lev. vi. 3; מִחֲסִי-עוֹ MY REFUGE (of) strength, Ps. lxxi. 7. (See Art. 175. 12. 15.)

See also 1 Sam. xxii. 13, Is. xxxi. 7, Lam. iv. 17, Ezek. xvi. 27, &c.*

4. Attributives, being considered in the Hebrew as including some substantive in their signification (see Art.

* Examples of this description have been improperly laid down by Schröderus, as being in the definite state of construction. Synt. R. 10.

217. 7.) need not, when put in apposition with other substantives, be made to agree with them formally, i. e. in the same gender and number : e. g. עֹלָה כָּלִיל an offering, a COMPLETE ONE, i. e. a complete offering, 1 Sam. vii. 9 ; בֶּשֶׂר בַּשָּׂדֶה טֶרֶףָה flesh in the field, TORN (flesh) i. e. flesh torn in the field, Exod. xxii. 30 ; לְעַם לְצִיִּים for a people, for THE DESERT-ONES, i. e. for those inhabiting the desert, Ps. lxxiv. 14, &c. (See Art. 216.).

5. When, however, attributives are put in apposition with substantives, they must agree with them in a logical point of view at least ; i. e. if the substantive is either definite, or indefinite, in signification, the attributive must be made either definite, or indefinite likewise. As to number and gender, the agreement is that of a predicate with its subject (see Art. 215, &c.). And, with respect to the order, it will be the same as before (Art. 212. 3.) : e. g. אִישׁ חָכָם a man, WISE, 2 Sam. xiii. 3 ; רְבִים צִידִים a ditch, DEEP, Prov. xxiii. 27 ; רַבִּים הַדְּבָרִים הָאֵלֶּה MANY, hunters, Jer. xvi. 16 ; the words, THESE, Gen. xlvi. 1 ; הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת the land, THIS, Ib. v. 4 ; בְּנֵי הַנוֹלָדִים thy sons, THE BORN ONES, Ib. v. 5.

6. Pronouns have the property of making the words to which they are attached definite ; and hence, in the last example, the article is necessarily affixed to the attributive, נוֹלָדִים. Hence also, it is only when the antecedent is definite, that the relative pronoun אֲשֶׁר, or any equivalent term being also definite, ought in any case to be introduced : e. g. הָאִשָּׁה אֲשֶׁר נָתַתָּה עִמָּדִי THE woman, WHOM thou hast placed with me, Gen. iii. 12 ; מִיֶּזֶה רֵעָה אֲשֶׁר יַעֲמֵד who (is) THIS shepherd who standeth? Jer. xlix. 19 ; מִיֶּזֶה הַלֵּוִי הַלֵּוִי who (is)

THIS MAN, THE (one) walking, Gen. xxiv. 65. But this rule is not rigidly adhered to in the Hebrew.

7. In some instances, however, the attributive appears to be made definite, when the preceding substantive is not so: as, בְּיַד מַלְאָכָיִם הַבָּאִים by the hand of messengers, THE coming ones, Jer. xxvii. 3; עֲבָדִים הַמֹּתְפָרְצִים servants, THE runaways, 1 Sam. xxv. 10. But in these cases, we seem to have an Epanorthosis; thus,—I mean those who are coming, &c. (see Art. 216. 4.): and hence, in all such, the Definite Article may be taken as equivalent to אֲשֶׁר, Art. 179. 3.

8. In other cases, the latter is without the article when the first is not; as, הַדֹּדֵר אֶחָד THE basket, one, Jer. xxiv. 2: לְעֵינֵי הַגּוֹיִם רַבִּים in the eyes of THE nations, many, Ezek. xxxix. 27; אֶת־הָעֲגָלָה הַחֲדָשָׁה the cart, new one, 2 Sam. vi. 3. But in these instances, we have probably an ellipsis of one of the words so connected: e. g. הַדֹּדֵר דֹּדֵר אֶחָד as to the basket, one basket, &c. (Art. 218.): or, the latter word may be considered as specific; in which case the article is necessarily omitted; and so of the rest. (Art. 219. with the note.)

9. Proper names are, to a certain degree, definite in their own right; they do not, therefore receive the article. Nor will two nouns in the state of definite construction admit of the article being prefixed to the first: as, הַדֹּבֶר יְהוָה, or הַדֹּבֶר הַמְּלִיךְ: because in all these cases, the last word (whether it be a proper name and therefore definite in itself, or, an appellative with an article) is added for the purpose of defining the first; which will not then admit of being made still more so, by the further addition of the article.

10. There are, however, examples in which this doctrine, about the force of the article, seems to be contravened; and in order to be able to account for these, it now becomes necessary to consider more particularly the principles by which the use of the article is regulated.

On the Use of the Definite Article.

221. The Article is used for two purposes, generally (Art. 180. 14); first, to point out any person, or thing, already mentioned or well known; as, הָאָרֶץ the earth, Gen. i. 2, which had just been mentioned; or, הַשֶּׁמֶשׁ the sun. Secondly, to restrict the force of any generic, abstract, or other noun, to the peculiar property, quality, &c. expressed by such word; e. g. Gen. xviii. 25, חָלְלָהּ לְךָ מַעֲשֵׂת כַּדָּבָר הַזֶּה לְהַמִּית צְדִיק עִם־רָשָׁע וְהָיָה כַּצְדִּיק כַּרָּשָׁע far be it from thee to do after this manner, to put to death RIGHTEOUS and EVIL; so (that) THE RIGHTEOUS become as THE WICKED: OR, and thus the man characterized as RIGHTEOUS shall be (considered and treated) as the man designated as WICKED. So Ib. xiii. 7, וְהַכְּנַעֲנִי וְהַפְּרִזִּי אֲזִי יֵשֵׁב בְּאֶרֶץ וְהַפְּרִזִּי, and THE CANAANITE, and THE PERIZZITE, dwelt then in the land. So also with respect to abstract nouns: 1 Kings vii. 14, וַיִּמְלֵא אֶת־הַחֲכֵמָה וְאֶת־הַתְּבוּנָה וְאֶת־הַדַּעַת לַעֲשׂוֹת פֶּלֶא־מְלָאכָה בְּנִחֻשֶׁת so, he is filled with THE WISDOM, and INTELLIGENCE, and KNOWLEDGE, (necessary) for making all work in brass, &c.* So also, Gen. xxiii. 17, הָעֵץ; Deut. xxxii. 4, הַצֹּר; 2 Sam. xii. 7, הָאִישׁ, &c. So also,

* The following account, of the force of the Arabic definite article, is taken from a treatise on the Arabic Syntax, printed at Madras in 1820, p. ۲۳۳

ما عرف باللام وهي علي اربعة اقسام الاول ما يشير به الي المهية من حيث هي هي بلا اعتبار فرد او افراد نحو الرجل خير من المرأة ومن ثم اجيز الدينار الحُمْر والدرهم البَيْض ويسمي بلام الجنس . . الثاني ما يشير به الي المهية الموجودة في ضمن فرد معهود بين المتكلم والمخاطب في الخارج نحو ليس الذكر كالانثي ويسمي بالعهد الخارجي ولا بد من تقدم ذكره صريحًا ومن ههنا يستبين ان النكرة اذا اعيدت معرفًا باللام يفيد ان الثاني عين الاول نحو كما ارسلنا الي فرعون رسولا فعصي فرعون الرسول . . . وقد يستغني عن تقدم ذكره بالتقارئ نحو خرج الامير اذا

הַיּוֹם, הַיּוֹמִי, הַיּוֹמִי, see Art. 166. 6.; and in הַיּוֹם, the day, to-day, 1 Sam. i. 4. See my note on Job i. 6. So the Arab. الْيَوْمَ, הַיּוֹמִי, Gen. ii. 23, Exod. ix. 27; הַיּוֹמִי, Gen. xix. 34, comp. ver. 35. In the same way, لم يكن في البلد الا امير واحد والثالث ما يشير به الي المهيبة الموجودة في الذهن في ضمن فرد ما نحو اني اخاف ان يأكله الذئب ويسمي بالعهد الذهني وهذا في المعني كالنكرة واما في اللفظ فيجري عليه احكام المعارف من وقوعه مبتدأ . . . والزابع ما يشير الي المهيبة الموجودة في ضمن جميع الافراد نحو ان الانسان لفي خسر بدليل صحة الاستثناء وهو الا الذين امنوا ويسمي بلام الاسغراق .

That which is made definite by the article (ال) is of four sorts. The first is that in which intimation is made of the character of a thing, as it exists without reference to individual or individuals; as, The man is better than the woman; whence is allowable, The red dinar, and the white dirhem (i. e. intimating, in the one, gold by The red; and silver in the other, by The white). This is termed The article of kind. The second is that, in which intimation is made of an individual notion, conventionally allowed between the speaker and the person spoken to, as to externals: as, The male is not as the female. This is termed, The external convention. But this requires its being previously expressed; and, hence it is known that, when an indefinite word is made definite by the article (i. e. on its second occurrence), such second word means the same (person or thing) with the first: e. g. Even as we sent prophets to Pharaoh, and he rebelled against the (i. e. these) prophets. The previous mention of such word may, moreover, be dispensed with, when otherwise attended: as, The General went out: when there is only one General in the district. The third is that, in which intimation is made of the character entertained in the mind of some individual; as, I fear the wolf will devour him. This is termed The mental convention; and is, as to sense, indefinite; but, as to expression, is subject to the government of the article, from its happening to stand as the subject (of a proposition). The fourth is that, in which intimation is made of the existing character entertained of all the individuals: as, The man (all men) is certainly implicated in sorrow: in order the more clearly to impress the exception following: viz., Except those who believe. This is termed The article of immersion.—Some of these distinctions are, perhaps, unnecessarily nice. They have, however, this to recommend them: They unfold to us the genuine notions of the Orientals on this very important and delicate question.

too, the prefixing of the article has been supposed to form a sort of vocative case, as in הַבַּעַל, O Baal (Art. 180. 14), and ὁ θεός, Heb. i. 8, &c. But, in all such cases, perhaps, we have some such exclamation as, The God! &c. as such; the article being intended to mark the property, κατ' ἐξοχήν, rather than any thing else.— On its application to words in apposition, see Art. 220. 5.

2. The reason of the rule seems to be this. These generic, or abstract, nouns may be considered as names for the ideas for which they severally stand; and, therefore, as definite within themselves to a certain degree. But, as they may stand for any individual of the species to which they belong, and, likewise, for every individual, they may, therefore, represent whole classes. In this case, the addition of the definite article can affect their signification in no other way, than by giving a sort of importance, not to such class or individual, but to the property expressed by its name. And, again, any attributive, or substantive, receiving the definite article, may be considered as expressive of the particular properties, &c. meant by such word, with just as much propriety, as it can its limited, or determinate, individuality.

3. Hence, we find words used as proper names, sometimes with, and at others without, the definite article; e. g. הַיַּרְדֵּן the Jordan, (properly, the River: יַרְד, or רַרְא, in the Syriac, signifying to run, flow, &c.) Jer. xii. 5, xlix. 19; but Job xl. 23, &c. יַרְדֵּן Jordan: הַיַּאֲרֵי the Nile, i. e. the River: Gen. xli. 1, 2. 18. יַאֲרֵי, Isa. xix. 7, xxiii. 3, Zech. x. 11; הַלְבָּנוֹן the Libanus, Deut. iii. 25, &c.; Ps. xxix. 6, &c. לְבָנוֹן, as a proper name; הַיַּרְמֹל 1 Sam. xv. 12, &c. פְּעֹר, הַפְּעֹר, and בְּשֵׁן, הַבְּשֵׁן, and פְּרָמֶל, הַפְּרָמֶל Josh. xv. 55. So הַבְּשֵׁן, and הַפְּעֹר, and פְּעֹר. So also in the names of men: הַיַּעֲקֹב, Num. xiii. 22. 28; יַעֲקֹב, Deut. ix. 2; הַיַּאֲרֵינָה 2 Sam. xxiv. 16; הַמְּגֹג Ezek. xxxviii. 2, &c.* See Nold. Concord. Part. annot. and vind. p. 855, &c.

* In the کتاب المظهر في اللغة by Essoyūti, we have the following remark to this effect: فان قيل فالفرات ايضاً معرفة فلم دخلته الالف

4. This sometimes takes place also, when a proper name, compounded of two words, is put in the definite state of construction; as, הַקְרִית הָאַרְבַּע Neh. xi. 25, but קְרִית אַרְבַּע Gen. xxiii. 2. So הַקְרִית הַיְעָרִים Jer. xxvi. 20, but קְרִית יְעָרִים Josh. ix. 17, &c. So 1 Sam. xvii. 34, הָאֲרִי and הַדּוֹב, are put for a lion, and a bear, not the lion, &c. See also Mr. de Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. pp. 326—8, vol. ii. p. 276, &c.

5. Some appellatives which are much in use, seem to take the article by way of distinction:* as, הַבְּיָר the well, Exod. ii. 15; הַפֶּזֶר the servant, Gen. xviii. 7, &c. just as we use the corresponding words in English, without intending to make the word definite; which is just what the Arabian Grammarian, cited on Art. 221, styles the case of "mental convention." For a similar reason, perhaps, others omit it: as, מֶלֶךְ רַב great king, for the great king, Ps. xxi. 2, xlv. 16, xlvi. 3, xlix. 7, lxii. 1, Esth. i. 9. So שָׂמֶשׁ, for הַשָּׁמֶשׁ Ps. lxxii. 17, Jer. xxxi. 35, &c. So אֶרֶץ, for הָאֶרֶץ, Ps. ii. 2, Job iii. 14, xxxv. 11, &c.; and אֱלֹהִים, frequently for

والحارث والفرات هو الماء العذب قال تعالى واسقيناكم ماءً فراتا
If it be asked, Why is EL FARĀT with the article? and why has the article been added? The answer is, that this is allowable in all proper names, the origin of which is AN ATTRIBUTIVE; as, العباس EL ABBAS; الحارث EL HARITH. And, as to EL FARĀT, its signification is, THE SWEET WATER: as it is said in the Koran, "And we will surely water you with sweet water." (Sur. 77.). See Weiske on the Greek Pleonasm, p. 23, edit. 1813; Freytag's Hamasa, p. 1^r line 16, &c.

* This the Arabs term ^{الغلبة} prevalency, i. e. a sort of antonomasia. So in the Greek, ὁ ποιητὴς: ὁ ὦν, καὶ ὁ ἦν, καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος. See also Freytag's Hamasa, p. 1.—But these examples are identical with those given above, in illustration of the peculiar property, quality, &c. So the Arab. adage, العالم بارض ميلاده كالذهب في معدنه The learned man in the land of his nativity (is) as the gold in its mine. This use of the article—as often found also with abstract nouns, nouns signifying metals, &c.,—the Arabs occasionally term اختصاص, peculiarity.

הַאֱלֹהִים, &c. see No. 3. But here,—as in No. 4,—the frequent occurrence, perhaps, of such words, and hence the certainty of their meaning, has made the addition of the article unnecessary.

6. When two nouns are in the state of construction, the Definite Article, if necessary, can be prefixed to the last only: as, שְׁנֵי הָאֲנָשִׁים the two men, Josh. ii. 4; גְּדֹלֵי הָעִיר the great men of the city, 2 Kings x. 6. רֵף הַלֵּב tender of the heart, the coward, Deut. xx. 8. See Gen. xli. 27, xxxvii. 3. 23. (Art. 220. 9.) To the last of two in a compound; as, בֵּית הַלְחָמִי the Bethlehemite, 1 Sam. xvii. 58. (Art. 166. 7.) אִישׁ הָאֲדָמָה the agriculturist, Gen. ix. 20, &c. There are instances, however, in which this rule seems to be contravened: as, נְשֵׂאֵי הָאָרוֹן הַכְּבֹדִית Josh. iii. 14; שְׁתֵּי הָעֵבֹת Ezek. xlv. 16, &c. הַנְּהָב Exod. xxxix. 17; כָּל־הָעַם הָאָרֶץ Judg. xvi. 4, 2 Kings xvi. 14, Ps. cxxiii. 4, &c. But all such instances are elliptical: e. g. Josh. i. c. נְשֵׂאֵי הָאָרוֹן הַכְּבֹדִית the bearers of the ark, the ark of the covenant. See Art. 180. 15, note; also Exod. xxxviii. 21, Numb. xxxii. 1, &c. So also with a pronoun added: as, בְּתוֹךְ הָאֱלֹהִים Josh. vii. 21. Comp. Lev. xxvii. 23, 2 Kings xv. 16, Micah ii. 12, Josh. viii. 33, Ps. lxxxii. 11, ciii. 4, Is. ix. 12. But, in some of these instances, particularly the last, הַ is probably to be taken in the sense of אֲשֶׁר. See Art. 179. 3. In others, interrogatively. Ib. and Nold., p. 213. seq., with the notes, &c.

7. Proper names of men never take the Definite Article; as, אַבְרָהָם Abraham, דָּוִד David, &c. Those of rivers and places sometimes do; as, הָעֵי Josh. vii. 2. Comp. Numb. xxiii. 14, 1 Sam. vii. 16, &c. In such cases as הָאֲרֹנָה 2 Sam. xxiv. 16, the הַ probably stands for אֲשֶׁר, or may be used distinctively, as in הַפְּנֵעֵי, הָרְשִׁיעַ, &c. Arab. الْحَارِثُ, الْعَبَّاسُ, &c. above.

8. Some personal pronouns, with the Demonstratives, זֶה, זֹאת, אֵל, and אֵלֶּה, although definite in themselves, will when following as qualifying terms, receive the Definite Article; as, הַהוּא Gen. xxviii. 11. 19, &c.; הַהִיא Exod. iii. 8, &c.; הַהֶמְדָּה Numb. ix. 7, &c.; הַהֶנְדָּה 1 Sam. xvii. 28, &c.; הַהִנְדָּה Gen. xxviii. 20, &c.; הַהִנְדָּה Gen. xv. 18; הַהֵאֵל Gen. xix. 8; הַהֵאֵלָה Gen. xv. 17, &c. In all which cases, it seems rather to be distinctive, than definite. See Nold. p. 220, &c.

Adverbs and other qualifying Terms.

222. Words generally construed as Adverbs are nothing more than nouns substantive, attributives, infinitives, or particles, put in Immediate, or Mediate, apposition with those which they are intended to qualify.* The order is regulated as before (Art. 212. 3.). Examples of such words in Immediate apposition; פָּקֹדֵי פָּקַדְתִּי visiting, † I have visited (or, will surely visit); וַיִּגַּשׁ הַפְּלִשְׁתִּי הַשָּׂדֶם וַהֲעָרָב so the Philistine approaches rising EARLY and remaining LATE, i. e. early and late, 1 Sam. xvii. 16. See also Gen. xix. 9, xxxi. 15, xlvi. 4, Numb. xi. 15, 32, xvi. 13, xxiii. 11, xxiv. 10, Josh. xxiv. 10, &c. In many cases another Infinitive is added, as in וַבְּכֹה . . . יֵלֶךְ הָלוֹךְ so he went on proceeding and weeping, i. e. weeping more and more, 2 Sam. iii. 16. See also Gen. viii. 7, Josh. vi. 13, Judg. xiv. 9, 1 Sam. vi. 12, 2 Sam. xv. 30, &c.

2. Examples of such words in Mediate apposition with others, i. e. with some particle or other word or words intervening : יתן אֶל לְמִכְבִּיר he giveth food to abundance, i. e. abundantly, Job xxxvi. 31 ; יִבְרָחוּ בְהִתְחַבֵּא they fled in becoming hidden, i. e. secretly, Dan. x. 7, &c. Comp. 1 Sam. xxiii. 13, Jer. xi. 11, Gen. xxv. 32, xlvii. 29, Exod. xiv. 11, &c.

* The construction is here, as before, absolute or independent when immediate. This is termed by the Arabian Grammarians الْحَال i. e. the state; and, as it consists of one or more words, added for the purpose of qualifying either the subject or object of a verb, it must necessarily be an attributive. Mr. de Sacy seems to have confounded the حال, with the تميز, which latter is always a substantive. The principle, however, is the same in both.

3. In all these cases, specification is obviously the purpose for which such words have been introduced. With verbs, these will necessarily be construed as adverbs ; with nouns, as adjectives, attributes, or the like. The addition of the particle can have no other influence, than that of uniting the force of the several terms used, for the purpose of giving perspicuity to the whole.

4. Hence, when it is necessary to express the commencement, repetition, hurry, progress, the power of effecting, the intensity, certainty, &c. of, any action, passion, &c. this may be done, either by putting two verbs in the tense and person suitable to the passage, with, or without, the copulative conjunction ; or, by one verb only in such tense and person, and the other either in the Infinitive, or in the Participial, form :* e. g. הִחֵל רָשַׁע

* This, according to the Moolla Jámi, is done for the purpose of rousing the hearer, or to obviate the supposition of mistake in the speaker (Com. on Ibn ul Hájib, p. ۲۳۵-۶). His words are: وذلك اما لدفع ضرر الغفلة عن السامع او لدفع ظنه بالمتكلم الغلط. وذلك الدفع يكون بتكرير اللفظ and this," he adds, "is done by repeating the word : as, He struck (i. e.) Zaid, Zaid : or, he struck, he struck (i. e.) Zaid. But it is not to the repetition of the same words, that this rule is confined ; any other words may be added, as the sense may require. So

These words are conjoined for the purpose of strengthening the passage, just as the poet Tarafat has said, When I come near him, he wanders and separates from me."  לֹא תֹסִיפִי וַיִּקְרָאוּ לְךָ do not repeat, (that) they call thee, i. e. do not allow them again to call thee, Is. xlvii. 1 ;

 אֶבְלֵ נִפְה־בוֹ I may be able, (that) we may smite him, Numb. xxii. 6 ; נִפְרְצָה נִשְׁלַחָה Let us spread out, let us send, i. e. let us send out extensively, 1 Chron.
 xiii. 2. The force of the paragogic ה will presently be considered. In many cases, however, the Infinitive will be preceded by a preposition ; as, כִּרְאָה as he saw, Gen.
 xxiv. 30, xxv. 26, xxxiii. 10, 1 Sam. xxv. 2, Ps. xlii. 4, where their force is, in some respects, not unlike that of the Latin Gerunds.

5. The repetition of nouns, or particles, is often recurred to, for the purpose of denoting distribution, diversity, comparison, or the like : e. g. שְׁנַיִם שְׁנַיִם בָּאוּ two (and) two came they to Noah, Gen. vii. 9 ; בֵּין עֵדֶר וּבֵין עֵדֶר between flock and between flock, Gen.
 xxxii. 17 :
 וַיִּלְקְטוּ אֹתוֹ בַּבֹּקֶר בַּבֹּקֶר and let them collect it MORNING by MORNING, Exod. xvi. 21 ;
 אֶבֶן וְאֶבֶן גְּדוֹלָה STONE and STONE, a great and a small (one), i. e. diverse weights, Deut. xxv. 13 ;
 בְּלִבְּ וּלְבַב in HEART and HEART they speak, i. e. while they profess one thing they mean another, Ps. xii. 3; וְהָיָה כָּעֵם כִּפְהֵן בְּעֶבֶד it shall be, LIKE people LIKE priest, LIKE servant LIKE master, &c., Isa. xxiv. 2; וְכַחֲתִי אֲזוּ וְכַחֲתִי עָתָה as my STRENGTH (was) then, EVEN SO (is) my STRENGTH now, Josh. xiv. 11.

6. When, moreover, any demonstrative pronoun is so used, or a singular personal pronoun, referring to an antecedent in the plural number; distribution is generally intended: e. g. זֶה אֶל-זֶה this to this, i. e. one to another, Exod. xiv. 20; גִּדְרַר מִזֶּה וְגִדְרַר מִזֶּה a wall from this, and a wall from this, i. e. on each side, Numb. xxii. 24; כִּי-תֵצֵא לְמִלְחָמָה עַל-אֹיְבֶיךָ וּנְתַנּוּ יְהוָה when thou goest to the war against thy enemies, and Jehovah shall give HIM, i. e. wholly, or every one of them, Deut. xxi. 10; וַתִּקַּח הָאִשָּׁה אֶת-שְׁנֵי הָאֲנָשִׁים וַתִּצְפְּנֵן so the woman takes BOTH OF THE MEN and hides HIM, i. e. wholly, or each one of them, Josh. ii. 4.

7. The context will always shew us, whether we are to consider these repetitions emphatical, or distributive. There are, however, instances of repetition which fall under neither of the preceding heads, but which are to be ascribed to the simple and unpolished usage of a venerable antiquity. Such is the repetition of the word לְאָמַר, 1 Kings ii. 4, &c.—of whole sentences: as, Gen. vi. 22, xiii. 5, 6, xiv. 5, 8, xxiv. 37, 1 Sam. x. 9.—the introduction of words apparently superfluous; as, “he lifted up his eyes, feet,” &c. Gen. xiii. 10, xviii. 2, xxix. 1, Dan. x. 5: “he put forth his hand,” Gen. viii. 9, 2 Kings vi. 7, &c.; “they arose,” Josh. xviii. 4; “and it came to pass,” וַיְהִי, וַיְהִי; and “behold,” הִנֵּה passim. These apparently superfluous terms are, however, of immense importance to the unity and perspicuity of the context.*

* See also Weiske on the Greek Pleonasms, Isagoge, § 15, &c., Ed. 1813.

On the emphatic repetition of Words, or Phrases.

223. If, upon the addition of one word or phrase, another will be made more definite, specific, &c., then, upon the repetition of either, a still greater definiteness, perspicuity, energy, fervency, or the like, will be given to the context : * e. g. שׁוּבוּ מִדְּרָכֵיכֶם הָרָעִים TURN YE, TURN YE, from your evil ways, Ezek. xxxiii. 11 ; רִיבוּ בְּאִמְכֶם רִיבוּ הַיְבֵל יְהוָה הַיְבֵל יְהוָה הַיְבֵל יְהוָה הַיְבֵל THE TEMPLE OF JEHOVAH, THE TEMPLE OF JEHOVAH, THE TEMPLE OF JEHOVAH (are) these, Jer. vii. 4 : i. e. They insisted that the idols which were called Temples, (هَيْكَلٌ, see Pococke's Spec. Hist. Arab., p. 91.) REALLY contained the Deity : a principle of heathenism still prevailing in the East. For similar expressions, see Is. xxxviii. 19, xliii. 25, Ps. xciv. 3, Cant. vii. 1, &c.

2. So with the pronouns : מִשְׁגַּבִּי וּמִפְּלִטִי-לִי my high tower, and MY deliverer FOR ME, i. e. my sure deliverer, Ps. cxliv. 2 ; מִי יִתֵּן מוֹתִי אֶנְי תַּחֲתֶיךָ who will put MY DEATH, I, in the place of thee! i. e. O that some one had slain me, even me, instead of thee! 2 Sam. xix. 1 ; וּבְגֵרֵיכֶם אֲתָם יִפְּלוּ and YOUR carcasses (even) YOU shall fall, Numb. xiv. 32. See Artt. 216. 4. 219. 5.

So מִשְׁעֵן וּמִשְׁעֹנָה, masc. and fem. i. e. every species of support, Is. iii. 1. See the Concessus of Hariri by Schultens, p. 36, and the Moallakah Antaræ by Menil (Lugd. Bat. 1816.), v. 71, شَيْظَمَةٌ وشَيْظَمٌ, with the Scholia of Zúzení, at p. 113.

* For similar examples in the Arabic, see Mr. de Sacy's Gram., vol. ii. Art. 671—2—676; Moolla Jāmi's Commentary on the Kāfia, p. ٢٢٥. And with the pronouns, Mr. de Sacy's Gram., vol. ii. pp. 359, 360. Ed. 1810.

3. Hence also, words put in the plural number, (which according to our system, consists of the juxta-position of two words) may be considered as emphatical: e. g. אֱלֹהִים God; אֲדֹנָיִם Lord; בָּעֲלָיִם Baal; עֲשֶׁתְרוֹת Ash-taroth, Venus; חֵכְמוֹת real wisdom, &c. by way of eminence, and which may hence be termed the plural of excellence.*

On Nouns put in the Definite State of Construction.

224. Of this Construction or Regimen, as it has been sometimes called, there are two kinds (see Artt. 143. 217. 7.). The first we have termed the Definite, the second the Distinctive, state of Construction; merely to denote the different kinds of words thus used.

2. Of the definite state of construction, we may reckon two kinds: viz. the Immediate, and the Mediate. The Immediate is that which presents two, or more, substantive nouns (not being names for the same thing) so connected that the idea, conveyed by them, becomes sufficiently defined for the purposes of the speaker or writer. The Mediate is that, in which this is done by the intervention of one or more of the particles.†

* In the former editions of this work, בְּחַמּוֹת, Behemoth was placed under this head. But see my Translation, &c., of Job xl. 15, with the notes.

† The truth is, however, the particles themselves are really nouns, as already intimated; and, when they intervene, the construction is either that of apposition, or, of definite construction, or both. We have adopted the term Mediate, both here and in Art. 217. 5, in order to conform to the usual mode of considering these skeletons of words. Hereafter, perhaps, we may get rid of this distinction.—According to the doctrine of the Arabian Grammarians, every example of Immediate construction that can occur, may be resolved by an equivalent Mediate one: e. g. غلام زيد the slave of Zaid, is, according

3. Examples of nouns in the definite state of construction, termed Immediate: שֶׁר־צָבָאוּ captain (of) his host, 1 Sam. xxvi. 5; מְנַשֵּׁי בְנֵי־הַנְּבִיאִים of the wives (of) the sons (of) the prophets, 2 Kings iv. 1; נְהַר־פָּרַת the river (of) Euphrates, Gen. xv. 18; קְרִית הַצּוֹת the town (of) Khuzoth, Numb. xxii. 39; בְּתוּלַת בַּת־עַמִּי the virgin (of) the daughter (of) my people, Jer. xiv. 17.

4. In these and all similar passages, this juxta-position of words has the property of defining the idea presented by the first, just as that kind of apposition does, to which we have given the term Identity. But, should it be necessary further to define such combination, this is done either by prefixing the definite article, or by affixing a pronoun to the last of these, as the case may require; as in 1 Sam. xxvi. 5, and 2 Kings iv. 1, above. In the following, the idea presented by the first of the words so placed, is made more distinct or specific, just as it is by that state of apposition, which we have termed specific. It will readily be seen, that the distinctions here mentioned, can arise only from the character of the qualifying terms, in each case. Examples: בְּגָדֵי הַקֹּדֶשׁ garments (of) holiness, i. e. holy or sacred garments, Exod. xxix. 29; אֶבֶן . . . אֵבֶן a stone, or weight (of) justice, i. e. a just weight, Deut. xxv. 15; אִשְׁתַּת נְעוּרַיִם a wife (of) youth, i. e. a young wife, or, it may signify, a wife married in one's youth, Isaiah liv. 6. See also Gen. xli. 42, Exod. xi. 2, Judg. viii. 13, 1 Sam. i. 11, Jer. xi. 20, &c.

to them, equivalent to غِلاَمٌ لُرَيْدٍ. So خَاتَمٌ مِّنْ فِضَّةٍ, to خَاتَمٌ فِضَّةٍ a ring of (or out of) silver; and ضَرْبٌ وَقَعَ فِي الْيَوْمِ, to ضَرْبٌ الْيَوْمِ i. e. a stroke or blow of to-day, to a stroke or blow happening to-day. See the Shurho Moolla Jāmi, p. ۲۰۲, &c. This process, according to my notions, is making the construction less simple than it stood originally; in other words, it is making a plain matter difficult, by placing a greater number of words in construction than in the original example. It shews, however, that both signify the same thing. See Art. 219. 4. note.

5. The case will be the same, should a sentence stand in the place of the qualifying word: * e. g. לֹא יָדַעְתִּי אֶשְׂמַע a lip (or language of which) I knew not, I heard, Ps. lxxxi. 6 ; יָתַרְתָּ עֲשָׂה יִתְבָּרַךְ the acquisition (of that which) he made, they have lost, Jer. xlvi. 36 ; לֹא אֶחְבֵּל קוּמֵי into the hands (of those) I am not able to rise against, Lam. i. 14. See Ps. lxxv. 5, cxxix. 6, Jer. ii. 8, &c.

6. This construction, however, will admit of more than one solution. For, first ; If we consider the particles, &c. as nouns, which I believe we ought to do, we shall have nothing more than an immediate state of construction, with the preceding word in the proper form for such a state (Art. 171.). And, 2dly, If we suppose the relative pronoun אֲשֶׁר who, which, &c. to have been omitted by the ellipsis,—which has been preferred by Schræderus,—the construction will also be explained.

7. In some cases, however, the order is inverted, and has hence been termed Hypallage; e. g. סִיָּגִים פְּסָה argenteum scoriarum, for scorix argenti, Prov. xxvi. 23 ; לְרֵבֹן הָעֵצִים oblatio lignorum, for ligna oblationum. See also Lev. v. 15, vii. 21, xxii. 4, Deut. xii. 3, Josh. ii. 6, 1 Kings xvii. 14, Ezek. xxi. 30, Esth. ix. 19.

8. As this combination takes place, only for the purpose of presenting some one definite idea to the mind, should it be necessary further to define or qualify the terms used by the addition of any pronoun, the definite article, &c. ; such pronoun, &c. will generally be added to the last : e. g. הַר קְדוֹשִׁי the mountain (of) my holiness, i. e. my holy mountain, Ps. ii. 6 ; בְּסִלְיֵי כֶסֶף the images (of) thy silver, i. e. thy silver images, Isaiah xxx. 22 ;

* A similar practice exists in the Persian, with respect to the vowels which mark the state of construction : e. g. وَقْتِ رَفْتَنَ the time of going, &c. So أَرَادَتِ بِي چُونِ the will of (him who is) without a when, i. e. is eternal.

But in these cases both رفتن and چون may also be considered as nouns.

הָאֵלֶּה עֲמֵי הַתְּעֻבוֹת הָאֵלֶּה the peoples (of) abominations, these,
i. e. these abominable people, Ezra ix. 14.

See also Exod. xxviii. 38, Neh. ix. 14, Ps. iv. 2, lix. 18, cx. 2, cxix. 123, Is. ii. 20, xxx. 22, xxxi. 7, Dan. ix. 24. For similar constructions in the New Testament, see Rom. vii. 24, Col. i. 13, &c.

9. In the preceding examples, the qualified, and qualifying, noun have been considered as in juxta-position with one another; still this is neither necessary, nor is it always found; for, in some instances, we have the intervention of particles, such as the definite article, Art. 221. 6, &c.; in others, whole words or phrases: e. g. מְשַׁלְּחֵם מְנוֹת אִישׁ לְרֵעֵהוּ; יְהוָה יָצָרָה אֱלֹהִים אֶרֶץ וְשָׁמַיִם THE LORD GOD'S making (of) the earth and heavens, Gen. ii. 4; בְּשִׁלְחֵךְ אֹתוֹ; שָׂרְגוֹן בְּשִׁלְחֵךְ אֹתוֹ IN SARGON'S sending him, Is. xx. 1.

See also Gen. vii. 6, Josh. xx. 3, Is. v. 24, xx. 1, Prov. xxv. 8, &c. Storr thinks these examples are not to be considered as in the state of construction, but to be accounted for in some other way (Observ., p. 282.). I believe it is of little importance whether we consider them in this point of view, or as in apposition with the preceding noun, or otherwise qualifying it, the end arrived at is precisely the same in every point of view: the only question here being, whether one or more words do not parenthetically intervene between such qualified, and qualifying terms. That such is the case, perhaps, there can be little doubt; and, as the usage of the language, in this particular, is all we wish to ascertain, we need not be very anxious as to the terms used, particularly where no change of vowels or consonants can be appealed to as decisive on the subject. The parallelism of the following passage requires that the construction be considered as definite: הוּא אֲשִׁיר תִּשְׂבַּט אֲפִי וּמִטָּה הוּא בְיָדָם וְעָמִי O Ashshur, the rod of my anger: even the rod is he,—for their sake, or, in their hand,—OF my wrath,* Is. x. 5.

* So in the Arabic كَمَا خَطَّ الْكِتَابُ بِكَفِّ يَوْمًا يَهُودِيٍّ just as the book was written by the hand, one day, of a Jew. See Gram. Arab. M. de Sacy, vol. ii. p. 125—6.

10. Great care should be taken in translating passages found in this state of construction, i. e. in considering whether the last of such words is to be taken in an active, or passive, sense: e. g. מוֹאָב הָרִפְתָּ הַרְפַּת מוֹאָב the reproach of Moab, Zeph. ii. 8, is not to be understood as the reproach afflicting Moab, but that which they inflict on others. So הָרִפְתָּ עֲבָדֶיךָ Ps. lxxxix. 51, the reproach of thy servants, is that which they suffer, not that which they inflict. In like manner, . . . הַיּוֹשְׁבִים הַחַמָּס the violence (exercised by the) inhabitants, Ezek. xii. 19; but בְּגִי יִרְבֵּעַל . . . הַחַמָּס the violence (suffered by the) children of Jerubbaal, Judg. ix. 24. וְעֲנַת־דָּל the cry of the poor, Prov. xxi. 13: but וְעֲנַת סְדֹם the cry (excited by the oppression) of Sodom, Gen. xviii. 20. The same holds good with reference to the pronouns. See Gen. xvi. 15, L. 4, Jer. li. 35, 2 Sam. xvi. 12, Is. xxi. 2, Ps. xcvi. 8, lvi. 13, &c. See also Art. 146. 8. note.

11. The following are examples of what has been termed the “Mediate state of construction,” i. e. when the connexion of nouns thus situated is, in one way or other, defined or modified by the intervention of one or more of the particles * הַיִּזִּיר מִיַּעַר a boar out of the forest, i. e. of the forest, or, a forest boar, Ps. lxxx. 14; לְאֲמִים מֵרְחוֹק people of, or from a distance, i. e. distant, Is. xlix. 1.

See also Exod. i. 14, Ps. xc. 4, Cant. iii. 8, Jer. v. 6, &c. Of this kind are the passages לְאֲסָף מִזְמוֹר לְדָוִד—a psalm of David,—of Asaph; לְאֲשֶׁר לְשֹׁלֹמֹה which (is) Solomon's, i. e. belonging to Solomon, Cant. i. 1, &c., where the proprietor, author, possessor, or the like, is designated.†

* If we consider these particles as nouns,—which we may do,—all these cases may be resolved into those of Immediate construction or apposition, as before.—New Test., John iii. 31, vi. 31, Rom. iii. 26, iv. 16, Gal. iii. 7, 8, &c.

† It has already been remarked (Art. 224. 2.), that the Arabian Grammarians consider every construction of this kind, as equivalent in signification to those, in which the particle is not introduced. In most cases, however, the particles tend to define the relation more specifically.

12. This rule, however, with its exemplifications, coincides with the corresponding one given under the article of Mediate apposition (Art. 219. 4.), i. e. the preceding word generally suffers no abbreviation, either in the quantity of its vowels, or in the number of its consonants. The words so connected may, by taking the particle as a noun, all be considered as in Immediate apposition. In the following cases the first, so connected, is put in the definite state of construction, e. g. מִשְׁקִימֵי בֹקֶר . . . מְאַחֲרֵי בֶנְשֶׁף those arising early in the morning . . . lingering after the twilight, Isa. v. 11; יֹשְׁבֵי בְּאֶרֶץ צְלִמּוֹת dwellers in the land of the shadow of death, Ib. ix. 1, although a particle follows in each case.

See also 2 Sam. i. 21, Ps. ii. 12, lxxxiv. 4, Isa. xiv. 19, xxviii. 9, Jer. xxiii. 23, Ezek. xiii. 2, xxi. 17, &c. So also with the conjunction ו; as, חֵכְמָה וְדַעַת wisdom and knowledge, Isa. xxxiii. 6. With אִין: as, אִין מְיָדָם there is no deliverer (of) from their hands, Lam. v. 8.

13. It must appear from these passages, that, either the particle singly, here found so influencing the preceding word, must have been considered as a noun, or else the following context as a whole must have been supposed to exercise the influence, which the second of the nouns in construction usually does. See Art. 217. 5.

14. Cases will occur, moreover, in which either a noun, already definite, or two nouns, already in construction, will require to be placed before another, or more nouns, in a similar regimen. In all such cases, a preposition will precede the last of these: e. g. לִי וְאֵנִי לִי my love (is) MINE, and I (am) HIS, Cant. ii. 16; אֲבְרָם בְּרִוּוֹ אָבְרָם לְאֵל עֲלִיוֹן Abram (is) blessed of God most high: where the whole proposition, rendered particular by the proper name Abram, is in a state equivalent to that of construction with לְאֵל following: אֱלֹהֵי הָרוּחֹת לְכָל-בָּשָׂר The God of the spirits of ALL FLESH, Numb. xvi. 22. comp. Lev. xiv. 54; 2 Sam. ii. 8; Hag. i. 1; Gen. vii. 11: see my Lexicon, p. 317:—1 Kings xv. 23. In Gen. xlvi. 26, we have a transposition, viz. כָּל-הַנְּפָשׁ הַבָּאָה כָּל-הַנְּפָשׁ לִיעֲקֹב הַבָּאָה, for לִיעֲקֹב הַבָּאָה, Every soul (person) OF JACOB, which came, &c. So the Arab. العبد زيد e. g. عبد زيد Zaid's servant.—In many such cases ש, or אֲשֶׁר, will be introduced, as כָּרְמִי שְׁלִי my vineyard WHICH (is) MINE: i. e. my own vineyard, Cant. i. 6; שִׁיר הַשִּׁירִים אֲשֶׁר לְשִׁלְמֹה, The song of songs, WHICH (is) SOLOMON'S, Ib. 1. comp. Ib. iii. 7; 1 Kings vi. 22; 2 Chron. i. 6; Gen. xli. 43.

*On the DISTINCTIVE State of Construction.

225. It has been remarked (Art. 217. 7.), that in cases of this sort, the preceding word to be qualified must always be an attributive. The effect here produced is, that of rendering distinct, or specific, the person or thing designated by such attribute; the qualified word being always an attributive, involving the signification of a substantive (Ib.), e. g. גְּדוֹל הַעֵצָה great (of) counsel, i. e. a great being, &c. (of) counsel, or counselling being, Jer. xxxii. 19; יִשְׂרָאֵל קְדוֹשׁ יִשְׂרָאֵל the holy (one of) Israel, Isa. i. 4; תְּמִימֵי דָרֶךְ those perfect (of) way, i. e. men of perfect way, Ps. cxix. 1; שְׁפַל-רוּחַ low (of) spirit, i. e. an humble man, Prov. xxix. 23; מְשִׁיחַ יְהוָה the anointed of the Lord, 2 Sam. i. 14.

* This kind of construction is termed by the Arabian Grammarians الإضافة اللفظية i. e. verbal construction, in order to distinguish it from that, which we have termed “the definite,” which they style الإضافة المعنوية the logical, or significant, construction. It is curious enough to observe, that they exemplify this sort of construction in three different ways; which may serve to shew, that, in fact, they all amount to the same thing in meaning: e. g. حَسَنٌ وَجْهٌ handsome (of) face, in immediate apposition حَسَنٌ وَجْهٌ handsome (of) face, in the state of definite construction; and حَسَنٌ وَجْهًا id. when the latter, or defining, word is put absolutely, and construed as a noun of specification, تَمْيِيزٌ. See M. de Sacy's Arab. Gram., vol. ii. p. 161, &c. So Rev. xii. 1. γυνή περιβεβλημένη τὸν ἥλιον. Arab. امْرَأَةٌ مَلْبُوسَةٌ الشَّمْسِ.

2. Under this general head, may be placed certain idiomatical usages with which the Learner will often meet in his progress. These are, phrases having אִישׁ man, each, בֶּן son, בַּעַל Lord, possessor, אֲנָשִׁי, אֲנָשֵׁי, מְתֵי men, &c. for the first member, followed by certain others, in the definite state of construction: e. g. אִישׁ מוֹת הַתְּהָה thou art a man of death, i. e. deserving death, 1 Kings ii. 26; בֶּן־שִׁבְעַת שָׁנִים יְהוֹאָשׁ בְּמָלְכוֹ the child of seven years (was) Joash when his reign (began), i. e. he was seven years old, 2 Kings xii. 1; אִישׁ בֶּן־מוֹת הוּא a son of death, (is) he, i. e. he shall die, 1 Sam. xx. 31; אִישׁ דְּבָרִים a man of (both) lips, i. e. loquacious, Job xi. 2; אִישׁ אֱמָת a man of words, i. e. a speaker, Exod. iv. 10; אִישׁ אֱמָת a man of truth, i. e. a true man, Neh. vii. 2; אֲנָשֵׁי הַשֵּׁם men of name, i. e. famous, Gen. vi. 4; אֲנָשֵׁי־חַיִל men of might, i. e. mighty men, Gen. xlvii. 6; מְתֵי מִסְפָּר men of number, i. e. few, Gen. xxxiv. 30; אִישׁ בַּעַל שְׁעָר a man possessed of hair, i. e. hairy, 2 Kings i. 8; כָּל־בַּעַל פֶּנֶף every (one) possessed of wing, i. e. winged bird, Prov. i. 17.

So אֲנָשֵׁי כַדָּם men of Sodom, Gen. xix. 4, for Sodomites. See Gen. xxiii. 3, xxiv. 13, Numb. xxi. 28, Josh. xxiv. 11, Judg. ix. 2, x. 1, Jer. ii. 16, Ezek. xvi. 26, Ps. cxlix. 2, Cant. i. 5, &c. To this class may be referred, בְּנֵי־הָאֱלֹהִים sons of God, pious persons; and בָּנוֹת הָאָדָם daughters of men, low, impious women, Gen. vi. 2, &c.

On the Construction of the Numerals.

226. The numerals in Hebrew being all substantives, are put, either in apposition, or in the definite state of construction, with the word denoting the thing numbered: e. g. In apposition: אֶלֶף וּמֵאָה הַכֶּסֶף one thousand and one hundred (pieces of) silver, אֵילִם שְׁנַיִם rams two, עָרִים שְׁתַּיִם cities two, בָּנִים שְׁלֹשָׁה, or שְׁלֹשָׁה בָּנִים, sons three, or three sons, בָּנִים שְׁלֹשִׁים thirty sons. In construction: שְׁלֹשֶׁת אֲנָשִׁים three, or, a triad, of men; שְׁנֵי בָּנִים two sons; שְׁתֵּי בָנוֹת two daughters.

2. The dual and decimal numerals, however, signifying numbers above ten, such as עֶשְׂרִים, twenty; מֵאָתַיִם, two hundred, &c. prefer the state of apposition.

On the Concordance of the Numerals with the Thing, &c., numbered.

3. The numerals from three to ten, inclusively, are mostly in the gender different from that of the thing numbered, for the sake perhaps of variety: in this case the word, denoting the thing, &c., numbered, is put in the plural number: e. g. שִׁבְעָה כִּבְּשִׁים, or שִׁבְעַת כִּבְּשִׁים seven male lambs; שִׁבְעַת נְשִׁבָּע כִּבְּשִׁוֹת seven female lambs. The numeral is, here, taken as a collective noun, and stands, either in apposition, or in the state of definite construction, with the thing numbered.

4. In like manner, when the numeral signifies any number exceeding ten, it may likewise disagree in gender with the thing, &c. to be numbered; while the thing, &c. numbered, will be put in the singular number: e. g. שִׁבְעַת עֶשְׂרִים וְשִׁבְעִים וְשִׁבְעָה אִישׁ seventy and seven men; שִׁבְעַת עֶשְׂרִים וְשִׁבְעִים וְשִׁבְעָה שָׁנָה seventeen years; חֲמִישׁ וְשִׁנָּה וּמֵאָתַת שָׁנָה five years, and a hundred year, Gen. v. 6.

5. There is nothing peculiar in the construction of such numerals as, מֵאָה an hundred, and אֶלֶף a thousand; other numerals being made to agree with them or not, according to the preceding rules, while they will be put, either in apposition or construction, in the singular or plural number, according to those rules: e. g. מֵאָה וְאַלְפִים וְשִׁשְׁת־אֶלְפִים וְאַרְבַּע־מֵאוֹת. אֶלֶף וְשִׁמְנִים וְאַלְפִים וְשִׁשְׁת־אֶלְפִים וְאַרְבַּע־מֵאוֹת. an hundred thousand, and eighty thousand, and six thousands, and four hundreds, Numb. ii. 9. See Gen. v. where a large number of examples occurs.

Other modes of Construction.

227. In many cases, too, when the numeral exceeds the number one, the thing, &c. numbered is put in the plural, whether the numeral precede or follow it; the gender is regulated as before: e. g. אֵילִם שְׁנַיִם-עָשָׂר rams twelve; Numb. vii. 87; שְׁנַיִם עָשָׂר . . . כְּבָשִׂים lambs male . . . twelve, Ib.; פָּרִי שְׁנַיִם עָשָׂר twelve bullocks, Ib.; עֲשָׂרִים וְאַרְבָּעָה פָּרִים twenty and four bullocks, Ib. v. 88.

See also Gen. xvii. 20, xxv. 16, xxvi. 12, xxxii. 15, 23, Josh. iv. 2, xxi. 19, 2 Sam. xix. 18, 1 Kings iv. 13, Jer. xxxviii. 10, Ezra viii. 35, &c. And, vice versâ, חֲמֵשׁ שָׁנָה five year, 2 Kings xxii. 1, &c.

2. The intermediate numbers between ten and twenty, twenty and thirty, &c. are regulated by the principles already laid down; that is, either by apposition, or definite construction, Immediate or Mediate; e. g. עֶשְׂרִים שִׁבְעָה עָשָׂר seventeen, in Immediate apposition; שִׁבְעַת וְשִׁבְעִים seven and seventy, Mediate apposition: שְׁנַיִם עָשָׂר twelve; עֶשְׂרִים וְשִׁבְעָה עָשָׂר eighteen, definite construction.

3. In many cases, when the numeral is in apposition, it is to be taken as an ordinal: e. g. אַרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה the fortieth year, Deut. i. 3; i. e. taking it in the order of computation, the year forty, or forty (by) year. So Gen. i. 5. יוֹם אֶחָד day, one, i. e. the first. See also Exod. xii. 6, Numb. xiii. 2, Deut. xv. 9, 1 Kings xvi. 10, 2 Kings viii. 16, xii. 2, Ezek. xxix. 17, Dan. i. 1, 21, vii. 1, ix. 1, xi. 1, &c.

4. When it is necessary to qualify the thing, &c. numbered by some attributive, this attributive will agree with it, either in a formal, or logical, point of view, at the pleasure of the writer: e. g. in the first case, שְׁמֹנִים וְחָמֵשׁ אִישׁ נֹשֵׂא אֶפְדָּו eighty and five men, (each, or the whole) bearing (sing.) an ephod, 1 Sam. xxii. 18.—In the second, חֲמִשִּׁים אִישׁ רָצִים fifty men running (pl.), 1 Kings i. 5.

5. The thing numbered, measured, &c. may also be considered as a specifying term (Art. 219. note), and construed as absolute, with reference to the preceding noun; as, שְׁלֹשִׁים בָּנִים thirty sons; אֶלֶף כֶּסֶף a thousand

(of) silver, &c. We nevertheless have, occasionally, the state of construction : as, שְׁתֵּי-לֶחֶם two (pieces, &c. of) bread, 1 Sam. x. 4, &c. : מֵאֵת שָׁנָה (Art. 226. 4.).

6. As it is easy to supply certain names of weight and measure, on account of their frequent occurrence ; they are often omitted by the ellipsis : e. g. וַיִּשְׁקְלוּ אֶת-שִׁבְרֵי וַיִּשְׁקְלוּ אֶת-שִׁבְרֵי שְׁלֹשִׁים כֶּסֶף so they weigh my price thirty (shekels of) silver, Zech. xi. 12 ; וַיִּמְדוּ שֵׁשׁ-שְׁעָרִים so he measures six (measures of) barley, Ruth iii. 15. 17 ; בְּאֶחָד לַחֹדֶשׁ in the first (day) of the month, Deut. i. 3 ; וַיַּעֲשׂוּ אֶת- הַפֶּסַח בְּרֵאשִׁוֹן (month), Numb. ix. 5 ; וַיַּעֲשׂוּ אֶת- הַפֶּסַח בְּרֵאשִׁוֹן בְּאֶחָד לַחֹדֶשׁ in the first (month) in the first (day) of the month, Ezek. xxix. 17.

See also Gen. xx. 16, xlv. 22, Lev. xxiii. 17, 1 Sam. x. 4, Ezek. xlv. 21. And, where some of these ellipses are supplied, Gen. xxiii. 15, Lev. xxvii. 3, 6, Ruth ii. 17, &c. See also Bos on the Greek ellipses, p. 4, Ed. 1813.

The ordinals are construed like other attributives.

LECTURE XVI.

ON THE COMPLEMENTS OF WORDS GENERALLY, AND OF VERBS IN PARTICULAR.

228. It will perhaps readily be granted, that the character of the word or words, necessary to complete any sentence, must very much depend on the signification of the preceding ones ; or, which is the same thing, on the signification intended to be conveyed in them by the Writer. I may say, for example, I am now riding, equitans ego ; or, am a riding. But it may also be necessary to state, whether this be on a horse, in a carriage, &c. as also to, or from, what place I am thus proceeding ; or, for what purpose, &c. The same will hold good of all attributives.* A man may be said to be swift generally, or swift on foot, swift in the chase,—in the pursuit of an enemy,—to revenge,—to do good or evil, or a thousand other things, which it may be necessary for a Writer or Speaker to state.

2. All verbs are necessarily attributive in signification ; and, from what we have seen, as to their etymology, there is strong reason to suspect, that they are composed of nothing more than nouns put in a state of conjugation, or combination, with one or other of the pronouns. If, then, attributive nouns will occasionally stand in need of such complementary words, in order to complete, or modify, the sentences in which they are found ; the same must necessarily be true of the same words, when found in the form of verbs. Usually, however, this has been stated by saying, that nouns, derived from verbs, are subject to the same mode of construction as the verbs are from which they descend. I prefer the contrary method ; because, we can see why nouns, as such, require this kind of construction ; of verbs, we know nothing on the other supposition.

3. We have seen that nouns, either substantive, or attributive, may be qualified by the addition of other words, put in the state of apposition, of definite construction, immediate, or mediate, or absolutely, just as the signification of such word may require, or, as the intention of the Writer may be. The same is the case with verbs, whether active, passive, transitive, intransitive, or

4. In treating on the complements, or qualifying words, of substantives and attributives, we adopted the terms Immediate, and Mediate, as best suited to our purpose on that occasion. We shall use the same now, because they are sufficiently easy and intelligible, and because it will be interesting to find the same principles prevailing throughout every part of this Language.

5. The influence, then, of any noun or verb (arising out of its signification, or the intention of the Writer,) may extend to one or more subsequent words, with some variation of the sense in each; e. g. I may say, as before, "I am riding a horse." Here I would term the influence of the verb riding, Simple; because it affects one object only, which is here "a horse." But, if I say, "I rode a horse towards the city at full speed," then I should term the influence of the verb, Various; because the subsequent terms are variously affected by it. I prefer this method of considering the influence of verbs, &c., because the Latin cases of nominative, genitive, accusative, &c., as taken by Schrœderus and others, are ill calculated to convey any just notions on this subject; and, because these distinctions are altogether foreign to this language. The truth is, the words added here, as in the rules already given, are nothing more than terms added for the purpose of defining, &c., the signification of such verb, and may be resolved by recurring to one or other of those rules.

* Let it be remembered, however, some verbs which are at one time transitive, will at another be intransitive, in these languages; so, ضرب برجله he struck with his foot, or kicked; which, in innumerable instances, is transitive. See Ludolf. Gram. Eth., p. 32. ed. 1702. Freytag's Hamasa, p. 1*

229. Having determined, then, whether the signification of any verb or verbal noun, is to be taken actively, or passively (Art. 146. 8. note); the influence of its action or passion, considered with reference to the subsequent terms, either in Immediate, or Mediate, connexion with it, will always be either Simple, or Various, just as the signification of such verb shall require, or, as the intention of the Writer or Speaker may be.—Examples of active verbs, and Verbal nouns, in Immediate connexion with the following term, and where the influence is, consequently, simple; נַעֲשֶׂה אָדָם let us make MAN, Gen. i. 26; זָרַע זָרַע seeding, or producing, SEED, Ib. 29.

2.—In Mediate connexion, and where the influence is also simple: בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים אֶת הַשָּׁמַיִם God created THE HEAVENS, Gen. i. 1; וַיֵּרָא . . . אֶת הָאֹר . . . וַיִּבְרָל and he saw . . . THE LIGHT, Ib. 4; וַיִּבְרָל . . . בֵּין הָאֹר וּבֵין הַחֹשֶׁךְ and he divided . . . BETWEEN the light and BETWEEN the darkness, Ib.; וַיִּקְרָא לָאֹר . . . וְלַחֹשֶׁךְ קֶרָא and he called the LIGHT . . . and THE DARKNESS he called Ib. 5; מִבְּדִיל בֵּין מַיִם (a thing) dividing BETWEEN the waters, Ib. 6.

3.—Both in Immediate, and Mediate, connexion, and where the influence is various: עֲשֶׂה בְּרֵי לְמִינֹו (a tree) producing FRUIT, ACCORDING TO ITS KIND, Gen. i. 11; מְזֵרֵעַ זָרַע לְמִינֵהוּ (herb) producing SEED, AFTER its KIND, Ib. 12.

Note. The proper office of the particles here is, to point out the precise character of this influence.

The verb הָיָה, construed with ל, will signify either to have, or to become, according to the context: e. g. לְעֶשְׂרֵי הָיָה צֹאן the rich man had flocks, 2 Sam. xii. 2; וַיְהִי לָדָם so they shall become blood, i. e. the waters, Exod. iv. 9. See my Lexicon under הָיָה.

4. Where the connexion is Mediate, and the influence various: וְהָיוּ לְמְאֹרֹת בְּרָקִיעַ הַשָּׁמַיִם לְהַאֲרִיר אֶל-הָאָרֶץ and they shall be FOR lights IN the firmament of the heavens, FOR giving light UPON the earth, and it was so, Gen. i. 15 ; וַיִּתֵּן אֱלֹהִים בְּרָקִיעַ הַשָּׁמַיִם לְהַאֲרִיר : וְלִמְשַׁל בַּיּוֹם וּבַלַּיְלָה וּלְהַבְדִּיל בֵּין הָאוֹר וּבֵין עַל-הָאָרֶץ : וְהַחֲשֵׁד וַיֵּרָא אֱלֹהִים כִּי-טוֹב : and God placed THEM IN the firmament of the heavens FOR giving light UPON the earth, and FOR ruling OVER the day and OVER the night, and FOR dividing BETWEEN the light and BETWEEN the darkness. And God saw THAT (it was) good, Ib. 17. 18.

5. In causative, and other doubly transitive, verbs, the influence will necessarily be various: e. g. וְהִלַּכְתִּיהָ וְהִלַּכְתִּיהָ and I caused HER to walk THE DESERT, Hos. ii. 6 ; מוֹשֵׁב יְחִידִים בֵּיתָהּ who causes THE SOLITARY ones to possess A HOUSE, Ps. lxxviii. 7. In these instances the connexion is Immediate; in the following, it is both Immediate, and Mediate: e. g. וַיִּשָׁב . . . אֶת-הַמֶּלֶךְ דָּבָר and he caused WORD to be returned TO THE KING, 1 Kings ii. 30 ; לְמֹד דַּעַת אֶת-הָעָם he taught KNOWLEDGE TO the people, Eccl. xii. 9. וַיִּשְׁמְעוּ דְבָרַי אֶת-עַמִּי let them cause MY PEOPLE to hear MY WORDS, Jer. xxiii. 22.

6. In the following the connexion is miscellaneous, and some of the verbs are passive: וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יִקְוּוּ הַמַּיִם מִתַּחַת הַשָּׁמַיִם אֶל-מָקוֹם אֶחָד וַתֵּרָא הַיַּבְשָׁה וַיִּהְיֶה כֵן : so God says, Let the waters be gathered FROM BENEATH the heavens TO one place, and let the dry land appear, and it becomes so, Gen. i. 9 ; וְהִרְאָה אֶת-הַכֹּהֵן * וְהִרְאָה אֶת-הַכֹּהֵן * then let it be shewn TO THE priest, Lev. xiii. 49 ; וְהִרְאָה אֶת-הַכֹּהֵן * וְהִרְאָה אֶת-הַכֹּהֵן * which thou wast shewn IN the mount, Exod.

* The particles mostly used with passive verbs, however, are ל and ב. See Gen. xiv. 19, Is. i. 26, lxii. 4, Ezek. xiv. 3, Neh. vi. 1, 1 Chron. v. 20, &c.

xxvi. 30; לֹא תַעֲבֹדֵם thou shalt not cause THEM to be worshipped, Exod. xx. 5, xxiii. 24; יָתֵן אֶת־הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת לְעַבְדֶּיךָ let it be given (i. e.) this land TO thy servants, Num. xxxii. 5.

See also Gen. xxvii. 42, 2 Sam. xxi. 6, Jer. xxxv. 14, &c.

Remarks.

7. A little consideration will shew that the construction must, in all cases, very much depend on the intention of the Writer. It is true, certain constructions only are allowed, because they have been generally adopted; and these are to be known, only from long and constant practice in the language, or, from the use of the Concordance: but, in general, the principle is in the Hebrew, as it is in the English, viz. that the significations of words will greatly be influenced by those, with which they are immediately connected. A few remarks, on the examples given, will make all plain. In the first we have אָדָם נַעֲשֶׂה אִדָּם let us make man. Here, the word man, may be said to be in immediate connexion with the preceding word, and to qualify or restrict its signification, just as אַרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה year does the word אַרְבָּעִים forty, in the phrase אַרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה forty year (Art. 227. 3.); or, as the English word year does the word forty, in the same example, absolutely, as it regards the grammatical construction, and, therefore, just as the تَمَيِّز i. e. the specific construction does in the Arabic (Art. 219, note). This would be exemplified, in that language, by what is termed a juxta-position, النَّصِب, or المفعول به, thus; نَصْنَعُ إِنْسَانًا, or لِنَصْنَعِ إِنْسَانًا, where the last, or qualifying, word is in reality nothing more than a تَمَيِّز, i. e. specification, with reference to the signification of the verb.

The next example (Art. 229.) is perfectly parallel to the Arabic, حَسَنٌ وَجْهًا, or حَسَنٌ وَجْهَةً, handsome (of) face. See Art. 225. note.

8. The next case (Art. 229. 2.) affords an instance of Mediate connexion, that is, in which we have the particle אֵל, falling between the verb and its complementary, or restricting, term, for the purpose of shewing, that the following, not the preceding, word is to be construed as complementary to the signification of the verb. Kimkhi has remarked long ago (see Art. 171. 11. note), that such is the office of this particle. His illustration is the sentence, Judah killed Simeon, יהודה שָׁמַעוֹן הָרַג; where he says, the particle being omitted, it could not be known which is the subjective, or which the objective, case to the verb. This would, indeed, be the case in this, and all similar, passages; and, I believe, this is one of the offices of this particle, and perhaps of all the others so situated. The other particles have, moreover, the force of defining the relation, which the action of the verb has, with reference to the word, or words, which designate its object, either directly or indirectly: e. g. הָלַךְ, construed with אֵל, will signify, he walked towards; with מִן, or מֵן, from; with לְפָנַי, before; with אַחֲרַי, or אַחֲרֵי, after, and so on. Situated, then, as this and other particles are, in Immediate connexion with verbs, they ought to be considered as pointing out the objective, or some such case of the noun affected by them: and hence it is, that the particle אֵת has been said to mark the objective case in active, and the nominative (which is really the objective case) in passive, verbs.*

9. This particle, however, is occasionally found without any such preceding verb; and, in these cases, it seems intended, strongly to impress upon the mind, the force of the word immediately following it, as being of considerable importance. Of this character is the following passage, to which many more might be added: אֵת-עַמּוּד הַעֲנָן לֹא-סָר AS TO the pillar of the cloud, it passed not away, Neh. ix. 19. The verb following is manifestly not passive; אֵת, therefore, does not point out an objective case; on the contrary, it is found in apposition with the nominative of a verb in the active voice, and apparently for the purpose of impressing that word on the reader's mind, as of considerable importance. In most cases, as to, with reference to, or the like, will express its real force: e. g. בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים אֵת הַשָּׁמַיִם God created (I speak) WITH

* The Bengáli particle Kē is used for a similar purpose, as is also the Persian بِه. See Professor Haughton's Bengáli Gram. Art. 90, 91, 92. Sir W. Jones's Pers. Gram., Edit. 9. p. 111.

REFERENCE to the heavens, &c. So וַיִּתְחַלֵּץ אֶת־הָאֱלֹהִים he walked about, i. e. daily exercised himself (I say) WITH REFERENCE to God, Gen. v. 22; וַיֵּצֵא אֶת־הָעִיר and he went out (i. e.) WITH RESPECT to the city,* Exod. ix. 33. That is, generally, any person or thing strongly recommended to the attention of the reader, may, whether it be in the situation of either a nominative, or objective, case, be pointed out by introducing the particle אֶת. See Hosea ii. 23, 24.

10. In the examples (n. 3.) we have both the Immediate, and Mediate, connexion of a verb, or verbal noun, with its complementary words. And here, it will be seen, that, had not the particle ל been prefixed to the last, some ambiguity might have

* Schræderus has endeavoured to explain this sort of construction, by having recourse to a metonymy, by which he says, intransitive verbs take the signification and construction of transitive ones (Synt. R. 69.). For my part, I can see no necessity for this; nor, for introducing the doctrine about nominative, accusative, or other cases, in conformity with the usage of the Latin and Greek Grammars, which in fact drove Schræderus to this expedient. In Hebrew we have no cases. Why then should we talk about something which has no existence, and then coin rule after rule in order to explain it? But, if we can conceive these particles to possess the same defining character, which they do when coming between nouns in construction or apposition (see Art. 219.), we shall have no difficulty in perceiving, why they are sometimes omitted, or else used the one for the other: e. g. וַיָּבֹאוּ אֶרֶץ כְּנָעַן so they enter the land of Canaan, Gen. xlv. 25, for אֶל אֶרֶץ כְּנָעַן into the land of Canaan; וַיָּבֹאוּ אֶל הָעִיר return (to) the city, for אֶל הָעִיר to the city, 2 Sam. xv. 27; וַיַּעֲלוּ שָׁמַיִם וַיֵּרְדוּ הַדְּמוּתוֹ they ascend the heavens, they descend the deeps, Ps. cvii. 26. In all which cases, the latter word in the construction may be considered as merely specific, as in the case of nouns of number, weight, measure, &c. In other instances the particles will vary; as, וַיִּירָא אֶת־הַמֶּלֶךְ 1 Kings i. 51; וַיִּירָא מִפְּנֵי שְׁלֹמֹה he feared the King—he feared from before Solomon, Ib. 50. And Ps. lv. 20, וַיִּירָאוּ אֱלֹהִים they fear God, without a particle. So, with וַיֵּצֵא הָעִיר, he went out (into) the city, 2 Kings xx. 4; וַיֵּצֵא אֶל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ he went out to the altar, Lev. xvi. 18; וַיֵּצֵא מִן־הַבְּוֹר Numb. xxi. 28; וַיֵּצֵא מֵאֵת דָּוִד Numb. xvi. 35; וַיֵּצֵא מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה Ib. xvii. 11. With מִשִּׁי Esth. vii. 8, compare viii. 15; וַיֵּצֵא אֶת־הָעִיר Gen. xlv. 4, &c. As to אֶת in Neh. ix. 19, we have apparently the ellipsis of some such verb as I speak, mean, &c., and, in this view, the case will identify itself with the Arabic construction termed ما اضمرعلي شريطة التفسير i. e. what comprehends a condition of explanation, as, زيدا ضربته (as to) Zaid, I struck him, زيدا مررت به (as to) Zaid, I passed by him. See Jâmi's Com. on Ibn Ulhâjib, p. 127, &c.

arisen, as to the precise sense in which it ought to be taken : or, in other words, as to the precise relation of the latter, to the two former, words. The same has been remarked of words, in the state of Mediate apposition and construction. The principle in each case is one, and the same.

11. With respect to the causative verbs, If we suppose them to be actually composed of two words; which, according to our system, is the case, we shall readily perceive, why two complementary, or restricting, words would be necessary to complete the idea contained in each of them. This is what grammarians usually term a double accusative, just as they do verbs, doubly transitive. It is curious enough to remark, that when such words become passive, the object of one of them will stand as its nominative, that of the other, as the accusative: for this reason, viz. that one of the verbs only, in the compound, takes the passive character, the other remains active: e. g. Lev. xiii. 49, as above, Fac eam videri à sacerdote. This is still more evident in the Arabic, where we have terminations marking these cases: e. g. active,

أَطْعَمْتُ ابْنَكَ لَحْمًا I caused thy son to eat flesh; passive,

أُطْعِمَ ابْنَكَ لَحْمًا thy son was caused to eat bread. See M. de Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. ii. p. 101. In the species, viz. Pihél, and Pūhal, the accessory idea may also be considered as equivalent to an additional word.

12. Of the other examples, nothing need be said: the particles introduced are only such, as the various relations of the words to each other seem to require, in order to present to the mind of the reader the various circumstances which the writer wished to detail; but which without these particles, must have been all error and confusion.

13. What has been here said of the verbs, is true of all the verbal nouns, whether of the Infinitive, or the Participial kind: i. e. the complementary, or defining, word may be put either in the state of apposition, Mediate, or Immediate, or in that of definite construction. The former cases have been sufficiently exemplified; the following are a few instances of the latter. Of infinitives, בְּיָמֵי שֹׁפֵט הַשֹּׁפְטִים in the days of the judges' judging, Ruth i. 1; בְּיָמַי בְּרַבְרֵי בֹרַח from the abundance of my speaking against him, Jer. xxxi. 20; שָׁמַר מִצְוֹתָיו the keeping of his statutes, Deut. viii. 11;

הַדָּן מִשְׁפָּט וְאַהֲבַת הַדָּן the doing of judgment, and the loving of piety, Mic. vi. 8. Of participles, מְבַקְשֵׁי נַפְשִׁי seekers of my soul, וְדֹרְשֵׁי רָעָתִי and followers out of my evil, Ps. xxxviii. 13 ; נֹשְׂאֵי מִגְוֹן וְדֹרְגֵי קִשְׁתָּהּ carriers of the shield, and treaders of the bow, 2 Chron. xiv. 7 ; מְשִׁיבַת נַפְשׁ restorer of the soul, מְחַיֵּית פְּתִי instructor of the simple, מְשִׂמְחֵי לֵב delighters of the heart, &c., Ps. xix. 8, 9. See also Gen. ix. 10, xxiii. 10, xxxi. 16, 2 Sam. v. 8, Is. xxxviii. 18, liii. 4, Lam. i. 4, Joel i. 8, Ps. xxxviii. 6, Cant. ii. 5, &c. With pronouns, Ps. xxxvii. 2, Prov. ii. 9, ix. 18, &c.

On apparently Elliptical Constructions.

230. Some active,* neuter, and all passive verbs, being such as to include within themselves the sense proper for their object, complement, or other restriction, will stand in need of no other for that purpose, when their influence is simple ; but, when it is various, the connexion will be either Immediate, or Mediate, as before. In the one case, the connexion may be termed Implicit, in the others, Explicit. N. B. This has been usually styled by the Grammarians, “Constructio prægnaus.” Examples: לֹא בָרַתְּ רַבִּית thou hast not made abundance, or gain, Psalm xliv. 13.

This is an instance in which the influence may be said to be simple, and implicit ; but, when we add בְּמַחֲירֵיהֶם by their price, it is various, and necessarily explicit ; and we have the particle ב, introduced for the purpose of pointing this out. So בְּלִישְׁרָשׁ it hath not struck root into the earth, Is. xl. 24. See Jer.

* These are, for the most part, verbs of the Pihél and Hiphhíl species, which have been formed from substantive nouns, Artt. 154. 8. 157. 5, &c. See Glass. Philol., Ed. Dathe, pp. 185—254, &c. Storr, p. 15, &c. For similar instances in the Arabic, see M. de Sacy’s Gram., vol. ii. Art. 653—657. See also Bos. Ellipses Græcæ, Ed. 1813, p. 2. Freytag’s Hamasa, p. 6, line 22. Ludolf. Gram. Eth., p. 32, 3.

x. 18, Josh. xxiv. 20, &c. So הִטְהַרְרִי cleanse yourselves, or rather, become ye clean, Gen. xxxv. 2. See also Ib. xxv. 22.

2. Of this character are the following examples, which have usually been considered as impersonal: לוֹ הָרָהּ HE became hot to himself (OR, HEAT became hot to him), Ps. xviii. 8; אֶל-יָחַר בְּעֵינֵי אֲדֹנָי let IT not become hot (i. e. let not heat exist) in the eyes of my Lord, Gen. xxxi. 35; אֶל יָרַע בְּעֵינֶיךָ let not EVIL be in thy eyes, Ib. xxi. 12; וַתִּצָּר לְדָוִד and (pressure) pressed upon David, 1 Sam. xxx. 6: * לֹא תִמְטִיר עָלֶיהָ (rain) rains not upon it, Amos iv. 7.

3. So with passive verbs and participles; as, וְאָמְרוּ נֹאֲשׁ so they said, IT has become desperate, Jer. xviii. 12, i. e. אָמַר נֹאֲשׁ, OR דָּבַר נֹאֲשׁ THE MATTER has become desperate; נִשְׁעָרָה מְאֹד IT became very tempestuous, Ps. l. 3, i. e. the tempest שְׁעָרָה became so; אֲשֶׁר עָבַד בָּךְ which IT has been imposed as slavery upon thee, Isa. xiv. 3, i. e. הָעֲבוּדָה the slavery mentioned just before; אֲשֶׁר יָלַד לוֹ which had been caused to be born to him, Gen. xxxv. 26, i. e. the sons mentioned just before; שֶׁיִּדְבַּר בָּהּ in which IT shall be spoken respecting her, Cant. viii. 8, i. e. דְּבַר a word.

See also Gen. iv. 26, x. 25, xlvi. 22, Is. xxiii. 1, Lam. v. 5, Job xxx. 15. And with participles, Is. xxvi. 3, Ps. lxxxvii. 3.

4. Hence it is, that in many instances the word necessary to complete or qualify the sense of the verb, is omitted by the ellipsis: e. g. לֹא יָלְדָהּ לוֹ she had not borne to him, i. e. a son, Gen. xvi. 1; וַיִּשְׁלַח so he sent,

* This would universally be so supplied in the Persian باران نه بارانیده است بر آن.

i. e. a messenger, Ib. xli. 14; יִצְבֵּר he accumulated, i. e. wealth, Ps. xxxix. 7.

See also Ps. lxxvi. 12, 1 Sam. viii. 15, &c. The same often takes place in words of common occurrence: as, יָכַרְתָּ he cut, or made, i. e. a covenant, בְּרִית 1 Sam. xx. 16; לֹא יִפְרְסוּ they broke not, i. e. bread, לֶחֶם Jer. xvi. 7; הִפִּילוּ they cast, i. e. the lot, גּוּרֵל 1 Sam. xiv. 42.

5. Under this head may be arranged, the apparently frequent ellipses of the antecedent to the relative pronoun אֲשֶׁר, which may be thus accounted for, viz. אֲשֶׁר ought to be considered, not as a mere adjective signifying qui, quæ, quod, &c. but, is qui, ea quæ, id quod,* &c. including a substantive like other attributives. Hence, in such cases there is no real ellipsis: e. g. וְשָׂאָה עַל-אֶשֶׁר לֹא-אֲדַע. He will take thee up to (that place) which I know not, 1 Kings xviii. 12; וְשָׂתִית מֵאֲשֶׁר יִשְׁאָבוּן הַנְּעָרִים. And thou shalt drink out of THAT WHICH the young men draw, Ruth ii. 9; בְּאֲשֶׁר תָּמוּתִי אָמוּת. In (that place in) which thou diest, I will die, Ruth i. 17.

6. This relative pronoun (אֲשֶׁר), ought to be considered, moreover, as definite in its signification, like other pronouns, and as unnecessary when the antecedent is indefinite; e. g. בְּיוֹם דִּבֶּר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה. On a day (on which) Jehovah spoke, to Moses, Exod. vi. 28; אֲשֶׁר-יִימָנוּת לֹא יִחַשֵׁב יְהוָה לוֹ עוֹן. Blessed is ANY MAN, Jehovah imputes not to him iniquity, i. e. to whom, &c. Ps. xxxii. 2, comp. Ps. i. 1, &c.

7. There are, however, many instances in which this rule is contravened: e. g. אֲנִי הַגִּבּוֹר רָאָה עָנִי I am THE man (who) has seen affliction, Lam. iii. 1; וַיִּזְבְּחוּ לַשְּׂדִיִּים לֹא אֱלֹהִים they sacrificed to the devils, (who are) not God, &c. Deut. xxxii. 17. But in these cases, the article does not refer so much to the definite character of the noun, as to its properties, i. e. I am that sort of man, &c. See Art. 221.

* See Noldius sub voce, p. 98, note d. This is also a remark of Noldius, "Præpositio semper pronomini relativi, ad quod se refert, objectum supponit, atque in quod ipsa influit; sive id exprimendum concipiatur per nomen, sive per pronomen antecedens מִי vel מִה," &c. See also his note under אֲשֶׁר. Concord. Part. Ed. 1734.

8. In the following examples, some further consequence seems to be implied, by the influence of constructions termed prægnantia,* which may, therefore, be supplied by the ellipsis: וַיִּגַּד מֹשֶׁה לְאַהֲרֹן אֵת כָּל-דִּבְרֵי יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר שָׁלַח so Moses relates to Aaron all the words of Jehovah, which he had sent him, (i. e. to relate) Exod. iv. 28; see also the remainder of the verse; וּפְחָדוֹ אֶל-יְהוָה and they shall fear towards Jehovah, i. e. fearing shall turn to Jehovah, Hos. iii. 5; וַיִּחַרְדּוּ.... לְקָרְאתוֹ and they fear for meeting him, i. e. they fearing proceed to meet him, 1 Sam. xvi. 4; לְאָרֶץ חִלּוֹ מִשְׁכַּן שְׁמִי to the earth have they profaned the habitation of thy name, i. e. profaned and cast it down to the earth, Ps. lxxiv. 7.

9. Hence, when several members of a sentence are connected together, the verb accompanying any one of them, may be supplied to them all: e. g. הִטְלִיבִי אֶל-עֲדוֹתֶיךָ וְאַל אֶל-בָּצַע INCLINE my heart to thy statutes, and INCLINE not (my heart) to gain, Ps. cxix. 36; וְכָל-הָעָם רָאִים אֶת-הַקּוֹלוֹת וְאֶת-הַלְפִידִם וְאֶת קוֹל הַשֹּׁפָר and the whole of the people were perceiving (SAW) the thunderings and (SAW) the lightnings, and (SAW) the sound of the trumpet, &c. Exod. xx. 18.

See also Deut. iv. 12, xxxii. 13, Job x. 12, Esth. iv. 1. And in the New Testament, 1 Cor. iii. 2, 1 Tim. iv. 3, James i. 9, 10. Hence, also, the word hear, &c. has often the signification of understanding, obeying, or the like. Comp. Acts ix. 7, with xxii. 9: and, generally, verbs of sense are often used the one for the other.

10. Hence also verbs, nouns, or particles, either expressed or implied in one part of the context, may be supplied by the ellipsis in the other: e. g. of verbs: לֹם בְּאַבְשָׁלֹם שְׁמְרוּ-מִי בְנֵי עַר OBSERVE YE who (whoever of you) the young man (OBSERVE YE) Absalom, 2 Sam. xviii. 12; אִישׁ אֶל-עִירוֹ וְאִישׁ אֶל-אַרְצוֹ (let) each man (GO) to his city, and each man (GO) to his land, 1 Kings xxii. 36.

So Ps. xxv. 15, xxxiii. 18, xxxiv. 16, Prov. vi. 26, Is. lxvi. 6, Hos. viii. 1, &c. And particularly לְאָמַר saying, e. g. יִתְבּוֹנְנֵי הַזֶּה הָאִישׁ (לְאָמַר) They consider (saying), Is this the man? Is. xiv. 16, ib. 8, &c. which is perhaps owing to the direct and abrupt manner, in which citations are generally made by the Hebrews.

11. This often happens also with the noun, which should be the apparent nominative to a verb, and, occasionally, when it must be supplied from different parts of the context: e. g. לְמָה יִתֵּן לְעַמֵּל אוֹר why giveth he (GOD) light to the sorrowful, Job iii. 20; שָׂאל וַיָּבֵא שָׁלוֹ one asked (i. e.) THE PEOPLE, and he (GOD) brought the quails, Ps. cv. 40; וַיִּקְרָא-לוֹ דָוִד וַיֵּאבֵל לְפָנָיו וַיִּשְׂתֵּ and David called him (URIAH), and he (URIAH) ate before him (i. e. DAVID), and drank, and he (DAVID) made him drunken, and he (URIAH) went out in the evening, 2 Sam. xi. 13.

12. The most frequent ellipsis, perhaps, is of the negatives, לֹא, אֵין, אֵל, &c.: e. g. לֹא לְנֶצַח יִשְׁכַּח אֲבִיוֹן the poor (man) shall not be forgotten for ever, (NOR) shall the expectation of the humble (ones) for ever perish, Ps. ix. 19.

See Deut. xxxiii. 6, 1 Sam. ii. 3, Ps. xlv. 19, Prov. xxv. 27, xxx. 3, Is. xxxviii. 18, xli. 28, &c. Of לֵאמֹר lest, Exod. xix. 22, Is. vi. 10; לָמָּה לָּמָּה why? Ps. ii. 1, 2; x. 1; כָּפֹּה how often? Job xxi. 17, 18, 19, 20: אֵיךְ how? Ps. lxxiii. 19; אֵיכָּה Id. Lam. i. 1, 2, 3, 4; ii. 1, 2; iv. 1. 4. 8. 10; מָה what? Joel i. 18; עַד־מָה how long? Ps. iv. 3; lxxxix. 47; עַד־מָתַי how long? Ps. xciv. 4, 5, 6, &c. For an ample consideration of this subject, see Glassius's Philologia Sacra, Edit. Dathe, vol. i. p. 608, &c.

13. It ought to be remembered that the Orientals, of this family, generally enounce their propositions vaguely, and then add the restricting, or defining terms (Art. 216. 4.). When, therefore, the leading term happens to be a verb, its qualifying term, or nominative, will immediately follow; as, בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים He created, i. e. God. If, however, it be intended to leave the passage indefinite, as in English, SOME ONE said, or in French ON dit; no such nominative will be added: and the greatest care ought to be taken in supplying it: e. g. Is. ix. 5, וַיִּקְרָא וַיִּשְׁמוּ and he (i. e. some one, any one, or every one), calls his name; Ps. cx. 7; מִנַּחַל בְּרָדָד יִשְׁתַּה from the torrent (i. e.) the abundance of spiritual waters (which shall then abound) in the way, shall one (any one, every one) drink: 2 Sam. xxiv. 1, וַיִּסֶּת אֶת־דָּוִד so (one, some one) tempts David; which is supplied, 1 Chron. xxi. 1, by וַיִּשָּׂא an adversary. We must not, therefore, take the name of God as found in the preceding context, in order to supply this ellipsis, as some have imprudently done; nor charge the text with the inconsistencies which have arisen purely out of our own ignorance. This sort of construction frequently occurs. So also in the objective voice, קָרָא לָךְ it hath been called to thee, i. e. thou hast been named, Is. xlvi. 8, equivalent to the Arabic يقال له. See also v. 11, אֵיךְ יִחַל how would it be profaned?

LECTURE XVII.

ON THE MODES AND TENSES OF THE VERBS.

231. As the Hebrew Language recognises no variation of termination indicating mode in verbs, no place has been assigned to that distinction in the paradigms : nor will it be necessary to enter on that consideration, until we have considered the doctrine of the tenses : but, when this is done, we shall offer a few remarks on that subject likewise.

On the Tenses.

2. We have, in our theory of the verb, proceeded upon the supposition that the Preterite tense is formed on a Concrete noun, as its basis ;—the Present on an Abstract. Artt. 188. 189.

3. If, then, the basis of the Preterite be a Concrete noun, such word considered alone will naturally refer to some past time, for the commencement of the action, passion, state, &c. meant by the root ; and which, when put into a state of conjugation, may be considered as intimating some indefinite past tense. If, for example, I say in Latin, Amatus ego, or Amans ego, it will necessarily be understood, that, at some time antecedent to the present, I began to be, and consequently am now, either the subject or object of the action intimated by the verb amo ; but, whether I shall be so hereafter, will depend upon other considerations. We find, accordingly, in the Hebrew, that our Preterite tense universally refers to past time, unless some of the circumstances hereafter to be mentioned shall require the contrary.

4. Again, if the Present tense be formed on an Abstract noun, inasmuch as no intimation can be given, by this combination, of any person or thing being at any time past, or future, subject to the influence expressed by such word; the sense afforded will naturally apply to the present time, unless indeed some of the circumstances hereafter to be detailed should suggest the contrary.

5. But here an important question will arise, which is this; How are we to determine the period, from which we are to reckon, when speaking of past, present, or future tenses? This, I believe, involves the main part of the question before us; which we shall now proceed to consider: and, if we can succeed, we shall perhaps solve this hitherto unsolved problem.

6. In the first place, then, any writer commencing his narrative will necessarily speak of past, present, or future time, with reference to the period in which his statement is made; and to this period he may adhere, as long as it suits his purpose to do so. This use of the tenses may, therefore, be termed Absolute.

7. In the next place, a person may speak of past, present, or future, events, with reference to some other period or event, already introduced into the context. This may be termed the Relative use of the tenses.

8. In the Hebrew paradigm, we have only two tenses, viz. a Past, and a Present tense. To the present tense, the *Participles and Infinitives are very nearly allied. That is, either of these when unrestricted by any other

* Participial nouns may, indeed, have been used as Preterites, for the reasons just given respecting concrete nouns: but, in practice, they include within themselves no particular tense, and are, very much like the present, to be construed either in the past, present, or future tense, as the context may require: and may in almost every case be substituted for the present. See considerations, are generally to be understood as referring to the present time, either absolute or relative. Hence, too, a Preterite connected with another Preterite, will be equivalent to our pluperfect; a Present following a Preterite, to our imperfect; and so on, affording every distinction of time necessary for the purposes of language. Of these, examples will now be given, beginning with those which have been termed absolute.

9. Generally, in the commencement of narrations, paragraphs, &c. the use of the tenses will be absolute, as in the English; e. g. בְּרָא אֱלֹהִים בְּרָא שָׁמַיִם וְאֶרֶץ in the beginning God CREATED, Gen. i. 1; וְהָאָדָם יָדַע אֶת-חַוָּה אִשְׁתּוֹ and (as to) the man, he KNEW Eve his wife, Ib. iv. 1, &c., where we have the preterite tense so used. A great number of instances also occurs in which the present tense is used as a preterite, but in which the writer takes the liberty of transporting himself, and his reader, into a time present to the narration;—occasionally also introducing terms designating such time: as, וַיֵּרָד וַיְהִי בָּעֵת הַהִיא וַיֵּרָד. So IT COMES TO PASS, AT THAT TIME, that HE DESCENDS, Gen. xxxviii. 1; וַיְהִי כִּהְיוֹם הַזֶּה וַיָּבֵא הַבַּיִתָּה וַיָּבֵא הַבַּיִתָּה. So IT COMES TO PASS, AS ON THIS DAY, that HE ENTERS the house, Gen. xxxix. 11; כָּכָה יַעֲשֶׂה אִיּוֹב כָּל-הַיָּמִים. Thus DOES Job (at) ALL TIMES, Job i. 5:—at other times totally omitting all such terms: as, וַיִּקְרָא מֹשֶׁה אֶל-יְהוָה וַיֹּאמֶר אֵל-יְהוָה וַיֹּאמֶר אֵל-יְהוָה וַיֹּאמֶר אֵל-יְהוָה. So HE CALLS (at that time) to Moses, and SAYS, Lev. i. 1. So also in the New Testament, John i. 29. 39. 46. &c. On the pleonastic use of the ו, in these cases, see Noldius Concord. partic., Ed. 1734, pp. 309, 310, my Hebrew Lexicon under ו, and the Mikhlol, fol. נד verso.

10. When, however, it is necessary to enounce any thing in the absolute present tense,* either our present tense, or one of the participles, may be used: e. g. لَمَّا لِي what (is) the multitude of your

* See also Is. v. 23, vi. 2, vii. 14. In this last instance I understand וַיִּבְרָא.

he gives, to refer to the declaration or prediction of the Prophet, which is here termed آيَة sign or wonder. See Gen. iv. 15, Exod. iii. 12, iv. 8. 28, 1 Sam. ii. 34, 2 Kings xix. 29, where it also means a prediction, not a visible sign.

This tense has been termed an Aorist by modern writers on Arabic Grammar; but it is really a present tense, as will appear from the following considerations. In a Commentary on the Kāfiya كافية of Ibn ul Hājib, by Najm Oddeen of Irāk, preserved among Mr. Burckhardt's books in the Public Library at Cambridge, it is said of this tense,

وقال بعضهم هو حقيقة في الحال مجاز في الاستقبال وهو اقوي
لانه اذا خلي من القرائن لم يحتمل الا علي الحال ولا ينصرف
الى الاستقبال الا لتقريته وهذا شان الحقيقة والمجاز
i. e. "Some say that it is in truth a present tense, but allowed to be used as a future, which is the best opinion. For, when it is accompanied by no other (words, &c.), it can refer to the present tense only: nor is it turned into a future, except when so accompanied. This is what we mean by true, and allowable." So also in the Grammar of Ibn Olfahām, وابن الفحام

لان الاصل اذ هو فعل الحال فصلح اللفظ اذا قلت هو يكتب . . . ان
يكون في الحال . . . وهي تدل بمجردها علي حقيقتها ولا تدل علي الاستقبال الا بتقريته من السين او سوف
i. e. For the origin is the verb of the present tense: and it would be correct when you say,

هو يكتب, he writes, that this is in the present tense: the truth of which it evinces by its being alone: but it evinces no futurity except when accompanied by either Sīn or Sawfa. That is to say: This form is correctly used to denote the present tense when thus standing alone. The Participles active, are also so used by the Arabs. Jāmi on the Kāfiya, p. ٣٤٢ زيد المعطي غلامه درهمًا

الآن او غدا او امس, i. e. Zaid giving his slave a dirhem, either now, or to-morrow, or yesterday.

Again, they consider the present tense as of two kinds; one they term the real present; الحال تحقيقًا: by which they mean, the tense which we have termed absolute; or, in other words, that in which a person commits to writing sacrifices to me? SAITH Jehovah, Is. i. 11; لِكُونَا وَنُؤَكِّدُهَا come now, LET US REASON together, SAITH JEHOVAH, Ib. vi. 18. هَؤُلَاءِ مَنِيَعُوا بَيْتَ بَيْتٍ شَؤْدَةً بِشَؤْدَةٍ يَكْرِبُونِ any event, or number of events, he may have to relate. This is what our Grammarians always understand by The Present Tense. The other they term

حَالٌ حَكَايَةٌ: i. e. the present, as to the narration; by which they mean, the time contemporary with any event, and which may therefore be considered as present with it, although past, present, or future, with regard to the real, or absolute present tense. The following passages taken from the Commentary on the Kāfīa by Moolla Jāmī will be sufficient to shew in what manner they speak on this subject (p. ۳۷۳-۴). When speaking of the use of

i. e. when the مضارع (i. e. our present) is to be taken as a future, with reference to what may have gone before; or, with reference to the time in which the relation was first made, as a PAST, PRESENT, OF FUTURE. And again, فان اردت

بالفعل الذي دخله حتى الحال يعني زمان الحال تحقيقاً اي بطريق

التحقيق بان يكون هي زمان التكلّم بعينه . . . او حكاية اي بطريق

الحكاية كما تقول كنت سرت امس حتي ادخل البلد فادخل في

هذا الموضع حكاية الحال الماضية فكانت كنت في زمان الدخول

هيأت هذه العبارة وتحكيها في زمان التكلّم علي ما كنت هيأته

i. e. if you intend by the verb preceded by حتى to express the PRESENT TENSE,

i. e. the time of the ABSOLUTE PRESENT; that is to say, by way of verifying it as present with the time of the original narration itself, &c. . . . or, by way of

(subsequent) حكاية NARRATION, (i. e. relatively) as if you should say, I was (so circumstanced that) I proceeded yesterday, in order that I (may then) enter the city. Here the word ادخل I ENTER (is used in) the PRESENT TENSE of a past circumstance, as though you had expressed yourself in this manner (i. e. as present at the TIME of entering, relating the circumstance in the tense of (the first) enunciation in consequence of having so conceived the matter, (in your own mind). Hence it will be seen, that this present tense will occasionally be relative to the reader, when it was absolute with the original enuncer, of any proposition. On this use of the Arabic participles, see Jāmī's Comm., p. ۳۴۲—woe (to those) WHO JOIN house to house, (who) LAY field to field, Is. v. 8. In this last instance the Participle holds a place in the parallelism corresponding with the present tense. כִּי יְהוֹה אֱלֹהֶיךָ מְבִיאֶךָ אֶל-אֶרֶץ טוֹבָה אֶרֶץ : נְחָלֵי מַיִם יַעֲנוֹת וְתַהֲמַת יִצְאִים בְּבִקְעָה וּבְהָר : for the Lord thy God (now) BRINGETH thee into a good land, a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that SPRING out of the valleys and hills, Deut. viii. 7.

11. When, however, any future event is enounced prophetically, or any circumstances are mentioned manifestly relating to a future period, either the Present tense,* the Imperative, or one of the Participles, may then also be used; e. g. וְאַעֲשֶׂה לְגוֹי גָדוֹל וְאַבְרַכְךָ וְאַנְדְּלָה וְאַעֲשֶׂה לְגוֹי גָדוֹל וְאַבְרַכְךָ וְאַנְדְּלָה and I MAKE thee a great nation, and I BLESS thee, and so MAKE thy name great, Gen. xii. 2; אֶרֶץ אֲשֶׁר לֹא בָהּ תֹאכַל לֶחֶם לֹא-תִחַסֵּר כֹּל בָּהּ THOU MAYEST (OR SHALT) EAT bread without scarceness, thou SHALT (DOST, MAYEST) not lack any thing in it, &c. Deut. viii. 9; יְהִי שֻׁלְחָנָם לִפְנֵיהֶם לֶפֶת LET their table BE for a snare before them, &c., i. e. it shall be, &c. Ps. lxix. 23. See the context, and Rom. xi. 9, 10, where it is so explained by St. Paul. וְאַנִּי הִנְנִי מְקִים וְאַתְּ בְּרִיתִי אִתְּכֶם וְאַתְּ-זֶרְעֶכֶם אַחֲרֵיכֶם and (as for) me, behold me ESTABLISHING (ABOUT to ESTABLISH or WILL ESTABLISH) my covenant with you, and with your seed after you, Gen. ix. 9.

The reason of this usage seems to be, that, when anything is predicted, it may now be said or commanded, either to be doing, or done, in the mind of him who makes the prediction. This is also the case in the Arabic and Persian, and apparently for the same reason. See Mr. Lumsden's Persian Gram., vol. ii. p. 334—7. In the case in which a future signification is taken from circum-

13. Corollary. Hence, citations will generally be made in the words of the first speaker: i. e. it is not said, he sought something that he might (now) eat it, but he finds not; كَانَا يَنْطَحَانِ

بِقَرُونِهِمَا they two were (so situated that) they (now, i. e. in these circumstances) butt with the horns of them both. The same principle generally holds good, when two preterites follow each other without an intervening conjunction; for then, the first will have respect to some time anterior to that, from which the writer had set out; the second, to one anterior to that of such verb: e. g. وَكَانَ خَرَجَ

إِلَى خِرَاسَانَ and he was (so circumstanced that) he went out (before that time) to Khorásán, i. e. and he had gone out.

Mr. de Sacy remarks, that “le verbe كَانَ employé comme auxiliaire influe sur les prétérīts خَرَجَ, &c. et les convertit tous en preterits antérieur.” Arab. Gram., vol. i. p. 131. The reason of this is, that each of these verbs involves a preterite tense in its own right, and the reader is, by the combination of both, carried back into a time more remote than either alone could express. This the European Grammarians have termed the Pluperfect tense.

As the Persian language has, for several centuries, been cultivated on the principles of the Arabic Grammar, it may not be amiss to cite Mr. Lumsden’s remarks on this use of the present tense. “In the conversation of the Persians,” says he (Pers. Gram., vol. ii. p. 336), “though seldom perhaps in written composition, the present is often found to supersede the past tense of the verb, in the statement of those propositions which, though past in point of fact (i. e. as to the absolute time in which the statement is made) are recalled by the memory as if they were present. Example: دِي شَب كُذْرَم نَزْدِ دُوسْتِي اَفْتَادِ دَرِ اَنجَا

عَجَب بَزَمِي مِي بَيْنَمِ وَطَرَفَه تَمَاشَايِي مِي كَنَمِ last night I went (rather I go) to the house of a friend, and there saw (see) a delightful assembly, and enjoyed (enjoy) a most pleasing spectacle. Of this nature,” adds he, “are the examples بِيغَامْبَر چَنَانِ مصِيفَ چُنِينِ كُوبِدِ The writer thus observes:

دِهْدِ the Prophet thus informs (or has informed) us.”—This must bring to every one’s mind, the φησι, ait, and inquit, of the Greeks and Latins, which are used in the same way, and upon the same principle. Citations are made in a similar manner in the Persian; as, Zaid said, I am going to Calcutta, not obliquely,—that he was going, &c., but in the words of the original enunciation. See Pers. Gram., Ib., pp. 349—355.

that God swore and declared, THAT HE WOULD GIVE the land to Abraham's seed, &c. but, in the original terms of the oath, unto thy seed DO, OR WILL, I GIVE it: and also, that preterites, and futures, more or less remote from the time in which any declaration is made,—answering to our imperfects, perfects, pluperfects, simple, compound, or paulo-post, futures,—may be formed at the pleasure of the writer. The following passage from Isaiah must suffice on this subject: כֹּה-אָמַר יְהוָה: לְמַשִּׁיחוֹ לְכוֹרֶשׁ אֲשֶׁר-הִחֲזַקְתִּי בְיָמֵינוּ לְרַדְּ-לִפְנֵי גוֹיִם וּמַתְּנֵי מְלָכִים אֶפְתַּח לְפָתַח לִפְנֵי דְלָתַיִם וְשַׁעֲרִים לֹא יִסְגְּרוּ: אֲנִי לִפְנֵיךָ אֵלֶּךְ וְהִדּוּרִים אֲוֹשֶׁר דְּלָתוֹת נְחוּשָׁה אֲשַׁבֵּר וּבְרִיחֵי בְרוֹז אֲגַדֵּעַ: וְנָתַתִּי לְךָ אוֹצְרוֹת חֵשֶׁד וּמִטְמֵנֵי &c., Thus HATH Jehovah said of his anointed, of Cyrus, whose right hand I HAVE HOLDEN, for the subduing of nations before him, and that I MAY UNLOOSE the loins of kings; to open before him the two-leaved gates, and (that the) gates MAY not BE SHUT: I GO, (OR WILL GO,) before thee, and MAKE LEVEL mountainous places; the gates of brass DO I BREAK, and the bars of iron DO I CUT ASUNDER. And I have given thee the treasures of darkness, and the hidden treasures of secret places, that thou MAYEST KNOW, that I am Jehovah who CALL (thee) by thy name, &c., Is. xlv. 1—3.

Although this citation is not quite direct in the first verse, the passage is, nevertheless, all put in the first person; and the second verse is a direct citation. As to the tenses, the first verb is in the preterite, because the prophet recites what he had already received, perhaps at some distance of time. The next is also preterite, as referring to past events. The following אֶפְתַּח, and יִסְגְּרוּ, are present, referring to what may have been done at the time when the declaration was first made, or immediately subsequent to it. The same may be said of the four following verbs. The next, וְנָתַתִּי, is a preterite to be taken in an absolute future signification (see Art. 236.): and the following עָוֶרֶךְ, is present to the fulfilment of this, or immediately subsequent to it. The second preterite, וְהִזְקִיחֵנִי, refers to a time anterior to that of אָמַר, with which the declaration commences, though perhaps not so much so as to bear our pluperfect in the translation. The next two, אֶפְתָּח, and יִפְגְּרוּ, though presents or futures to וְהִזְקִיחֵנִי, seem, nevertheless, to be anterior to אָמַר, as to tense. In the next place, אֲנִי, אֶלֶךְ, and אֶבְרַח, are evidently present or future to אָמַר, and consequently, in a tense future to אֶפְתָּח, and יִפְגְּרוּ. In the last place, יִבְרַח is manifestly future, with respect to the preceding verb אֶבְרַח, &c. and וְהִזְקִיחֵנִי, which is present or immediately future to this, may be considered as referring to something still further removed into futurity. Numerous instances of this kind occur in the New Testament. For examples in which the present tense is thus carried backward, or forward, see Matt. ii. 13, φαίνεται; Mark ii. 4, χαλώσι, &c. As future, Matt. ii. 4, γενῶται; Ib. v. 46, ἔχετε; Ib. xvii. 11, ἔρχεται; Ib. xxvi. 29, πίνω. Paulo-post future, Matt. xxvi. 24, παραδίδοται; Ib. v. 45. See Mark xiv. 41, Luke xxii. 21, 22, John xiii. 3. 11. 27. 33, &c. In like manner the Aorists are also used for the past, present, or future. It will be unnecessary to give examples of the past. Of the present, Matt. iii. 17, εὐδόκησα. So Ib. xxiii. 2, Luke i. 47, xv. 16, John i. 12, 1 John iv. 8. Of the future, John xi. 56, ἔλθῃ; xv. 6, ἐβλήθη, ἐξηράνθη. See also Rom. viii. 20. With πρίν, or πρό, preceding, Mark xiv. 30, John iv. 49, viii. 58, xiii. 19, &c. See also Matthiæ's Greek Grammar, vol. ii. Artt. 504, 505, &c.

14. From what has been said, it must have appeared, that the writer, placing both himself and his reader in times contemporary with the events of which he is treating, can supply all the deficiency of tenses apparent in the Hebrew paradigm; an expedient often resorted to indeed, by the Latin and Greek historians, without the necessity which presents itself here. We must not hence suppose, however, that the sacred writers never recur to the original time, from which they set out. This they appear to do optionally, just as we find it done in the Greek and Latin historians* (Art. 231. 6.): e. g. וַיִּקְרָא אֱלֹהִים לְאוֹר

* So, "INSTANT Volsci recentes, qui è castris impetum fecerant; INTEGRANT

יִּוֹם וְלַחֲשָׁךְ קָרָא לַיְלָה so God CALLS the light Day; but the darkness he CALLED Night, Gen. i. 5; וַיִּנְיְהוּ אֹתוֹ עַד-הַבֶּקֶר בְּאֶשֶׁר צָוָה מֹשֶׁה וְלֹא הִבְאִישׁ So they LAY IT UP till the morning, as Moses HAD COMMANDED, and it DID not BECOME foetid, &c., Exod. xvi. 24.

The cause of this mixed usage of the tenses seems to be, that, as either of them will have a preterite, present, or future, bearing, under certain circumstances; the reader is supposed to be sufficiently acquainted with this, to enable him to make the necessary distinctions, in every case.

232. If then events, consecutive of each other, may be enounced by verbs intimating a presence of action, with reference to those primarily introduced into the context; then may Subjunctive, or Conditional, sentences also be enounced, upon the same principle by the present tense, while the dependence of the different members, one upon another, will be determined by the signification of the particles introduced for that purpose. Examples: Gen. xxiv. 49, 50, וְעַתָּה אִם-יִשְׁכַּם עֲשִׂים הַסֵּד וְאַמַּת אֶת-אֲדֹנָי הַגִּידוּ לִי וְאִם-לֹא הַגִּידוּ לִי וְאַבְנֶה עַל-יָמִין אוֹ עַל-שְׂמֹאל. And now, if ye ARE DEALING kindly and truly with my master, tell me; and if not, tell me; and I turn (or that I MAY TURN) to the right hand or to the left; Ib. vr. 5, וַיֹּאמֶר אֵלָיו הָעֶבֶד אוֹלֵי לֹא-תֵאבְּהָ הָאִשָּׁה וַיֵּלֶכֶת אַחֲרֶיהָ אֶל-הָאֶרֶץ הַזֹּאת הֲשֵׁב אֲשִׁיב אֶת-בְּנֵהָ אֶל-הָאֶרֶץ אִשְׁרֵי-צִאתָ מִשָּׁם. Then the servant said (says) to him, Perhaps the woman MAY not BE (or, putting the case that she is not,) WILLING to follow me to this land, Must I surely bring back thy son unto the land from whence thou camest ?

233. There are, moreover, other modes of construction, by which hypothetical and other sentences, exhibiting certain relations between their leading and subsequent members, are formed. These constructions have hitherto been unobserved by Christian Grammarians and Commentators. Some of the Jews seem to have entertained a few imperfect notions respecting them,* and these they probably borrowed from the Arabians, who detail them very much at length in their Grammars and Commentaries on Grammar.†

2. It has been remarked (Artt. 74. 2. 108. 119, p. 260, &c.) that verbs will occasionally appear in an apocopated, or abridged, form: at others, with a ה, usually termed paragogic (Art. 175. 2. 4. 5, &c.); and, at others, with what has been termed an Epenthetic, or Paragogic,

* The words of D. Kimkhi on this subject are to be found in the Mikhlol, fol. נה verso, and are as follows: ויש זו אחר במקום אם והיא מורה להשובת הרבאי ומענהו כמו אם קנה תבואה החשובה תהלים יג' אם תזקמי תלמי המענה וקתמי נשמיתם בעתם' ו' i. e. And there is another (use of) Vav in the place of אם, and this indicates the reply of a conditional sentence; as (in the examples), Putting the case that the iron is blunt,—the corresponding member is,—then must one increase the force, Eccl. x. 9. If ye,—or putting the case that ye,—walk in my statutes:—the corresponding member is,—then surely I will give your showers in their season, Lev. xxvi. 3, 4. This is precisely the doctrine of the Arabian Grammarians as far as it goes, (See Jāmī's Com. on Ibn Ulhājib, pp. ٣٧١-٣٧٧-٣٧٨ ٣٨٠.—&c.) They investigate the matter, however, much more scientifically and profoundly. The result of a careful examination of this matter with me is, that although the subsequent members may often be translated by our subjunctive, or conditional, mode; yet, as positive comparisons are always instituted in their languages, no such doubtful mode actually exists with them.

Nun (ן) Art. 175. 17. &c. We now proceed to state, in order, the several powers which these forms appear to exert upon the context of Scripture :—and first, of that which has been termed apocope.

3. We have seen, Art. 119. 8. 9, that the apocopated forms are often used for the purpose of expressing command, prohibition, exhortation, wishing, forbearance, and the like : as, יהי יְהִי let him, or it be ; יִבְּרַךְ let him, or, may he, stultify ; יִמַח let him be blotted out ; * אַל-יֵרָא let it not be seen, &c. We now say, that, apparently for the purpose of preserving an uniformity in the forms of words, composing those members of sentences which have a mutual relation to each other ; the verbs in such subsequent members will also be apocopated : e. g. יהי אור יְהִי אור LET (there) BE light : AND light (accordingly) EXISTS. This connexion is also extended throughout the next verse ; thus ; וַיֵּרָא אֱלֹהִים אֶת-הָאֹר כִּי-טוֹב וַיִּבְרַךְ אֱלֹהִים בֵּין הָאֹר וּבֵין הַחֹשֶׁךְ : . . . : וַיְהִי עֶרֶב וַיְהִי-בֹקֶר : יוֹם אֶחָד AND GOD (accordingly) SEES the light, that (it is) good ; and GOD (accordingly) DIVIDES between the light and between the darkness . . . AND (hence) the evening BECOMES, AND the dawn BECOMES, day one. See the remaining instances occurring in this, and the following chapters.† So Isaiah xlviii. 17, לוא הִקְשַׁבְתָּ

* The Arabic imperatives are regularly apocopated forms ; as, ^عانصر ^عassist thou : the preformative ^اalif, is added merely for the sake of facilitating the pronunciation, and is omitted by rule whenever it can be. In the Hebrew, an imperative of the first person singular and plural, is made, either by this form, as, אֶהְיֶה let me be, Hos. xiii. 14. אֶעֱשֶׂה Numb. xx. 17, &c., or, by one of those presently to be considered. It must also be borne in mind, that imperatives will express request, as well as command.

† The Arabian Grammarians reason on this subject in the following manner. The Moolla Jāmí says, in his Commentary on Ibn Ulhājib (p. ۳۸۲), ^عولام ^عالامر

לְמִצְוֹתַי נִיהַי כְּנָהָר שְׁלוֹמֶךָ. Hadst thou attended to my commandments, THEN HAD BEEN thy peace like the river. When לֹא is used as a prohibitive, no apocopation takes place: see Exod. xx. 3—18. Similar consequent members seem also to be marked,

هي اللام المطلوب بها الفعل ويدخل فيها لام الدعاء نحو ليغفر لنا الله . . . ولا النهي هي لا المطلوب بها الترك اي ترك الفعل . . . وكلم المجازاة . . . تدخل علي الفعلين لسببية الفعل الاول ومسببية And the lām الفعل الثاني اي لجعل الفعل الاول سببًا والثاني مسببًا (ل) of command, i. e. the LAM intimating a desire for the action of the verb.—

The LAM of prayer will also influence the verb; as, ليغفر لنا الله "may God forgive us:" also the word لا, (Heb. לֹא) of prohibition, i. e. intimating a request that the action of the verb be given up; also expressions of retribution, (i. e. a consequent member in such sentences), these will influence two verbs, the first implying the cause (or antecedent), the second that upon which the cause acts (or the consequent), i. e. to mark the first verb as implying the cause, the second as the thing caused. The Moolla goes on to tell us, in the words of Ibn Ulhājib, that we must not, however, always understand that such constructions mark the actual cause and effect, but only that the writer, or speaker, has expressed himself, as if this were the case: i. e. just as we find it in the scriptural parables, he argues these cases as real, whether they are so or not. This is a principle exerting a most extensive influence on the language of Scripture. See my Visitation Sermon, Camb. 1839. p. 58. The exact force of such passages seems to be, Let there be light, so, let there be light; i. e. The Creator gives the command, in the first instance; the historian, writer, or speaker, in the second. This will account for the use of the apocopated forms in each case, and explain their concordance with one another. So in the Arabic ان تشتمني اكرمك.

تترزني Putting the case (thus), or, surely, despise thou me; let me honour thee:

ازرك visit me, (so) let me visit thee. And hence the peculiar force of the Arabic ومن عان so, therefore, and the Hebrew illative particle ו; as,

فدينتم الله منه "And, as to him who returns to sin, God will accordingly take vengeance on him: and, in the Hebrew, אור יהי אור ויהי אור let there be light, ACCORDINGLY, CONSEQUENTLY, so (or the like) let it be taken for granted that light becomes, (exists)."

when the illative ך accompanies the preterite, and exercises the influence of removing the accent, (Art. 119.) e. g. Exod. xxix. 1—3. לְקַח פֶּר אֶחָד . . . וְנָתַתָּ אוֹתָם עַל- * לְקַח פֶּר אֶחָד . . . and place them upon one basket, and offer them (accordingly), &c. See the following verses. The preterite is apparently used, in these cases, for the greater emphasis.

4. It is not, however, necessary that a command or prohibition should always precede; any subject matter of discourse, upon which a consequence will depend, may have its consequent members enounced by apocopated present tenses: as, כְּשֶׁלָּה בָּרָחוּב אָמַת וּנְכָחָה לֹא-תוּכַל, לָבוֹא : וְתֵהִי הָאָמַת נֶעְדָּרָת . . . וַיֵּרָא יְהוָה וַיֵּרַע בְּעֵינָיו. For truth hath stumbled in the open place, and integrity is unable to enter. So, ACCORDINGLY, &c. truth hath failed: . . . So, THEREFORE, &c. the Lord saw, AND (therefore) it was evil in his eyes, &c. † Is. lix. 14.

5. From what has been said, it may perhaps be concluded, that no passage will occur in which such apocopation will not be found, either as the mark of a leading imperative, or of a consequent and corresponding member.

* So in the Arabic with the illative particle ف . . . ان كان قميصه قد . . . فصدقت, putting the case that his frock was torn . . . then she has spoken truly. This ف, is termed by the Arabian Grammarians الفاء التعميقية the consequent ف. Jāmi's Com., p. ٣٨٥. فقد is mostly used in these cases.

† From this sort of connexion in the context, we may see in what sense this connecting, and illative, particle ך, may be said to be conversive of the tense of the following verbs, to that of the preceding ones: not that it exerts any such power absolutely, but only relatively, (Art. 231. 9.). And in this sense D. Kimkhi has taken it, (Mikhlol, fol. כיה verso.) where he cites Aben Ezra as appealing to the Arabic. And De Balmes expressly ascribes it to the tense of narration (Art. 231. 10. note) ההגדתי. It is very doubtful, therefore, whether the Jews originally believed an absolute conversive power to be vested in this ך. See my Heb. Lexicon, under ך.

one. Examples of the first case:—Gen. xxxvii. 13. לְכֹה וְאֶשְׁלַחְךָ אֲלֵיהֶם, Come (I pray), and let me send thee to them. In the next verse this command is prefaced by לָךְ-נָא, come I pray, equal, apparently, to the preceding לְכֹה: and in verse 16, we have both combined in הַגִּידָה-נָא, Shew now I pray. So also Ib. xxxviii. 16, הַבֵּה-נָא Give now I pray. See Ps. ii. 3. 7; lxix. 19, &c.

2. Examples of the second case: *—Ps. ii. 8. שְׁאַל מִמֶּנִּי גוֹיִם וְאֶתְּנֶה גוֹיִם Ask of me, and I will (accordingly) give, or, let me (then) give, nations, &c. Ib. lxix. 15. הַצִּילֵנִי מִיַּד מְטִיט וְאֶל-אֶטְבְּעָה Deliver me from the mire, and let me

* This relation is marked in the Arabic by the vowel Fatha, placed on the last letter of the verb in the present tense, as يُنصِرُ, instead of يُنصِر; which Mr. de Sacy has mistaken for the subjunctive mode of European Grammars; to which it will only occasionally correspond. The particles found to precede this form are various: see de Sacy's Gram. Arab., tom. ii., pp. 19—30. This form is not used as an imperative in Arabic, unless preceded by a negative. The principle on which this construction proceeds, is thus stated by Jāmi in his commentary on the Kāfia. Speaking of the particle ف, our illative و, he says: والفاء التي ينتصب المضارع بعدها بتقدير ان فتقدير ان بعدها لانتصاب المضارع مشروط بشرطين احدهما السببية اي سببية ما قبلها لما بعدها لان العدول عن الرفع الي النصب للتخصيص علي السببية حيث يدل تغير اللفظ تغير المعني فاذا لم يقصد السببية لا يحتاج الي دلالة عليها &c.... So the ف, which marks the following verb with FATHA, as equivalent in sense to ان UT. Now this equivalent to ان after ف, (added) for the purpose of placing FATHA on the (last letter of the verb in the) present tense, is governed by two conditions. One of these is CAUSALITY, i. e. the causality of some antecedent acting upon its consequent: for, indeed, the change from (°) to (´) is intended to mark this causality; so that the change, in the form of the word, intimates the change intended in the sense. But, when no causality is intended, there can be no want of any intimation of it. The second condition is, that one of the six things (as in the last article) precede the ف &c. These are, a command, a prohibition, an interrogation, a question, a negation, a wish or representation.

not (thence) sink down, Ib. cxix. 18. גַּל-עֵינַי וְאֲבִיטָה Enlighten my eyes, in order that I may see, or, and let me see, wonders out of thy law. See also ver. 27; Ps. cxlv. 5; Obad. ver. 1. קוּמוּ וְגַקְוּמָה Arise ye, and let us (too) arise, Hab. ii. 1. עַל-מִשְׁמַרְתִּי * אֶעֱמְדָה וְאֶתִּיצֵבָה עַל-מְצוֹר וְאֶצְפָּה. Let me stand upon my watch, that I may be set up on the fortress, and spy. In all these cases, as in the preceding, a kind of imperative force seems to belong to every verb employed in the succession. In this last case, the bearing is more of the *precativ*e or optative character.

3. It must not be supposed, however, that this form is always had recourse to for the purpose of marking this relation: for it is occasionally, and perhaps most frequently, designated by such particles as will best express it; as, אֲשֶׁר quod, or eo quod, לְמַעַן אֲשֶׁר for the purpose of, בְּעֵבוֹר in order to, because of, &c., כִּי that, ut, לְ to, in order to, כִּן seeing that, and the like, with the unaugmented form of the verb. It is when these particles are omitted, that this form is generally had recourse to. So also in the nouns, מִצְרַיִמָה will signify to, or towards, Egypt, and will be equivalent to אֶל-מִצְרַיִם: but both are not usually combined, as אֶל-מִצְרַיִמָה: whence perhaps we may conclude, that the real force of this particle is either to, in order to, or something nearly allied to this. (Art. 232.)

235. The third case we have to consider is, that which involves the doctrine respecting the uses of the Epenthetic, and Paragogic, Nún (ן, Art. 175. 17. seq.): and here, as before, the first of these is found with commands, prohibitions, and exhortations, and also in the consequent members of antithetic sentences: the second is used with interrogatives, and also in the consequent members of similar sentences. And, in both cases, strong asseveration, with futurity of action, seems to be implied.*

* This is also the doctrine of the Arabian Grammarians on the same letter, which they term النون التأكيدي, the confirmatory Nūn, as in the following extracts. Jāmī says: ومشددة . . . ونون التأكيد قسما خفيفة ساكنة . . . مفتوحة . . . تختص . . . بالفعل المستقبل الكائن في ضمن الامر نحو اضربن بالتخفيف واضربن بالتشديد وانهي نحو لا تضربن والاستفهام نحو هل تضربن والتمني نحو ليتك تضربن والعرض نحو الا تنزلن بنا فتصيب خيرا والنقسم نحو والله لافعلن بالتخفيف والتشديد في جميع هذه الامثلة . . . لا يؤكد الا ما يكون مطلوبا . . . وكثرت في مثل اما تفعلن اي الشرط الموكد حرفه بما فانه لما اكد الحرف قصدوا تأكيد الفعل ايضا لئلا ينتقص المقصود من غيرة وما قبلها اي ما قبل نون التأكيد خفيفة كانت او ثقيلة (p. ١٣٧٧) i. e. the Nūn of confirmation is of two sorts, the light quiescent Nūn, and that doubled with fatha. Its particular usage is with a future verb in an imperative signification; as, Thou shalt certainly strike (اضربن), in its light form, and اضربن in its reduplicated one; also with a prohibition, as, Thou shalt (certainly) not strike: also with an interrogation, as, Wilt thou really strike? also with a wish, as, I wish you would really strike: and with a representation, as, Surely you will come down to us, so that it may be well with you: also with an oath, as, And (as) God (exists) so, surely will I do it: and these cases all hold good, whether the form be light, or doubled . . . This confirmation is not used except when something is requested; but, it is most frequent in such examples as, "WHETHER YOU WILL SURELY DO IT, &c.," (i. e.) in a condition, the accompanying particle of which is strengthened by ما, what, &c. For, when such particle gives force, the intention is, to strengthen the action of the verb likewise, in order to avoid otherwise missing the force intended (by the passage,) TOGETHER WITH WHAT GOES BEFORE IT, i. e. whatever precedes such confirmatory Nūn, whether it be light or heavy (i. e. single or double). That is, in all such antithetic sentences as those involving oaths, requests, and the like. The most complete account I have met with of the use of these forms is to be found in the work of نجم الدين العراقي already referred to. I have given this note more at length than I otherwise should have done, because I

Examples in which the Epenthetic, or Paragogic, Nūn is used in interrogations, &c., Ps. lxxviii. 17; לָמָּה תִּרְצֹדוֹן why will ye (persevere to) watch? Job ix. 12; מִי יִשִּׁיבֵנִי who will (effectually) turn him back? Mic. vi. 6; הֲאֶקְרָבֵנִי shall I (actually) approach him? Gen. xxxvii. 21; לֹא נִכְנְוּ נִפְשׁ let us by no means strike his person, Amos i. 3; לֹא אֲשִׁיבֵנִי I will by no means restore him. See also Dan. ii. 5. 9, &c.

2. In some instances the Paragogic Nūn, seems strongly to intimate futurity of action, as in Joel ii. 4; כִּן יִרְצֹן so shall they assuredly run: Ib. ver. 7; כְּגִבּוֹרִים יִרְצֹן like heroes shall they (certainly) run; אִישׁ בְּדַרְכֵּי יִלְכּוּ each in his ways shall they march; וְלֹא יֵעָבְטוּן אֶרְתוֹתָם neither shall they (at all) wander (from) their paths.

3. In the following passages, they strongly mark consecutive members of sentences, implying perhaps, at the same time, futurity in the tense of the verb, Gen. xxxvii. 27; וְנִמְכַרְנִי לָכֵן come, and let us actually sell him. Isa. xxvi. 5—7; כִּי הִשָּׁח יִשְׁבִּי מְרוֹם קִרְיָה נִשְׁפִּילָהּ For he shall (surely) bring down the inhabitants of (a) high place; an exalted city, he shall assuredly debase her: he debaseth her to the earth; he shall assuredly make her touch even to the dust: the foot shall surely trample her.

We may here remark that הִשָּׁח, a manifest prophetic future, is parallel to יִשְׁפִּילָהּ in the following member: whence both must be construed in the same tense: both therefore will be strong pro-find Mr. de Sacy speaking in his Gram. Arabe (tom. ii. p. 35), as if there were no fixed rules for its use, and actually dislocating the last example he has cited, as if it had no connexion with what went before. See the Koran, Sur. 102.

phetic futures: the one grounded on the principle (Art. 236.) of the event having already come to pass; the other enouncing a similar event in a corroborated present sense only: while the Epenthetic Nūn in the latter, marks it as a consequent to the former.—In the next place, the following יִשְׁפִּילָהּ has no such Nūn: it commences, therefore, a new series of context, i. e. it resumes the original theme commenced with הִשָּׁחַח, and has יִגְיַעְצָהּ, with the Epenthetic Nūn, for its consequent; and, in apposition with this is the following הִרְמִסְנָהּ. See Ib. xliii. 5; Deut. viii. 5. 19, 20; Job ix. 6. 32. 34; xii. 7, 8, &c. In the nouns, too, the termination ך appears to have a corroborative force, see Art. 168.

The following examples present a single Epenthetic כ, as in the Arabic extract given above (see also my Heb. Lexicon, p. 400). יִסְבְּבֶנְהוּ יְבוֹנְנֶהוּ יִצְרְנֶהוּ וּגַלְּוֹ, He accordingly turns him about, He instructs him, He keeps him, &c., Deut. xxxii. 10; וְקָבַרְלִי, So curse him for me, Numb. xxiii. 13; see also Deut. xxix. 14; Judg. v. 26; Ps. lxxii. 15, xci. 12; Jer. xxii. 24; Obad. ver. 13. See Art. 175. 22.

4. From the near approach of these forms, in sense, we must not be surprised in occasionally finding constructions in which they are mixed; for the purpose, perhaps, of imparting to its several members some particular shade of meaning, or to keep up a variety in the modes of expression, e. g. Job ix. 14; אַף כִּי־אֶנְכִי אֶעֱנֶנּוּ, Nay, (supposing) that I may really answer him, (then) let me, I pray, select my words (for use) with him, Gen. xii. 2; וְאֶעֱשֶׂה לְגוֹי גְדוֹל...וְאֶנְדָּלָהּ, And let me make thee a great nation, and let me (I pray) make thy name great, and become thou a blessing, Exod. xxiii. 10; וְשֵׁשׁ שָׁנִים תִּזְרַע־אֶת־: וְהִשְׁבִּיעִית תִּשְׁמַטְנָהּ אֶרְצָהּ וְאָסַפְתָּ אֶת־תְּבוּאָתָהּ: וְהִשְׁבִּיעִית תִּשְׁמַטְנָהּ, And six years sow THOU (imper.) thy land, and HAVE COLLECTED (pret. i. e. prophetic fut.) its income. But the seventh (year) THOU SHALT DISMISS IT (Epenthetic form): so THOU (shalt) HAVE LEFT IT, and the poor of thy people

SHALL (surely) EAT: and their excess (i. e. leavings) the wild beast of the field SHALL EAT (pres. or contingent future). I translate these so as to express the force of the different forms as near as I can. See also Gen. xliii. 21.

236. Another leading principle, by which the tenses are regulated, has arisen out of the circumstance, that the Hebrews, in common with some other nations of the East, often represent events,—of the future occurrence of which they have no doubt,—as having already taken place.* Examples: כִּי-יִלְכֹּד יִלְד־לָנוּ בֶן נִתַּן-לָנוּ וַתְּהִי

* The following observations on this use of the past tense of a Persian verb are taken from the Persian Grammar of Mr. Lumsden, vol. ii. p. 326.

“The prophetic denunciation of a future event will be often expressed in the past tense, in order to indicate the certainty of its occurrence. Examples:

 گِرْدَنِ كَشِيْدِهٖ وَبَانَوَاعِ عَذَابِ گِرْفَتَارِ گِرْدِيْدِهٖ
 ‘The infidel, however happy to-day, will be encircled to-morrow by a collar of curses, and will suffer miseries of every description.’

“It seems to me,” continues Mr. Lumsden, “that most of the preceding rules have their basis in the following principle...that the occurrence of a future event is naturally a matter of great uncertainty, and generally speaking, will be so considered, if expressed by the future tense of the verb. Past events having already occurred, are subject to no uncertainty at all. And hence it happens, that a Persian, having occasion to speak of a future event, which he believes to be of certain occurrence, will naturally enough employ the past tense of the verb: by the use of which he means to apprise his auditor, that the occurrence of the event, though still future, is, in his opinion, not less certain, than if it were past.”

Of this character is the passage cited by Mr. de Sacy, from the “Concessus of Hariri, Arab. Gram., vol. i. p. 123, &c. لَا تَلْمِظْتُ بِقِرَاكُمِ اَوْ I WILL BY NO MEANS TOUCH your meat, unless, &c. See Storr, p. 163—4. Pococke’s Specim. Hist. Arab., p. 57. Gram. Syr. Isaac Sciadrensis, Rom. 1636, P. صَحَسِ, &c.

The following passages from the Commentary on the Arabic Grammar of Ibn Ulhājīb by نجم الدين العراقي will put this question out of all doubt, as to the practice of the Orientals. Speaking of the preterite tense, it is said:

: שָׂר-נְשָׁלוֹם. For a child HAS BEEN (i. e. shall surely be)

وينصرف الي الاستقبال بالانشاء الطلبي اما دعاءً نحو رحمك الله او امراً
نحو قول علي عليه السلام أجزأ امر قرنه آسا اخاه بنفسه وينصرف الي
الاستقبال أيضاً بان يخبر من الامور المستقبله ان قصد القطع بوقوعها
كقوله تعالى ونادي اصحاب الجنة . . . انه من حيث افادة المتكلم
لوقوع الفعل قطعاً كانه وقع ومضي . . . وينقلب الماضي اليه ايضاً اذا كان
منفياً او ان كان في جواب القسم نحو والله لا فعلت وان فعلت . . .
وينقلب ايضاً اليه بدخول كلم المجازاة غير لو واما كان فقد يبقي
معها علي المضي نحو قوله تعالى ان كنت قلته . . . وينقلب ايضاً
&c., i. e. بدخول ما النايبة عن الظرف . . . نحو ما دامت السموات
“ *The preterite takes the future signification, when used in passages intimating desire—whether in prayer; as, رحمتك الله MAY GOD HAVE MERCY ON THEE;—or, command, as in the saying of Ali, LET THE MAN REWARD HIS NEIGHBOUR (أجزأ pret.) who in his own person has done good to his BROTHER. It is also changed into the future, when speaking of some future event, and intending to enounce it as certain to come to pass; as in the passage (of the Koran). The inhabitants of Paradise SHALL call, &c. (have called. Surat. Alaraf.) where the speaker mentions the event as HAVING ALREADY COME TO PASS. It is also taken as a future, when accompanied by a negative, or, as an answer to an oath; as, BY GOD I WILL NOT DO IT, or, SHOULD I DO IT. It is also used as a future in hypothetical sentences, except with the particle لو SHOULD, UNLESS, &c. But, as to the verb كَانَ, it will retain its preterite signification: as, IF I HAD SAID IT. It is also changed when the particle ما is used intimating time: e. g. AS LONG AS THE HEAVENS HAVE ENDURED (i. e. SHALL ENDURE”), &c. It is very evident, that the same principle prevails throughout every instance here adduced (if we except the hypothetical ones,—of which something will be said hereafter,—and كان which is used as an auxiliary), namely, that of certainty, and thence intense petition, or command, grafted upon this certainty.—See Viger de idiotismis Græcis, p. 167. Edit. 1813, with the notes. Winer’s Gram. of the New Test.,
p. 105. (b.)*

BORN to us, a Son HATH BEEN (or surely shall be) GIVEN to us; so the Government is upon his shoulder, and (one) calls his name Wonder, Counsellor (or Preacher), Mighty God, the Father (or Proprietor) of an age, the Prince of peace; Ib. vii. 18, וְהָיָה בַיּוֹם הַהוּא יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּקֶצֶה יְאִרֵי מִצְרַיִם וְהָיָה לְזָבוּב אֲשֶׁר בְּקֶצֶה יְאִרֵי מִצְרַיִם, &c. *And it SHALL (certainly) COME TO PASS, in that day, Jehovah hisses (or shall hiss) to the bee which (is) in the extremity of the rivers of Egypt, &c.; Ib. 19, וּבָאוּ וְנָחוּ בְלִם בְּנִחְלֵי וּבְבֵתוֹת וּבְנִקְיֵי הַסְּלָעִים &c. *And they SHALL (certainly) COME, and SHALL all REST in the desolate valleys, and in the fissures of the rocks.

2. Upon the same principle, the Preterite tense is often used as an Imperative; which may, therefore, be termed emphatical: e. g. Deut. vi. 5, וְאָהַבְתָּ אֶת יְהוָה : אֱלֹהֶיךָ בְּכָל-לִבְבְּךָ וּבְכָל-נַפְשְׁךָ וּבְכָל-מְאֹדְךָ : וְהָיוּ הַדְּבָרִים הָאֵלֶּה אֲשֶׁר אִנְכִי מְצַוְּךָ הַיּוֹם עַל-לִבְבְּךָ : וְשָׁנַנְתָּם לְבָנֶיךָ וּדְבַרְתָּ בָם בְּשִׁבְתְּךָ בְּבֵיתְךָ וּבְלִכְתְּךָ בְּדַרְדַּרְךָ וּבְשֹׁכְבְּךָ וּבְקוּמְךָ : וְקִשְׁרְתָם לְאוֹת עַל-יָדְךָ וְהָיוּ לְטַטְפֹּת בֵּין עֵינֶיךָ : וְכַתַּבְתָּם : עַל-מְזוֹזוֹת בֵּיתְךָ וּבְשַׁעְרֶיךָ : And thou SHALT (surely) LOVE Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might. And these words which I command thee this day SHALL BE upon thy heart: and thou SHALT DILIGENTLY IMPRESS them upon thy children: and thou SHALT TALK of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And THOU SHALT BIND them for a sign on thy hand, and THEY SHALL BE for frontlets between thy eyes. And thou SHALT WRITE them upon the posts of thy house, and upon thy gates.

It will be imagined, perhaps, from the use of the accents here, that these preterites have been affected by the preceding imperative שָׁמַע (Art. 233. 3.). But this is unnecessary, as it regards their forms; because, had nothing but a simple imperative been intended, the common imperative forms might have been used. Innumerable instances occur, however, in which no such form precedes, as is also the case with the prophetic preterites just noticed. See Gen. xl. 14; xlv. 13; xlvi. 34; Ezek. ii. 4; iii. 17; iv. 5, 6.

3. In the following example, we have both the preterite and present tenses, used as prophetical futures; the former for the purpose of intimating certainty, and thence of affording assurance; the latter for the reasons already given (Artt. 231. 11. 235. 3.). Gen. xxvi. 3, גּוֹר בְּאֶרֶץ הַזֹּאת וְאֶהְיֶה עִמָּךְ וְאֶבְרַכְךָ בְּיָלְדְךָ וְלִזְרַעְךָ אֶתֵּן אֶת-כָּל-הָאָרְצוֹת הָאֵל וְהִקְמַתִּי אֶת-הַשְּׂבָעָה אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁבַּעְתִּי : אֶבְרַחֶם אָבִיךָ : sojourn in this land, and I am (or WILL BE) with thee, and so I bless (or WILL BLESS) thee: for to thee and to thy seed I give (or WILL GIVE) all these lands: and I WILL (surely) ESTABLISH the oath which I swear to Abraham thy father.

4. The following has a prohibitive sentence in the Present, followed by two predictions enounced in the Preterite, tense: Gen. xxvi. 24, אַל-תִּירָא בְּיִאֲתָךְ אֲנֹכִי וְהִרְבִּיתִי אֶת-זְרַעְךָ וּבִרְכִיתִיךָ וְהִרְבִּיתִי אֶת-זְרַעְךָ fear not, for I (am) with thee and WILL (surely) BLESS thee, and MULTIPLY thy seed.

5. When a preterite follows a present (prophetical) tense in the same order of events, and in the same context; the second of these, with as many succeeding verbs as follow in the same tense, order, &c. may be translated by the English compound tense, shall have—shall have had—or the like.* Examples:

* In this case the preterite is reckoned, not from the period in which the declaration is made, but from one future to it, as it is even in the English. The reason is: futurity is intended in the first, and consequently in every subsequent verb, whatever other particulars the context may require in this respect.

Deut. vii. 1, כִּי וַיֵּבִיאֲךָ יְהוָה אֱלֹהֶיךָ אֶל-הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר-אַתָּה, בָּא-שָׂמָה לְרִשְׁתָּהּ וְנָשַׁל גּוֹיִם-רַבִּים מִפְּנֶיךָ.... וַיִּתְּנֶם יְהוָה &c. when Jehovah thy God BRINGETH (or shall bring) THEE to the land whither thou art going to possess it, and SHALL HAVE CAST OUT many great nations from before thee.... and Jehovah thy God SHALL HAVE DELIVERED them up before thee, and thou SHALT HAVE SMITTEN them, (then) devote thou them to utter destruction.

6. In like manner, when two events are enounced, one of which is prior to the other, and that which occurred first in the order of time, being to be taken in the past tense (with reference to the time in which the relation was originally made), the following one may be translated into English in the preterpluperfect tense:* as, Gen. xxvi. 18, וַיִּקְרָא לָהֶן נְשָׂמוֹת בְּשֵׂמוֹת אֲשֶׁר-קָרָא לָהֶן : אָבִיו : So he calls them (i. e. at that time by) names, according to the names (by) which his father CALLED THEM (i. e. had called.)

237. General opinions may be enounced either in the preterite,† the participles, or in the present tense.

* In this case, the verb יִקְרָא is an historical present, and hence contemporary in act with the preceding verb יָשַׁב, and therefore preterite with reference to the time in which the narration is made: but, the following verb יִקְרָא is preterite with reference to this time, i. e. to the time of יָשַׁב and יִקְרָא, it is, therefore, a preterite still more remote, and equivalent to our pluperfect. So كَانَ خَرَجَ in Arabic, as already noticed.

† So in the Arabic لَوْ أَخَذْتَنِي مَعَكَ لَعَمَلْتُ عَسَلًا وَثَلْكَ, had you taken me with you, I had made honey like yourself; لَوْ كَانَ النَّاسُ كُلُّهُمْ عَقْلًا

HAD IT BEEN (so that) all men were wise, the world HAD BEEN DESTROYED. Mr. Lumsden has, I think, been very happy in his remarks on this sort of construction. "General opinions," says he, "ought to result from the observation of facts; and whether we state a general opinion, or the facts

Examples : Ps. i. 1, אֲשֶׁרִי הָאִישׁ אֲשֶׁר לֹא הָלַךְ בְּעֵצַת רְשָׁעִים וּבְדַרְךְ הַטְּאִים לֹא עָמַד וּבְמִשְׁבַּ לַיִּים לֹא יָשָׁב : Blessed (is) the man who HATH not WALKED in the counsel of the wicked, and HATH not STOOD in the way of sinners, and HATH not RESIDED in the habitation of the scorers; Prov. xxviii. 7, נֹצֵר תּוֹרָה בֶן מִבִּין וְרָעָה זֹלָלִים יִכְלִים אָבִיו : An intelligent son KEEPS the law ; but he who ATTENDS upon base men, PUTS his father to shame ; Ib. xi. 4, : לֹא יִוָּעַל הַיּוֹם בְּיוֹם עֲבָרָה וְיִצְדָּקָה תִּצְלֵל מִמּוֹת : Riches PROFIT not in the day of wrath ; but righteousness delivers from death.

238. Hypothetical sentences,—which are very nearly on which an opinion is founded, the effect is the same in either case. An Englishman will commonly state the opinion, as ‘Force cannot cope with fortune:’ and a Persian will be often disposed to state the facts on which the opinion is founded: as ‘The strong have been generally foiled in the contest with fortune.’ This, therefore,” adds he, “is a case in which the past may be said to supersede the future tense of the verb.” Example ; ^{كُرِين} ^{پس} ^{به} “henceforward I shall retire and dwell in a corner, like the ant; for even the elephant (which is the strongest of all animals) cannot master (has not mastered) his fortune by force.” Pers. Gram., vol. ii. p. 326.

The Arabic Grammarians endeavour to account for this use of the verb,—which they say must be taken as in the present tense,—by saying, that we have here, ^{الإنشاء} ^{الابتعائي}, by which they mean the retention of an event in the mind, which, although past as to fact is nevertheless present in effect; as, ^{أشتريت} I have sold, and am now dispossessed of the thing sold, ^{أشتريت} I have bought, and do possess, &c.; whereas, when we use the present tense in such cases, the thing sold, bought, &c. may be, or not, now in our possession. So we say in English, I AM come, he IS gone, not I HAVE come, he HAS gone. And in Hebrew, Is. xiv. 7 ; ^{וְנָחָה} ^{שָׁקֵטָה} ^{בְּלִי־הָאָרֶץ} ^{פָּצְחוּ} ^{וְנָחָה} &c., The whole land IS at rest, it IS quiet (has been), they BREAK forth (into) singing (have broken forth). See also some of the following verses. This, however, mostly takes place in intransitive verbs, such as ^{יָבֵל}, ^{הִתְחַבֵּ}, ^{קָמַן}, ^{יָגַל}, or the like. See also Viger. de idiot. Græc., p. 166. Edit. 1813, with the notes: also p. 163.

allied to the foregoing,—will be enounced either in the past or present tense, according to one or other of the preceding rules, or, as it shall suit the intention of the writer. Examples: Gen. xxvi. 10, מֵה־זֹאת עָשִׂיתָ לָנוּ כַּמַּעַט שָׁכַב : מה־זאת עשית לנו כמעט שכב : What is this (that) thou hast done to us? Some one of the people MIGHT lightly HAVE LAIN with thy wife, so thou WOULDST HAVE BROUGHT sin upon us; Ib. xxvii. 12, אָבִי וְהָיִיתִי בְעֵינָיו כַּמַּתְעַתֵּעַ וְהִבֵּאתִי עָלַי קָלְלָה וְלֹא בֵרָכָה : Perhaps my father MAY FEEL me; (or, putting the case that he feels me) so SHALL I (certainly) BECOME as a great deceiver in his eyes, and SHALL (surely) BRING upon myself a curse and not a blessing; Prov. vi. 1, בְּנֵי אִם־עָרַבְתָּ לְרַעָה תִקְעֶתָ לְזָר כַּפִּיד : עֲשֵׂה זֹאת &c., My son, if thou HAST BECOME surety for thy neighbour, if thou HAST STRICKEN thy hand with a stranger... do this, &c.; Gen. xxviii. 20, &c., אִם־יְהִי אֱלֹהִים עִמָּדִי וְשָׁמְרָנִי בְדַרְדָּר הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר אֲנֹכִי הוֹלֵךְ וְנָתַן־לִי לֶחֶם לֶאֱכֹל וּבְגָד לְלַבֵּשׁ : וְשָׁבְתִי בְשָׁלוֹם אֶל־בֵּית אָבִי וְיְהִי וְיְהִי לִי לֵאלֹהִים : וְהָאֵן &c., i. c. *As assuredly as that God is with me, and HATH PRESERVED me in this way in which I am (now) travelling, and HATH (hitherto) GIVEN me bread to eat and clothing to put on; so assuredly SHALL I RETURN to my father's house in peace; and Jehovah SHALL assuredly CONTINUE my God, and this stone, &c. Is. lxiii. 19, לֹא־קִרְעֶתָ שָׁמַיִם יִרְדֹּת מִפְּנֵי הָרִים נָזְלוּ :—מִפְּנֵי, &c.

* This passage has been entirely misunderstood. It contains an oath, or vow,—which is the same thing. This usage of the preterite in the Hebrew, as in the Arabic, generally designates oaths: and the principle upon which these are constructed is, by taking something which is most certain as a basis, and then by comparing the subsequent terms with it. See Heb. vi. 13—19, and the Moolla Jāmī on Ibn Ulhājib, pp. ۴۱۷-۴۱۲. These forms, therefore, imply no curse or ban, as the forms of cursing do; which run thus, God do so to me, &c.

: הָרָזוּ יְרֵחוֹ HADST thou RENT the heavens, HADST thou DESCENDED, HAD the mountains BEEN REDUCED before thee;... then the nations HAD TREMBLED before thee;* Lev. x. 19,

* In translating this passage, I have taken הָרָזוּ as the Niphhál of הָרָזוּ, to which it seems to me most properly to belong, (see Simonis's Lexicon sub voce.) and לֹא as a particle implying supposition with a negation, according to its most usual import both in Hebrew and Arabic. It should also be observed, that in the first and two last examples, the preterite is used, as in the statement of general opinions, and for the reasons assigned by Mr. Lumsden. The particles, preceding such expressions, may always be considered as intended to put a suppositious case; or, in other words, to lay down a general fact as accidental, and then to deduce the consequence: which may be stated, either in the past or present tense, as circumstances may require. Of this character are the following Arabic examples; لَوْ لَا عَرَفْنَاكَ لَفَعَلْنَا مِثْلَ ذَلِكَ HAD we not KNOWN thee, we HAD (surely) DONE after this manner; or, WE SHOULD (surely) HAVE DONE SO; taking the second member as a future of certainty with respect to the first; لَوْ كُنْتَ هَاهُنَا لَمْ يَمُتْ أَخِي HADST thou BEEN here, my brother WOULD not HAVE DIED; إِنْ فَعَلْتَ ذَلِكَ ضَيَعْتَ مَالِي HAD I DONE this, I SHOULD SURELY HAVE LOST my wealth; إِنْ أَنَا كَثَّرْتُ عُلْفَهَا DID I INCREASE her food, she WOULD (probably) LAY two eggs: i. e. putting the case, that, if I had done so, then she would perhaps lay, &c. De Sacy's Gram. Arab., vol. i. p. 124, &c.

The Persian examples selected by Mr. Lumsden seem to me all subject to this distinction, i. e. of certainty or contingency; and to have been enounced accordingly, either in the past, present, or future tense; اِگَر نَرَسِيدِي اِنْتِظَارَتِ HAD you not ARRIVED, the expectation of you, WOULD (probably) HAVE KILLED (me); اِگَر اِمْرُوز بَر خَلْقِ رَحْمِ كَثِي فَرْدَا مَرْحُومِ شَدِي if to-day you (by any chance) shew mercy to mankind, to-morrow you HAVE RECEIVED mercy, i. e. CERTAINLY SHALL RECEIVE it. See Pers. Gram., vol. ii. p. 322, &c. That is to say, the present tense appears to be chosen when contingency is intended to be intimated, the preterite when it is not. The one therefore is a less forcible form of expression than the other.

: וְאִבְלַתִּי חַטָּאת הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה בְּעֵינֵי יְהוָה : and, HAD I EATEN the sin-offering to-day, would it HAVE (seemed) GOOD in the eyes of Jehovah ?

239. Commands, requests, prohibitions, deprecations, blessings, and, hence, future events taken prophetically, will be enounced by the imperatives of verbs, or by any of those other forms, which are used as imperatives (Art. 233. 3. 234. 235.): as, Gen. xxvii. 3, וְעַתָּה שְׂאֵ-נָא כְלִיד תְּלִיד וְקִשְׁתְּךָ וְצַדִּיָּה : And now, TAKE, I pray, thy weapons, thy quiver and thy bow, and GO OUT into the plain, and HUNT for me a hunting. Ib. v. 26, בָּשָׂה- : COME NEAR NOW, and KISS me, my son. Ib. v. 28, וַיִּתֵּן-לָהּ הָאֱלֹהִים מְטַל הַשָּׁמַיִם and MAY God GIVE (or, he shall give) thee of the dew of heaven. Ps. xxxvii. 1, : אַל-תִּתְחַר בְּמַרְעִים אַל-תִּקְנָא בְּעֹשֵׂי עוֹלָה : BE not IRRITATED at those who are evil; ENVY thou not the workers of iniquity. Gen. xxiv. 60, הֲיִי לְאַלְפֵי רֶבֶבָה, וַיִּירַשׁ זֶרְעֶךָ אֶת שַׁעַר שְׁנָאוֹי BECOME thou (i. e. thou shalt be) thousands of myriads, and LET thy seed POSSESS the gate of those that hate them. See Gen. xii. 2, xx. 7, xlv. 18; Deut. xxxii. 50; Is. xlvii. 1; Ps. xxxvii. 27, xlv. 4, 5: also Ps. lxix. from vr. 7 to the end, explained by St. Paul, Rom. xi. 9, &c., as prophetic. So also Ps. cix. compared with Acts i. 20; Ps. lxxix. 6—12. See Glassius, Lib. i. Tract iv., § i., Canon ii., Lib. iii., Tract iii.; Canon xliii. xlv., &c. Remarks.

240. The preceding rules seem to be governed by two general principles. One, in which the Writer,—setting out from the period in which he commences his narrative,—follows the different circumstances of it, as if himself and his reader were present; and hence dates the tenses of his verbs from the different periods in which he thus places himself: still, however, reserving the right of returning to his original position whenever he pleases.

2. By the other principle, events, which it is believed will certainly take place, are represented as having already come to pass: and thence preterites are used as Imperatives for the greater emphasis. Nothing surely can be more natural than the adoption of such principles. And, when we consider the great degree of precision, which their application must communicate to the context, we shall be induced to believe, that the poverty and uncertainty, of which it has been fashionable to accuse the Hebrew language, has rather arisen out of our own ignorance, than from any defect inherent in its construction. We do not mean to affirm, however, that we can always say, why one mode of enunciation is preferred to another, when, as far as we can see, either would have suited the character of the context: nor can we in the Greek and Latin, notwithstanding all that has been said in their favour. In many cases the parallelism may have had some influence, in others attraction; but, upon the whole, I believe we can give as good an account of the use of the tenses in the Hebrew, as can be given in either the Greek, Latin, or any other language.

LECTURE XVIII.

ON THE NATURE AND CONSTRUCTION OF THE PARTICLES, AND ADVERBS.

241. IT has been seen (Art. 222.), that adverbs are nothing more than words, added for the purpose of qualifying the signification of verbs generally; we now come to consider some of those cases, which are not of the most common occurrence, and which may otherwise present some difficulties to the Learner.

2. Adverbs in immediate connexion with verbs may be considered as absolute (Art. 220. 2.), or, as added for the purpose of specification (Art. 219. note): those in mediate connexion, as in the definite state of construction with the preceding word or particle; which word, or particle, may nevertheless be absolute with respect to the verb. General examples are given, Art. 222. The following are some, in which we have attributives singular and plural, pronouns, and particles, thus construed: תָּרַד בְּלָאִים she descends, WONDERS! i. e. wonderfully, Lam. i. 9; מִיִּשְׂרָיִם תִּשְׁפָּטוּ RIGHT THINGS judge ye, i. e. righteously, Ps. lviii. 2; נִוְרָאוֹת נִפְלִיֹתֵי (in) DREADFUL THINGS I have become wonderful, i. e. I have become fearfully wonderful, Ps. cxxxix. 14; וְתוֹרֶךְ נִוְרָאוֹת יִמְיָךְ and thy right hand shall shew thee (to be) WONDERS, i. e. very wonderful. Ps. xlv. 5. Comp. Is. ix. 5, and the Septuagint.

3. It will immediately be seen, that these instances may all be construed under one or other of the rules already given. So also with pronouns: בְּזֶה in this (place), for here; בְּזֶה, בְּזוֹה, and בְּזוֹאת like this; thus; לָמָּה,* or לָמָּה for what, why? בְּאֲשֶׁר in that which, i. e. place or time, as the context shall require; or אֲשֶׁר absolutely, for where, when? since, because, &c.

4. Negative particles ought to be considered as affecting the action, &c. of the verb either expressed or understood; not as negating the substance implied by the noun; † e. g. עַם לֹא־עוֹ a people, NOT strong, Prov.

* The particles ב, and ל, are occasionally equivalent to the εἰς of the New Testament, signifying for the purpose of, in order to, &c., as, Ps. xxix. 4, בְּכֹחַ εἰς δύναμιν; powerful, effective, ib. בְּיָדָיו in ordinem, producing order.

† Such expressions as, there is no man, no place, nothing, &c. would be considered as monstrous by an Oriental, whom it would be extremely difficult to persuade that we were not affirming both the existence and non-existence of

xxx. 25; ^{לֹא-כֵן עָשׂוּ}* NOT SO (or, according to Schreöderus, right) have they done, Jer. xlvi. 30; ^{נִתְּתִי לָהֶם} I ascribed to them,—i. e. declared that they were subject to,—statutes (which were) NOT GOOD, the same thing at the same time. They would say, there is not a man, &c., which is certainly more natural and intelligible. See Art. 218. 2. note.

The Arabs make their adverbs by an indefinite attributive put absolutely, or in immediate, or mediate, apposition with the word intended to be qualified, which may be either the subject or the object of the verb: e. g.,

^{جَاءَنِي زَيْدٌ رَاكِبًا} Zaid came to me, RIDING; ^{ضَرَبْتُ زَيْدًا مُشَدُّودًا وَلَقِيتُ}

^{عَمْرًا رَاكِبِينَ} I struck Zaid VIOLENTLY, and I met Amr, BOTH RIDING. In these cases the adverbs are put in what is termed the accusative case, where the connexion seems to be mediate, i. e. in which some intervening word is to be understood. In the following, they are in the nominative, and the connexion is manifestly immediate. ^{جَاءَنِي زَيْدٌ وَغُلَامَةٌ رَاكِبٌ} Zaid came to me, and his servant (was) RIDING. The reason given for the first of these examples by the author of the

Hidáyat oon Nahve (p. 149) is, that a verb is understood: his words are, ^{وَمِثَالُ مَا كَانَ عَامِلَهَا مَعْنَى الْفِعْلِ نَحْوُ هَذَا زَيْدٌ قَائِمًا فَإِنَّ مَعْنَاهُ ائْتَى}

^{وَأَشِيرُ}. The examples, in which the signification of a verb was the governing principle, as in “this Zaid (is) standing,” require a verb to be understood: thus, “I intend, I point out.”—His meaning is this: “as to this Zaid, I mention him as standing.” By this he intends to shew, why the accusative case is used in such places. Mr. de Sacy gives a different account of this construction, see Gram. Arab. vol. ii. Art. 630; where he considers ^{رَاكِبًا} as intended to point out a sort of logical objective case to the verb ^{جَاءَ}. For my own part, I would prefer considering this termination as the fragment of some word, formerly used as a postposition, and therefore, as equivalent to the preposition ^{بِ}, see note, p. 291, and to be translated thus: Zaid came to me (IN the situation of) a person riding.

* ^{يُؤَسِّسُ} establish, &c. Hence ^{يُؤَسِّسُ}; and Art. 73. ^{يُؤَسِّسُ} establishing, right, just, &c.

(Art. 154. 8. note.) Ezek. xx. 25. So, תהו לא־דָרָךְ EMPTINESS (want of culture, in which there is) not a way, Ps. cvii. 40; לא־נֵשָׁם לוֹ NOT giving light, Amos v. 20; לא־אֵישׁ (there is) NO name to him, i. e. he is nameless; לא־אִישׁ (who is) NO eminent man, לא־אָדָם (who is) NOT a mean man, Is. xxxi. 8; אֶמְרָתִי לְלֹא־עַמִּי I will say to (her who is) NOT my people, Hos. ii. 25; הַשְּׂמֵחִים לְלֹא דָבָר those who rejoice in (that which is) NOT a matter, i. e. in a non-reality, Amos vi. 13, &c. In many cases, too, לָא may be construed as a noun put in the definite state of construction with the following word, intimating the want, defect, or the like, of the thing mentioned.

5. In the particle אֵין this is still more apparent; for it takes the vowels necessary for the state of construction* (Art. 143. 6.): e. g. אֵין מוֹשִׁיעַ WANT, LACK, of a saviour, Deut. xxii. 27; לְחַנְּנָה אֵין יְלָדִים to Hannah (was) A WANT of children, 1 Sam. i. 2; אֵינְנִי שֹׁמֵעַ A WANT of me hearing, i. e. I hear not, Jer. xiv. 12; so אִישׁ אָדָם the BEING, EXISTING, of a man, i. e. there is a man, Eccl. ii. 21; אִישׁ צְדִיקִים THE EXISTENCE of just men, i. e. there are just men, Eccl. viii. 14; בְּאֶרֶץ אִם־יִשְׁנֶה putting the case that HIS EXISTENCE (be) in the land, i. e. if he be, &c., 1 Sam. xxiii. 23.

6. When any of these particles follow the word to be qualified, they will be absolute: e. g. כִּי־עַתָּה הָיִיתֶם לֹא for now ye have become (of) NOTHING, Job vi. 21; מֵיִם אֵין water (is) NOT; אִישׁ מְסֻפָּא provision BEING, i. e. there is provision, Judg. xix. 19.

7. Similar to לָא, and אֵין, in construction and force is סָאָפֶּ terminating, expiring; hence, defect, non-existence, &c.: e. g. אֵלֹהִים לֹא אֶסְאָף NOT a God, or, no God, Isa. xlv. 14; אֲנִי וְאֶפְסֵי עוֹד I am, and EXCEPTING ME, still (is none), Zeph. ii. 15.

* See my Hebrew Lexicon sub voce. On the etymology of these particles, see Art. 171.

8. The following are similar constructions with the particles: עוֹד † returning, reiteration, yet, still, &c.; הִן see, behold; אֵל defect, want, not; כִּי marking, observing, inferring, whether, that, &c.; מִן, or מִ, cutting off, separating, from, than, &c.; בְּלִי, and בְּלִיתִי, growing old, decaying, lack, non-existence; טָרַם cutting off, defect; want, not yet, &c., with or without other particles, &c.; עוֹדָךְ מְחַזֵּק THY CONTINUING a retainer, or holder, i. e. thou still retainest, Job ii. 9; בְּעוֹד יוֹמָם in (being) YET full day, Jer. xv. 9; בְּעוֹדִי in MY STILL being, Ps. cxlvi. 2; מֵעוֹדִי from, or, since, MY STILL existing, i. e. since my birth, Gen. xlviii. 15; אֲבָרָהָם עוֹמְדוֹ † Abraham, HIS CONTINUING a stander, i. e. he still stood, Gen. xviii. 22; הִנֵּהוּ עוֹשֶׂה BEHOLD HIM, a doer, i. e. he does, Jer. xviii. 3; מֵאֵין כְּמוֹךָ FROM (there) NOT BEING (any) like thee, Jer. x. 7; קִלּוֹן מְכַבּוֹד שְׁבַעְתָּ thou art filled (with) ignominy, WANTING (being destitute of) glory, reputation, Hab. ii. 16.

9. To this kind of construction may be referred all those passages, which are generally translated by a word in the comparative degree, with than following it: e. g. Prov. viii. 10, קָרוֹי מוֹסְרִי וְאֵל-בְּסוֹף וְדַעַת מְחַרְוֹץ נִבְחָר accept my castigation, and NOT, i. e.

* See also Art. 171. 2. 3.

† עוֹד returning, &c.; עוֹד and Art. 87. 1. עוֹד.

‡ In the case of the Epenthetic ו being added to this particle, as well as to some others; the relation of a subsequent member of a sentence seems to be occasionally pointed out, as in Art. 235. 3. with some emphasis. Examine the instances of this and אֶפְסֵי, &c., in Noldius.

rather than, silver : and knowledge, NOT, i. e. rather than choice gold : i. e. put silver and gold out of the question, when these things are proposed, as unworthy of being mentioned with them. The negative particle occurring here, in the first member of the parallelism, is sufficient to determine in what sense that in the second is to be taken. Of this sort of expression is, "If any man come to me, and hate not his father and mother," &c., Luke xiv. 26, John xii. 25, &c., where this hatred, or rather disregard, is not spoken of as absolute, but relative, i. e. the comparison is here, as in the case of oaths (Art. 242. 8.), strong and positive, though not necessarily absolute.

10. So with other negative particles, לֹא־אַתֶּם שְׁלַחְתֶּם אֹתִי הֵנָּה, you sent me not hither, BUT God, Gen. xlv. 8, i. e. it is NOT you, but rather God, &c. See Exod. xvi. 8, 1 Sam. viii. 7, Jer. vii. 22, 23, Hos. i. 9, vi. 6, Ps. li. 18, Eccl. iv. 9, and Matt. xxiii. 28, Luke x. 20, xiv. 12. 14, 1 Pet. iii. 6. See Storr, p. 251, &c.

Examples of בְּלִי, &c. : עַד־בְּלִי יָרַח until the DECAY of the moon, i. e. as long as it shall endure, Ps. lxxii. 7 ; עַד־בְּלִיתֵי שָׁמַיִם until THE DEFECT of the heavens, i. e. as long as they shall last, Job xiv. 12 ; מִבְּלִי הַשְּׂאִיר־לוֹ כֹּל from THE NOT leaving to him every thing, i. e. any thing, Deut. xxviii. 55 ; לְבִלְתִּי־שׁוּב for the LACK of returning, i. e. the not returning, Ezek. xiii. 22 ; מִמְּבִלְתִּי יִכְלֹת from THE WANT of power, Numb. xiv. 16 ; לְבִלְתִּי תִחַטְּאוּ for CESSATION of your sinning, i. e. that you should not sin, Exod. xx. 20 ; הֲמִבְּלִי אֵין־קִבְרִים Is it from the WANT of graves ? Exod. xvi. 11 ; בְּטָרֶם־לֹא יָבוֹא in its NOT YET coming, Zeph. ii. 2.

11. The following are examples of prepositions in immediate connexion with the word to be qualified, restricted, &c. : מִן־הֵם הַיֹּשְׁבִים שָׁם לְפָנִים, OF HAM (were) the dwellers there of former (times), 1 Chron. iv. 40 ; כְּקוֹל מַיִם רַבִּים, LIKE the sound of many waters, Ezek.

i. 24 ; נַפְשִׁי כְּאַרְץ־עֵפֶה לָּךְ, my soul (is) like a parched land (with respect) to thee, Ps. cxliii. 6.

In these, and all similar cases, it will be of no consequence whether we suppose the particles in apposition, or in the definite state of construction ; there being no mark of case in the Hebrew. The latter, perhaps, agrees best with the analogy ; because we have in some of the particles the form proper for that state, as in אֶל־הַקָּבֵר TO the grave, Job v. 26 ; עַל־יְשׁוּר OVER the wall, Gen. xlix. 22 ; אַחֲרַי מֹשֶׁה after Moses, Exod. xxxiii. 8 ; and in the Arabic always, as, عَلِي الْمَسْجِدِ i. e. THE OVER (part) of the mosque : for OVER the mosque. See Art. 171. 3, &c.

12. Examples of mediate construction, i. e. when one or more particles intervene : נָתַתִּי . . . לְמוֹנֵן לְבָב . . . אֶבְחַת־הַרְבֵּב, FOR THE PURPOSE OF melting (the) heart . . . have I appointed the descent of the sword, Ezek. xxi. 20 ; בָּא עַד־אַלְיָהֶם. He came UP TO them, i. e. even to them, 2 Kings ix. 20 ; לְבַד מִטָּף, for each, EXCLUDING infants, i. e. with respect to the men, excluding the children, or, beside the children, Exod. xii. 37 ; מֵחוּץ לְחוֹמָה from without (with respect) to the wall, Jer. xxi. 4.

13. The intervening particles most in use are, ל, and מ, which seem to be added in order to mark the word, to which the preceding one has some relation, and also to point out the nature of that relation, e. g. תַּחַת לְרֹאשִׁי beneath (with reference) to my head, i. e. under my head, Cant. ii. 6 : חוּצָה לְעִיר, outwards (with reference) to the city, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 15 ; אֶל־מִבֵּית לְפָרְקָת, to (that which is) FROM within (with respect) to the veil, Lev. xvi. 15 ; אֶרְחָ חַיִּים אֶרְחָ לְמַעַלָּה לְמַשְׁבִּיל לְמַעַן סוּר מִשְׂאוֹל מִטָּח, the way of life, or, religious instruction (is) FOR the elevating or the understanding (person,) FOR the purpose of (his) receding from the grave beneath, Prov. xv. 24 ; חָשַׁבְתָּ לְמַטָּח מֵעֲוֹנוֹנוּ, thou hast refrained (with reference) to bringing down (degrading) FROM our sins, Ezra ix. 13.

Of this kind are the combinations לְמַאֲד עַד 2 Chron. xvi. 14 ; לְמַעְלָה עַד לְאִין מְרַפָּא Ib. xvii. 12 ; עַד לְאִין מְרַפָּא Ib. xxxvi. 16, &c.

So, וְאֲשֶׁר בְּשָׁמַיִם מִמַּעַל וְאֲשֶׁר בְּאָרֶץ מִתַּחַת וְאֲשֶׁר בַּמַּיִם : וְאֲשֶׁר בְּשָׁמַיִם מִמַּעַל, which (is) in the heavens from above, and which (is) in the earth from beneath, and which (is) in the waters from beneath (with respect) to the earth, Exod. xx. 4.

The phrases here used, from above, and from beneath, must necessarily be taken relatively: in the first instance above, with respect to the earth; in the second beneath, with respect to the heavens; and in the third, beneath, or low, with reference to the earth, which is expressed by ל: i. e. Thou shalt make no image of the heavenly bodies which are above, nor of the creatures &c. which are on the earth beneath; nor of those which are in the waters that are still lower than the earth: not, which are “in the waters under the earth,” &c. Hence will appear the great necessity there is of observing, to what words these particles have immediate reference; and hence, the care we should take as to how we construe them.

14. When the preposition בֵּין between, is used for the purpose of opposing one noun to another, but is not repeated; it has this peculiarity, that it requires the insertion of ל before the latter: e. g. בֵּין מַיִם לְמַיִם between waters (as opposed) to waters, Gen. i. 6; בֵּין דָּיִן לְדָיִן between cause (as opposed) to cause, i. e. between cause and cause, Deut. xvii. 8. If however this particle is repeated, its influence is immediate: e. g. בֵּין הָאוֹר וּבֵין הַחֹשֶׁךְ BETWEEN the light, and BETWEEN the darkness, Gen. i. 4.

15. From what has been said on the primitive and derived significations of words (Art. 144.), it will be easy to conceive how cases may occur, in which it will be exceedingly difficult to ascertain the precise force of these particles; and, consequently, the precise relation between words which they are intended to point out and define. Generally, however, either the primitive, or one or other of the derived, senses of the particle, considered in conjunction with the context, will afford us sufficient light. But here Noldius should be consulted.

16. The following instances, taken from Glassius, are intended to shew how these particles influence certain modes of expression; * יָלְכוּ מִחַיִל אֶל-חַיִל, they proceed FROM strength TO strength, i. e. they become stronger and stronger, Ps. lxxxiv. 8; בִּי מִרָעָה אֶל-רָעָה יֵצְאוּ, for they go out FROM evil to evil, i. e. they become worse and worse, Jer. ix. 2.

For similar expressions in the Greek Testament, see Rom. i. 17, vi. 19, 2 Cor. iii. 18, Phil. ii. 27, &c.

17. Of the particles which signify motion towards, † or rest in, a place, the following are examples. The first ה— is, more properly a postposition like the Latin versus: e. g. וַיָּבֹאוּ שְׁנֵי הַמַּלְאָכִים סְדֹמָה, and two of the angels came TO Sodom, Gen. xix. 1; עַד אֲשֶׁר-אָבֵא אֵלַי— until I come in UNTO my Lord—TOWARDS Seir, Gen. xxxiii. 14.

See Gen. x. 19, xii. 5, xlvi. 1. 4, Deut. ii. 13, 1 Kings xviii. 45, xix. 15, Jer. xxix. 15, Jonah i. 3. In the following passages ל is also prefixed, Ps. ix. 18, 1 Chron. xxvi. 17. See Art. 180. 15. 16.

* So in the Arabic, من ناحية الى ناحية, from part to part, i. e. proceeding on. Tale of Sindbad, Ed. Langlés, p. 1., &c. So also χάρις ἀπὸ χάριτος, grace for grace, i. e. an increase or excess of grace, far surpassing that of the Law of Moses, John i. 16.

† In this respect the postposition ה, the prepositions אֶל, עַל, מִן, and ל, are found to have the same, or very nearly the same, force. From the construction and sense in which this particle is found, there is good reason for supposing, that it is the same with the Arabic ل, which is said to mark the accusative; and it is probably derived from the same root. No one I think can read

הִטְלִימֶהּ אֲרָצָה, cast it to the earth, Exod. iv. 3, and اطرحوه أرضاً &c. Surat of Joseph, without being struck with the identity of the expressions, especially when we know, that the nasal of the Arabic is generally disregarded in conversation. In this case, too, we have no intervening particle; yet, in other cases, we find each of these verbs construed also with ב, ל, אל, על, מן, as may be seen in the Dictionaries; and the conclusion must be, that the particle prefixed in the one case, must be equivalent to the ה postfixed in the other.

18. In the following, אֶל seems to have the same force with ב : אֶל-אֲבוֹתַי בְּמַעְרָה &c. as for me, (I am) to be gathered to my people; bury me:—TO my fathers,—TO the cave IN the cave, &c., Gen. xlix. 29, 30.

But here, the particle אֶל refers in every case to the verb נִאֶקֶף, and ב in vr. 30, to קָבְרוּ; and if so, these particles retain their usual and proper signification. So 1 Kings viii. 30; וְשָׁמַעְתָּ אֶל-תְּהִינָה וְעַבְדְּךָ וְעַמֶּיךָ יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲשֶׁר יִתְפַּלְלוּ אֶל-הַמָּקוֹם הַזֶּה וְאַתָּה תִשְׁמָע אֶל-הַשְּׁמַיִם, and attend thou to the supplication of thy servant and of thy people Israel, who shall pray TOWARDS this place; and give ear thou:—TOWARDS the place of thy dwelling,—TOWARDS heaven.

The last five words here must I think, be referred to the preceding יִתְפַּלְלוּ; and, if so, the construction will be regular, and the signification of the particle אֶל constant. Constructions of this sort are frequent: and they are looked upon as elegant in the Arabic.

Of this character are the following passages, which, in any other point of view, are very obscure, Hos. x. 4; וּפְרַח כְּרֹאשׁ מְשֻׁפֵּט עַל : תִּלְמֵי שָׂדֵי : and judgment blossoms forth, just as hemlock (does) on the furrows of the field, i. e. abundant and deleterious, Isa. i. 12: בִּי תִבְאוּ לְרֵאוֹת פָּנַי מִי-בִקֵּשׁ זֹאת מִיָּדְכֶם רַמֵּס חֲצָרַי : when ye come crawling in my courts, in order to be seen by me, (i. e. in this abject hypocritical manner), who hath sought this (sort of sacrifice, mentioned just before) at your hands? Ps. lxxiii. 2, 3; צִמְאָה לָהּ : נַפְשִׁי כָמָה לָהּ בְּשָׂרֵי בְּאֲרָץ-צִיָּה וְעַיִן בְּלֵי-מָוֶם : מִן בִּקְדֵשׁ חֲזִיתָהּ : לְרֵאוֹת עֵזָה וּבְבוֹדָה : My soul hath thirsted for thee, my flesh hath become faint (for want) of thee,—to see thy power and thy glory, even as I have seen thee in the sanctuary, (being now) in a land of drought and weakness (and) without water, Ps. lxxviii. 19; עָלִיתָ לְמַרוֹם שְׁבִיטָה לְשִׁבִי לְמִקְוֵת מַתְּנוֹת בְּאָדָם וְאַף סוֹרְרִים לְשִׁפְן הָיָה : אֱלֹהִים : thou, O Lord God, hast ascended up on high (there) to dwell; thou hast taken captivity captive (i. e. hast overcome the great enemy and subduer of man); thou hast received gifts for man (i. e. mankind), nay even (for) the rebellious ones.

Instances of this sort are numerous. The following are a few of these:—Ps. xxiv. 6, זֶה דֹרֵר דִּרְשָׁיו-וַיַּעֲקֹב, This (is) the race of those who seek Him, (viz.) of Jacob. In Amos v. 16, construe קָרָאִי with קָחִי יְדֵי אֶל-יִזְעִי, They shall call to the knowing of lament for weeping and mourning, &c. Ps. xv. 4, נִשְׁבַּע לְהָרַע, He hath sworn to injure, &c. belongs to נִמְאָם preceding. This will make all easy and clear. So also Ps. lxxxiv. 3, 4, where אֶת-מִזְבְּחוֹתַיָּהּ, is to be referred to the verb נִקְסְפָה in the preceding verse. Ps. xlv. 6, הֶאֱזִיחַ...בְּלֵב וּגֹ, Thy arrows...in the heart, &c. So also Gen. x. 22, הַגְּדוֹל, is to be construed with אֲשֶׁם preceding. To which others almost innumerable might be added.

LECTURE XIX.

ON THE NATURE AND USE OF THE CONJUNCTIONS.

242. WORDS standing in the situation of conjunctions, in the Hebrew, are subject to the laws both of apposition, and of definite construction, just as other words are. In many instances, indeed, they are the very words which at other times are used as pronouns, adverbs, or prepositions; the situation alone, in which they are found, giving them the character of conjunctions. A few such as ו, ׀, &c.* are always used as conjunctions.

* The first of these seems to be derived from ו a hook, connector,—Art. 173—and consequently, to signify, in addition, besides, and, &c. The second is probably from the word جَمّ multiplying, becoming abundant, or the like, and equivalent to our moreover, much more, &c. See Storr, p. 337.

*Examples in which the Relative Pronoun אֲשֶׁר is used as a Conjunction.

וַיֵּרָא שָׂאוּל אֲשֶׁר-הוּא מִשְׁכִּיל. AND Saul saw THAT (QUOD) he (was) intelligent, 1 Sam. xviii. 15 ; אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה דָּוִד אֶת-הַיָּשָׁר. (Because) THAT David did what (was) right, &c., i. e. eo quod fecit, &c., 1 Kings xv. 5 ; וַיָּשָׁב הָעָפָר עַל-הָאָרֶץ כַּשֶּׁהָיָה. And the dust returns to the earth like WHAT it was, Eccl. xii. 7.

2. Of adverbs, prepositions, &c., simple or compound: בְּלֹא אִם-לֹכֵד. UNLESS TRULY he have taken, Amos iii. 4 ; עַקֵּב כִּי בִזְתִּנִּי. A CONSEQUENCE THAT thou hast despised me, i. e. because that, &c. 2 Sam. xii. 10 ; עַקֵּב אֲשֶׁר שָׁמַע אַבְרָהָם בְּקוֹלִי. A CONSEQUENCE OF THAT WHICH (ejus quod) Abraham hath heard my voice, Gen. xxvi. 5.

So עַד אִם, until, Ruth ii. 21 ; עַד אֲשֶׁר, until that which, Jonah iv. 5 ; עַל אֲשֶׁר, upon that which, whereupon, Deut. xxix. 24 ; כִּי Id., Judg. iii. 12 ; עַל-דִּבְרֵי אֲשֶׁר, upon the affair which ; because ; Deut. xxi. 14 ; תַּחַת אֲשֶׁר, beneath that which ; because ; Prov. i. 29 ; לְמַעַן אֲשֶׁר, for the purpose of which ; because ; &c. Ezek. xx. 26. To these a great number of others may be added.

3. The following passages are apparently elliptical, but really not so when the force of the particles is seen : חֲזִיקוּ יְדֵי מְרִיעִים לְבָלְתֵי-שָׁבוּ. They have strengthened the hands of the evil doers for their not having returned, &c., i. e., because they themselves have not returned from their evil ways, Jer. xxiii. 14.

The word בְּלֹא deficiency, &c. is very nearly equivalent to not : the particle ל is added as before (Art. 241.) : and the verb שָׁבוּ is manifestly in the preterite tense. The sense seems to be, that it is because these people have not returned from their evil ways, that the hands of sinners have been so much strengthened ; and not, that none may return, the sense usually taken. So Is. xiv. 6, מִכָּה עַמִּים בְּעִבְרָה מִפֶּת בְּלֹא סָרָה, who strikes the people in wrath a stroke (that) hath not departed. Here מַכָּה is evidently in the state of definite construction with בְּלִיַּי; and סָרָה, added as a verb; and, as it is contrary to the genius of every Oriental language to negative the noun, the force of this negative combination must eventually influence the verb thus, “a stroke without having passed away,” i. e. continual. So we say in English, in-finite, never-ending, and the like, when we wish to express the indefinite continuity of any thing. In like manner: Deut. viii. 20, עֲקֹב לֹא תִשְׁמְעוּן BECAUSE (that) you will not hear; or, of your not hearing; taking לֹא as a noun signifying deficiency, lack, want, or the like. See also Gen. xxii. 16, xxvii. 5, xxxviii. 11, Numb. xi. 20, 1 Kings xxii. 42, Ps. cxix. 136. And more particularly with Infinitives or verbal nouns, Numb. xiv. 16, Judg. vi. 18, Is. xlvi. 4, lx. 15, 2 Chron. xxviii. 6.

4. It is not meant to be affirmed, however, that this sort of construction is universally adhered to. The truth is, it is very much left to the writer either to express himself thus, or to employ a greater number of words; and, what is most remarkable, we sometimes find both methods adopted in the same context: e. g. עַד חַמַּת אָחִיךָ תִּשְׁרָף וְשָׂכַח עַל שְׁלֵשָׁה עָלַי &c. until THAT (time in) WHICH the heat of thy brother shall turn away: UNTIL THE TURNING AWAY of thy brother's anger from thee: AND (until) HE HAVE FORGOTTEN, &c. Gen. xxvii. 44—5; עַל שְׁלֵשָׁה עָלַי—מֵאַחַד אֲתֵּינָתָהּ יְהוָה (וְעַל-אֲשֶׁר) חָקְרוּ לֹא שָׁמְרוּ ON ACCOUNT OF three... ON ACCOUNT of their despising the law of Jehovah, AND (on the account that) they have not kept his statutes, Amos ii. 4.—See also 1 Sam. iv. 19, 1 Kings xviii. 18, Is. x. 2, xxx. 12, xxxvii. 29, Jer. vii. 13. So the word מְרַם not yet, is found twice in Zeph. ii. 2, with לֹא—בְּמֶרְסָם לֹא.

5. It is the opinion of Shroederus (R. 105), that לֵבָּן lest, and אִם if, surely, &c. imply an ellipsis of some other word or words: as, אֲפֹרֶתְנִל (I will take care) lest thou take away, &c., Gen. xxxi. 31. I can see no necessity for this. The real meaning of the word לֵבָּן is, seeing, observing, or the like, from the root פָּנָה; and if so, the passage may be rendered thus: I feared, for I said, SEEING THOU (mightest) TAKE AWAY, &c. So, in the other passage cited, viz. 2 Kings ii. 16, אֲפֹרֶתְנִשְׂאוּ רִיחֵ יְהוָה SEEING (that) the Spirit of Jehovah (might) HAVE TAKEN HIM UP. So also with respect to the particle אִם: 2 Sam. xi. 11, חַיֵּךְ וְחַיֵּי נַפְשֶׁךָ אִם אֲתֵּינָתְךָ הַזֶּה (as) thy life and the life of thy soul (exists, so) SURELY shall I do this thing? And again, Gen. xxiv. 37, 38, וַיִּשָּׁבַעְנִי אֲדֹנָי לֵאמֹר לֹא-תִקַּח אִשָּׁה לְבְנִי מִבְּנוֹת הַכְּנַעֲנִי אֲשֶׁר וַיִּשָּׁבַעְנִי אֲדֹנָי יֵשֵׁב בְּאֶרְצוֹ : אִם-לֹא אֶל-בֵּית-אָבִי תִלְךָ &c., And my Lord swore me, saying, Take not a wife for my son from the daughters of the Canaanite, in whose land I dwell: SURELY not. Go thou to my father's house, &c. And at vr. 41, אַז הִנָּקַח מֵאִלְתַּי בִּי תְבוּאָה, אֶל-מִשְׁפַּחְתִּי וְאִם לֹא יִתְנֶנּוּ לָךְ וְהָיִיתָ כְּקַי מֵאִלְתִּי, Then shalt thou be free from my oath (i. e.), when thou shalt come to my kindred, and (upon the condition that,—putting the matter on this issue) they will SURELY NOT give her to thee, then shalt thou be free from my oath, i. e. from the oath which I made thee swear.

6. There is perhaps no real ellipsis in any one of the passages in which this particle occurs. This, however, will depend very much on the signification which we attach to it, and on the nature of the construction in which it is found; both of which we shall now endeavour to explain.

7. If we derive this particle from אִמּוֹן, firm, steady, permanent, and hence, sure, surely, true, trust-worthy, faithful, and the like, and suppose it to be of the primitive form אִמּוֹן (see Art. 151), which will make the elision of the ך necessary (Art. 76.), then we shall have אִמְּ meaning, surely, truly, certainly, &c. which is perhaps its real force in every instance.

8. We have seen (Art. 337), note, that in hypothetical sentences, enunciations are generally made as of facts, not as of opinions. If then we propose the certainty of one fact, with some strong asseveration in one member of a sentence, and compare another with it as equally certain of occurrence in another; we shall do nothing more than what is always done in oaths in the Hebrew when this word is adopted in one of the members. In some cases, these constructions will imply a negation, and hence this particle has been often so interpreted.* There is a passage, viz. Ruth iii. 12, which seems

* It is very nearly allied in signification, and usage, to the Arabic أَنَّ, or إِنَّ, which will occasionally involve a negation, and always an asseveration: but more nearly in form to أَمَّ, which is thought to be derived from a word, signifying root, origin, &c. In like manner حَقًّا, or بِالْحَقِّ, surely in, or by, the truth, is used in the Arabic in swearing. See Gol. Lex. sub. voce. According to confirm the etymology just given : וְעַתָּה כִּי אֲמַנְּכֶם כִּי אִם גֹּאֵל : אֲנֹכִי And now that (it is) TRUE : for, TRULY, SURELY, I am a Goel, or near kinsman. This word has been rejected by the Masorets here, but without any good reason for doing so. In this place, and perhaps in most others, the words אִם, and אֲמַנְּכֶם, may be substituted the one for the other, and the sense will remain perfectly the same : e. g. Job xix. 5, וְאִף־אֲמַנְּכֶם שְׁגִייתִי אִתִּי תָלִין מְשׁוּגָתִי, and even (let it be) TRUE, SURE, (that) I have erred; with myself lodges my error. So Is. iv. 4, 5, אִם רָחַץ אֲדָנִי . . . &c. . . . וַיִּבְרָא יְהוָה, TRULY the Lord shall wash . . . then shall Jehovah certainly create, &c. And in Job xix. 5, 6, we have both these particles occurring together, either for the purpose of strengthening the asseveration, or for qualifying both the prodoxis and apodosis found in the context : e. g. אִם־אֲמַנְּכֶם עָלַי תִּגְדִּילוּ וְתוֹכִיחוּ עָלַי חֲרָפְתִּי : דַּעוּ־ אִפּוּ כִּי־אֵלֹהִים עֹדְתָנִי, &c. SURELY, ye TRULY, OR CONSTANTLY, magnify yourselves, or speak great things against me, and contend against me (to) my reproach; (so) know ye now, that God hath bent me (down), &c.

9. The following example seems to involve a negation : חַי פְּרֹעָה אִם־תֵּצֵאוּ מִנָּה כִּי אִם־יָבֹוא אֲחֵיכֶם &c. (as) the life of Pharaoh (exists), (so) TRULY shall ye go forth hence, but ESPECIALLY, TRULY, REALLY, upon the coming in of your brother, Gen. xlii. 15. That is, as certainly as the one thing exists, the other being made to appear equally so, no less certain shall your liberation be : but not before this condition is complied with. On this principle, I think, every instance, in which this particle occurs, can be solved. That it is redundant, or that it has been omitted by the to Mr. de Sacy, this particle is negative when the verb preceding it implies negation. Gram. Arab., vol. ii., Art. 667. In the examples following, however, in which he has treated it as a pleonasm, he has entirely mistaken its force, especially as he himself has cited the Arabians in Art. 671, giving it the title of توكيد or corroboration. In every instance, given by him, certainly, surely, most certainly, or the like, will supply the sense of the passage. See Art. 651—2. 668 : i. e. putting the case either positively, or negatively, some consequence will, or will not, certainly come to pass; which is a kind of swearing.

ellipsis, as affirmed by Noldius, p. 69, &c. I deny : because every passage adduced by him can be accounted for, without having recourse to either of those suppositions.

10. From what has been said on the use and signification of some of these words, it will be easy to conceive how they may be used, either in their simple or compound state, for the purpose of connecting together such parts of a discourse, as a speaker or writer may wish to connect with one another : e. g. בָּרָא אֶת הַשָּׁמַיִם וְאֶת הָאָרֶץ He created the heavens AND the earth, Gen. i. 1. So in the next verse : וְהָאָרֶץ הֵיְתָה תְּהוֹ וְבָהּ AND (as to) the earth, it was emptiness AND a vacuity, &c. in which these particles are said to be Copulative ; in others, they are said to be Disjunctive (better, Distinctive), Conditional, Causal, or Conclusive, according to the signification of the passage in which they are found. The following are a few examples of each case.

Examples of Copulative Conjunctions.

11. טוֹב אֲשֶׁר-יֹפֶה לֶאֱכֹל וְלִשְׁתּוֹת. It is a good, THAT one becomingly eat and drink, &c. Eccl. v. 17 ; וְהוּא אֲדָמוּנִי עִם-יֹפֶה עֵינָיִם, And he was ruddy WITH (being) beautiful of eyes, 1 Sam. xvi. 12 ; וַיִּתְּנֶהוּ לְדָוִד וְעַד חֲרָבּוֹ AND he gave it to David, EVEN his garments AND EVEN TO his sword, &c. Ib. xviii. 4.

See also Gen. vii. 23. In many cases, there is an apparent excess in the use of the copulative conjunctions, which has been termed by the Grammarians πολυσύνθετον. So Gen. xxv. 34, xl. 8, Jos. vii. 11, 2 Kings ii. 14, Ps. cvii. 37, &c. and in the New Testament, John x. 27, 28, 1 Cor. xiii. 1, 2, 3, &c. perhaps to excite attention only. See Art. 222. 7.

12. In other instances they are omitted, for the purpose of exhibiting the order of events, &c. the more closely or rapidly in succession, as in the Latin, "Veni, vidi, vici," &c. See Therefore I hope, Lam. iii. 21 ; לְמַעַן שְׂמֹךְ , Because of thy name, 1 Kings viii. 41, &c.

It would be endless to give examples of every case ; we must therefore refer the Reader to Noldius, Glassius, &c., as before.

16. Of the Conclusive conjunctions it will be unnecessary to say any thing. Those which are used as Causals in one place, may be employed as Conclusives in another ; the position and context being the only means, by which the peculiar character and bearing of these words can be ascertained.

Of the Interjections.

243. These are words, either insignificant, as to their etymology ; as, הוּ הוּ oh oh! הוּ O! אַהַּ ahah! אוי alas! אַהַּ alas! or, significant ; as, נָא* up! לָךְ , לָכֵּה , לָכוּ , go to! הִבֵּה give! הַלִּילָה profane! And, according to Schræderus, אֲשֵׁרֵי blessings! Ps. i. 1, 1 Kings x. 8, Prov. xxix. 18, &c., which were so pronounced as to be expressive of intreaty, aversion, pleasure, pain, excitation, &c. according to the intention of the Speaker. Examples : יֹאמְרוּ הוּ-הוּ , They shall say, OH! OH! Amos v. 16 ; הוּ אָחִי , O my brother! Jer. xxii. 18 ; אוי לְנַפְשָׁם , אַהַּ , our desire! Ps. xxxv. 25 ; אַלֵּאס , for them! Is. iii. 9 ; אַלֵּאס , for the day! Joel i. 15 ; לָךְ עֲשֵׂה , GO TO, do (it), 2 Sam. vii. 3 ; הִבֵּה , נִרְדָּה , GIVE (up), GRANT (or the like), let us descend, Gen. xi. 7 ; נָא סוּרוּ proceed ye, OBSERVE! Numb. xvi. 26 ; אִם יִשְׁדֶּה-נָּא מִצְּלִיַּת דְּרַבִּי , If it be (so with) thee,

* Imperat. a נָּא surrexit, Schræd. R. 106. So in Golius, in the third conj. but in the first, which I would rather take, "Intendit, proposuit sibi . . . custodivit, servavit, &c." The meaning will then be, look! observe! preserve!

Hence the phrase اللّٰه نواك may God preserve thee! Ib.

ATTEND (as) one prospering my journey, Gen. xxiv. 42; תָּמוּת לֹא תִלְיָה אָבֹמִינָבִילִי! FORBID IT! thou shalt not die, 1 Sam. xx. 2; לִי מִיְהוָה אָבֹמִינָבִילִי! ABOMINABLE to me! from (or, as forbidden by) Jehovah, Ib. xxvi. 11.

LECTURE XX.

ON THE COMPOSITION OF SENTENCES, AS POINTED OUT BY THE INFLUENCE OF THE ACCENTS.

244. AFTER what has been said on the construction of propositions generally, (Art. 212.), in addition to what has been stated and exemplified on the concordance and government of words; it can scarcely be necessary to exemplify our rules by adducing, and accounting for, every species of complex and compound propositions, as they occur in this language. We shall, therefore, now shew in what way this has been aimed at by the authors of the accents.

On the Distinctive Powers of the Tonic Accents.

245. It has already been remarked (Artt. 58. 59.), that these accents have been supposed to have the property of dividing sentences into their several members, just as our comma, semicolon, colon, and period do. Nothing can be more likely, than that the Masorets,—or whoever else they were who affixed the vowel points to the Hebrew text,—would apply some system to it, whereby the mutual dependence of its several parts upon each other would be pointed out. It has been shewn that these accents (Artt. 60. 64.) also serve to mark the accented syllables in words, as also those which sustain a secondary kind of accent.

2. But, as these accents differ considerably from one another in shape and name, they may also have been intended to point out the grammatical relations of words, or of sentences, to one another. The Jews have attached certain musical notes to each of these marks, which may be seen in the Bibliotheca Rabbinica of Barthe one responding to the other, and both joining occasionally in a kind of chorus, as has been well supposed and maintained by Lowth and others; no word could, perhaps, be more suitable than this for such occasional chorus: and hence, perhaps, the Διάψαλμα of the Seventy, and the רַב־רַב־וְ &c. for ever, of the Chaldee. See Nold. num. 1877., as above.

tolloci (vol. iv. p. 427, &c.); or in the second volume of the Hebrew Grammar by Guarin (page 329, &c.):* but this is not to be wondered at. There has always existed a predilection for a sort of chanting in Divine worship.—The Mohammedans chant their Koran, and we ourselves still continue to chant several parts of our ritual in the cathedral and collegiate churches.

3. It is not our intention to detain the Learner long on this subject: we shall merely lay down a few of the general rules which are thought to regulate the accents, with some examples by way of illustration, referring to other Writers for further particulars.

4. In considering the nature and application of the accents, we have nothing whatever to do with the grammatical, or purely formal, government of words (Art. 215. 5.). The logical import of passages is all we are now concerned with; and this may be considered in two points of view. The first is, that which respects the construction of phrases, as of nouns in immediate, or mediate, apposition or construction, or, of verbs with their apparent nominatives, or complementary words: in all which, the connexion is supposed to be, and is represented as, the closest possible. The second is, the combination of such phrases, or sentences, into periods; and in this the connexion will be considered and represented, as more or less close or dependent, according to the intention of the Writer.

5. For the first of these cases, those Accents have been adopted, which have been termed Servants, or Ministers, and which are rarely found in any other situation: for the second, two systems of accentuation are found to prevail: one, peculiar to the Books generally termed Prosaic; the other, to those which are said to be Poetical. The Poetical Books are Job אֵיּוֹב, Proverbs מִשְׁלֵי, and the Psalms תְּהִלִּים; termed by the Rabbins אֲמַת; which is a technical word, formed out of the initials of the names above mentioned. All the rest of the Books are said to be Prosaic.

6. We shall first lay down a few rules for the prosaic, and afterwards, for the poetical, Books.

7. The following table gives the relative powers, and order of consecution, of the several accents. It has been taken from a Hebrew Grammar of considerable merit, which appeared for the third time at Vienna in 1810, by one Jehuda Leb Ben Zeb. This Table is adapted to the prosaic Books of the Bible only, and is sufficiently correct, and extensive, for our present purpose. Should the Student wish to pursue this subject to a greater length, he may consult the elaborate work of Ouseel, the Biblia Accentuata of Daschelius,* or the “Doctrina Accentuationis Hebrææ” by Daniel Weimar;† which last is certainly the best work I have seen on the subject; I have, therefore, generally followed it.—See the Table of Accents (Art. 58. &c.).

2. The reader will find considerable difference between this table, and that given by Ouseel* in his elaborate work on the Hebrew accents. Ouseel's table is much larger, and contains several instances of the power, and consecution, of the accents not to be found here. Shalshéleth, שלשלת, for example, with Pésík, is placed among the subdistinctives, which does not occur at all in our table. Yerách also is among the conjunctives, of which we have not a vestige here. Záképh gādól, זקה גדול, and Sëgoltá סגולתא, or סגלתא, are also found among the greatest distinctives in consecution, to which several more, found in other places, may be added.

3. I have not translated the terms employed by the Hebrew Grammarian, but have used those which appeared to me the most suitable.

4. It will be perceived, that many of the words are abbreviated: as ש, for שׁוּשׁ, which is the same with Géresh (Art. 59.), the mark for which is placed above the ש. In every other case, the form of the accent meant is placed over the initial letter of its name: as, תְּלִישָׁה Telisha Gedóla, תְּלִישָׁה Ketanna, and so of others. In one instance, we have זְקֵיפִין, i. e. Zakeph gadol and Zakeph katon. The syllable id. is to shew that the accent, above given, is also to be used here.

5. It will be unnecessary to explain the different names ascribed to the several classes of accents in the Table, as Emperors, Kings, &c.; every one will see, that a greater or less dependence, observed in the relation of phrases, or sentences, one to another, is intended to be pointed out by these titles.

6. It should also be observed, that, in the above Table, the accents greatest in rank, or, in other words, which point out those phrases, &c. which have the least dependence upon others, are placed uppermost: and, that those accompanying the closing word of any sentence, or member of a sentence, are placed at the left side. Silluk סלוּק, for example, ranks highest, and is placed in the left-hand column. Its office, therefore, is to close a period.

* "Tabula accentuationis," prefixed to his "Introductio in accentuationem Hebræorum prosaïcam." Lugd. Batav. 1715.

7. In the next place, as these leading accents are situated at the close of a sentence, or of a member of a sentence, and are placed in the left-hand column of the table; we must look towards the right hand of each, for those which should, either immediately, or more remotely, precede them. In this point of view, therefore, Mercá מֶרְכָּא, will be found to attend on, or to precede, Silluk, as its servant.

8. The second accent (proceeding downwards) in the left-hand column, is Athnákh אֲתֻנָּח. This accent is the next inferior to Silluk; and is, therefore, usually found to close a larger member of a sentence. To the right of Athnákh, we find Mūnákh מוֹנָח, in the capacity of a minister or servant. Athnákh, therefore, is to be considered, as usually accompanied by Mūnákh.

9. In the same manner, proceeding downwards, and again to the right hand, we shall find the several accents, with their attendants, which are supposed to mark the members of a sentence, each having a greater dependence on one another than the preceding.

10. We have now explained the use of the two first columns, containing the distinctivè, and their several accompanying, accents. Let us now proceed to the other three, containing the small, greater, and greatest, distinctive accents.

11. If we can suppose a period to consist of several sentences, or members of sentences; we can also suppose, that each of these will have a greater, or less dependence, on one another, with respect to signification. The Author, from whom our table is taken, is of opinion (and with him all other writers on this subject agree), that phrases, considerably removed from the end of a verse or period, have less dependence on those immediately following them, than others have on those similarly circumstanced nearer its conclusion. Hence, he has supposed, that the first of these (termed small), considered in the capacity of distinctive, will have a greater dependence on those which immediately precede them, than others will, which are farther removed from the end of the period, &c. Hence, these have been termed small, the next greater, and the next or last, the greatest, distinctives. Now most of these, considered as distinctives, will also be found in the left-hand column; their servants or attendants will be always found there also, in the next, or right-hand column, as already explained.

12. Hence it should seem, that, for the most part, every second accent, counting from the end of a period or sentence, and proceeding backwards towards its beginning, will be a distinctive one: and that, immediately to its right, will be found its attendant or servant. In the above table, therefore, we shall have the order of the accents for a very great variety of cases. That they are not all comprehended here, must be certain from the consideration that there are several accents in use, not to be found in this table at all. But, as our limits will not allow us to enter fully into this subject, we have deemed our table sufficient for the present. Let us now proceed to our rules and illustrations.

247. Words, then, in apposition, or construction, either immediate or mediate, will be connected by a conjunctive accent; as, יהוה יְהוָה, the Lord God, Gen. iii. 1; עֶבֶד אֲבְרָהָם, Abraham's servant, Gen. xxiv. 33; אַחַת מִנִּי-אַלֶּף, one of a thousand, Job ix. 3. So אֱלֹהֵי מִקְרָב, the God of near, who is near, &c. Jer. xxiii. 23; עֶבֶד וְשִׁפְחָה, servant and maiden, Gen. xxxii. 6; בַּדֶּרֶךְ בַּדֶּרֶךְ, in way, (and) in way, i. e. in the common roads, Deut. ii. 27 . . . חֶרֶב חֶרֶב, a sword (nay) a sword . . . Ezek. xxi. 14; מְאֹד מְאֹד, exceedingly, exceedingly, Numb. xiv. 7; בְּיַד חֲזָקָה, with a mighty hand, Exod. iii. 19.

2. The same is the case when the construction is distinctive (Art. 225.): as, נְקִי כַפַּיִם, clean (of) hands, Ps. xxiv. 4; פֶּרֶאֱלֶבֶת, pure (of) heart, Ib.*

3. The same holds good, when one of the words so connected occupies the place of an adverb, or specificative (p. 293. note): פֶּתָאֵד פְּתָאֵד, sudden fear, Prov. iii. 24; שְׂאוֹל בְּמָטָה, the grave beneath, Ib. xv. 24.

4. The numerals are similarly connected with the thing numbered, as are all particles with the words, with which they are to be construed. To which also may be added verbs, when repeated for the purpose of giving greater emphasis, or when succeeding one another in order to vary the sense; or, as found with, or without, the connecting particles.

5. The verb is generally connected with its apparent nominative (Art. 216.), by means of a conjunctive accent; as, בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים, God created, Gen. i. 1; וַיֹּאמֶר אַבְרָם, and Abram said, Ib. xv. 2.

* Makkáph is to be considered as a conjunctive accent here and elsewhere. The distinctive accent here is a compound (see p. 26.), not found in our table.

6. The word complementary of the signification of a verb (Art. 228, &c.), being its objective case, is frequently connected with it in the same way; as, עָשׂוּ מִלְחָמָה, they made war, Gen. xiv. 2.

7. Also when a particle intervenes: as, הוֹלְךָ עִמָּם, walking with them, Gen. xviii. 16. There are many exceptions, however, to this rule.

8. When more than two words, immediately following each other, stand in the same apparent relation to one another; those which are more immediately connected together in signification will have a conjunctive accent, the others disjunctive ones, according to the relation in which they are found with the former; as, וְהָיָה וְכֶסֶף וְנְחֹשֶׁת, gold and silver, and (also) brass, Exod. xxv. 3. So חָשׂוֹן וְאַפֹּרֶדֶת וְיַמְעִיל, a breast-plate, an ephod, and (also) a robe, Ib. xxviii. 4.

9. This holds good in members of sentences, verbs, &c. having such relations to each other; as, וְאֵת כָּל-בְּהֵמָתָם וְאֵת-כָּל-מִקְנֵיהֶם, and all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their power, they spoiled, Numb. xxxi. 9; וְלֹא אֶרְחַם וְלֹא אֶחָחֵם, I will neither suffer, nor spare, nor have mercy, Jer. xiii. 14.

10. Also, when they are not all of the same person; as, וְאִדְבָּרָה וְיִשְׁמְעוּ וְיִצְדָּקוּ, Let me speak, and attest, and they shall hear, Jer. vi. 10.

11. Numerals are similarly connected; as, שִׁבְעִים וְעֶשְׂרִים וּמֵאָתַיִם, seven and twenty and two hundred. See Gen. v. xi. &c.

12. In all these cases, the two first words or sentences, so occurring, are connected in accordance with the rule. In the following, the two last are, for the same reason: as, דָּגָן תִּירֹשׁ וְיַיִן וְשֶׁמֶן, corn, wine, and oil, Deut. xxviii. 51; צֹאן וְעַבְדֵי וְשִׁפְחֹת, flocks, and men-servants and maid-servants, Gen. xxxii. 6.

13. The same will hold good in any number of words, subject to a similar regimen; as, בְּכֶסֶף וּבְזָהָב וּבְנְחֹשֶׁת וּבְבַרְזֶל וּבְשִׁלְמֹת, with silver and with gold, and with brass and with iron, and with garments, Josh. xxii. 8.

14. When several nouns succeed one another, each in construction with the following one, the leading words in the sentence will sometimes have disjunctive accents; the former being always greater than the next in succession: or, they will be divided into pairs, according to the pleasure of the Writer, or, as the sense of the passage may require ; פְּקֻדֹת שְׁמָרֵי מִשְׁמֶרֶת הַקֹּדֶשׁ the superintendence of the keepers of the charge of the sanctuary, Numb. iii. 32 ; יְיָ אֱלֹהֵי אֲבֹרָהֶם יִצְחָק וְיַעֲקֹב the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Exod. iii. 16.

15. Nouns, or phrases, holding the places of nominatives absolute, will be distinguished from the following context by disjunctive accents : * as, וְהָאָרֶץ הַיְיָתָה תְּהֵי וָבָהוּ, and (as to) the earth, it was vacuity and emptiness, Gen. i. 2 ; וְרוּחַ אֱלֹהִים מְרַחֶפֶת עַל־פְּנֵי הַמַּיִם, and (as to) the Spirit of God (it was) brooding upon the face of the waters, Ib. ; וְדַמּוּת פְּנֵיהֶם פְּנֵי אָדָם, and (as to) the likeness of their faces (it was as) the faces of men, Ezek. i. 10.

16. And, in like manner, all nouns, or phrases, added for the purpose of qualifying, defining, or otherwise limiting others, but not so closely connected as to form phrases, &c. with them, will be marked by one or other of the disjunctive accents ; as, הוֹצֵאתִיךָ : מֵאֶרֶץ מִצְרַיִם מִבְּרֵית עֲבָדִים : I brought thee forth from the land of Egypt,—from the land of servants, Exod. xx. 2.

The same holds good in all parenthetical passages : as, וַיֵּצֵא מֶלֶךְ־סוּדֹם לִקְרָאתוֹ (אֲחֵרֵי שׁוּבוֹ מִהַכּוֹת אֶת־בְּרָדְלָעֹמֶר וְאֶת־הַמְּלָכִים אֲשֶׁר אִתּוֹ) הַמֶּלֶךְ שָׁוֵה וְאֶל־עַמָּה שׁוֹחַ And the King of Sodom went out to meet him (after his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer, and of the kings who were with him) at the valley of Shaveh, Gen. xiv. 17. And again : וְיָדַעְתִּי כִּי־מְקַנְהָ (רַב לָכֶם) יֵשְׁבוּ בְעָרֵיכֶם Only your wives, and your little ones, your cattle (for I know that ye have much cattle), shall abide in your cities, Deut. iii. 19. Again : וַיִּדְבְּרוּ אֵלָיו הַיְלָדִים אֲשֶׁר גִּדְּלוּ (אֲשֶׁר דָּבְרוּ אֵלָיו לֵאמֹר אָבִיךָ אֶתָּוֹ לֵאמֹר כִּה־תֵאמַר לְעַם הַזֶּה) הַקְּלֵי מִעֲלֵינוּ וְאֶתָּה הִקְלָ מִעֲלֵינוּ) כִּה־תִבָּרַךְ אֱלֹהֶם קָטָנֵי : And the young men who had grown up with him, spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou speak unto this people (who have spoken unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us),—thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins, 1 Kings xii. 10.

* Hence Jarchi's comment on Ezek. i. 11, which has so frequently been cited and misunderstood, is only intended to shew, that וַיִּפְתְּחֵם, with זָאֲכֶפֶת gādōl, is to be separated from the word following, thus : וַיִּפְתְּחֵם וְנִשְׁפְּתָם : פָּדְחוּ מִלְּמַעְלָה (תֵּמָה). His words are : הָיוּ פְּרוּדוֹת לְמַעְלָה מִפְּנֵיהֶם וּמְכֹסוֹת אוֹתָם. They were separated upwards from their faces, and covering them.

Again: וַיִּתֵּן אֶל-מֹשֶׁה (בְּכַלְתּוֹ לְדַבֵּר אִתּוֹ בְּהַר סִינַי) שְׁנֵי לְחֹת: וַיִּעַרְתָּ and he gave unto Moses (when he had made an end of communing with him upon Mount Sinai), the two tables of the testimony, Exod. xxxi. 18.

248. When a verse consists of more propositions than one, or of several members of a sentence; the greater distinctive accent will generally be found placed at the end of that proposition, or member, which is most complete in its signification: or, if the context is sententious, at that part which marks the parallelism of the whole period. Example: : וַיֵּצֵא הַמֶּזֶל מִגִּזְעוֹ וַיֵּשֶׂה וַיִּנְצֹר מִשְׁרָשָׁיו יִפְרֶה: And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse: and a branch out of his roots shall bear fruit, Is. xi. 1.

2. Here, if we take the liberty to separate the context, according to the importance of the accents, we may write it out thus:—

: וַיֵּצֵא הַמֶּזֶל מִגִּזְעוֹ וַיֵּשֶׂה וַיִּנְצֹר מִשְׁרָשָׁיו יִפְרֶה:

3. The following example from Gen. i. 2, contains several propositions.

וְהָאָרֶץ הַיְיָתָה תֹהוֹ וָבֹהוּ
וְחֹשֶׁךְ עַל-פְּנֵי תְהוֹם
וַרִיחַ אֱלֹהִים מְרַחֶפֶת
עַל-פְּנֵי הַמַּיִם:

And (as to) the earth (it was) emptiness and a void:

And darkness (it was) upon the face of the great deep.

And (as to) the Spirit of God, (it was) brooding

Upon the face of the waters.

The terms וְהָאָרֶץ, וְחֹשֶׁךְ and וַרִיחַ אֱלֹהִים, may be taken as nominatives absolute; and therefore, as properly divided by distinctive accents from the context following (Art. 247. 15.). It should also be observed, we have three distinct propositions in this verse: the first ending with וָבֹהוּ, having the distinctive accent Rēviah; the second with תְהוֹם, having Athnakh; and the third ending with Sillúk and (:)Soph Pāsúk. Here also, as before, the accents distinctly mark the parallelism of the different members of the verse.

4. In the following passage we have four distinct propositions, Is. i. 2.

שָׁמְעוּ שָׁמַיִם וְהָאֲרֶץ
 כִּי יְהוָה דִּבֶּר
 בְּנִים גִּבְלֹתַי וְרוֹמְמֹתַי
 וְהֵם פָּשְׁעוּ כִּי :

*Hear, ye heavens, and give ear, O earth,
 For Jehovah, he hath spoken,
 (As to) children, I have brought up, and exalted (them);
 But they,—they have rebelled against me.*

5. Here the termination of every member marks the close of a distinct proposition, each of which is distinguished by a larger accent: and this serves to point out the parallelism, as before. So in the following: Is. xlix. 4.

וַאֲנִי אֲמַרְתִּי לְרִיק יִזְעַתִּי
 לְתֹהוּ וְהִבַּל בְּתִי כְלִיָּתִי

*But I—I had said, I have laboured in vain:
 For emptiness and vanity, I have consumed my strength.*

On the Accentuation of the Metrical Books אֲמַת, i. e. Job, Proverbs, and the Psalms.

249. The accentuation, which we now propose to consider, commences at the third verse of the third chapter of the book of Job, and continues to the fifth of the forty-second; whence the prosaic accentuation is continued to the end. The whole book of Psalms, with that of Proverbs, is also subject to this metrical accentuation: the remaining books of the Bible are not.

2. The system of accentuation is the same generally, both in the prosaic, and metrical books: that is, one set of accents will serve as disjunctives, the other as conjunctives in both; and these either dividing, or connecting, the several parts of the context, as before. The only difference observable is, that the powers peculiar to some of the accents differ, in some respects, from those just mentioned, as does also their order of consecution.

3. The distinctive accents, according to this system, are,

$\overset{\circ}{\underset{1}{\text{Sillúk}}}$; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{2}{\text{Mercá}}}$, with Mahpák; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{3}{\text{Athnákh}}}$; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{4}{\text{Rěvíah}}}$, with Géresh; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{5}{\text{Rěvíah}}}$; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{6}{\text{Zarká}}}$; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{7}{\text{Tiphkhá}}}$ anterior; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{8}{\text{Pázér}}}$; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{9}{\text{Shalshéleth}}}$, with Pěsíik; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{10}{\text{Kadmá}}}$, with Pěsíik; and, $\overset{\circ}{\underset{11}{\text{Mahpák}}}$, with Pěsíik.

4. The conjunctive, or servile, accents are the following: $\overset{\circ}{\underset{12}{\text{Mercá}}}$; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{13}{\text{Mercá}}}$, with Zarká; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{14}{\text{Mahpák}}}$; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{15}{\text{Mahpák}}}$, with Zarká; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{16}{\text{Múnákh}}}$; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{17}{\text{Múnákh}}}$ superior; $\overset{\circ}{\underset{18}{\text{Tiphkha}}}$, not anterior; and $\overset{\circ}{\underset{19}{\text{Yérakh}}}$.

5. The distinctives are here given, according to their order of precedence: the conjunctives are considered as having no such order, as before. The distinctives, on which these usually attend, may be found in the tables of Ouseel, and others.

6. It will be seen from the forms and titles above given, that several of these accents are mere combinations of two of those already given (See Art. 59.).

7. The accents accompanying Soph-pāsúk, and Pěsíik, are always found on the tone-syllable.

8. Of Mercá, with Mahpák $\overset{\circ}{\underset{20}{\text{Mercá}}}$. Mercá is always under the tone-syllable; Mahpák is placed on the preceding syllable, if there be any; if not, it remains on the same syllable. If, however, the preceding word be connected by Makkáph, or end in a furtive Pathakh, Mahpák may then be on its last syllable.

9. The same holds good with respect to $\overset{\circ}{\underset{21}{\text{Mercá}}}$, with Zarká; and $\overset{\circ}{\underset{22}{\text{Mahpák}}}$, with Zarká.

10. In the occurrence of $\overset{\circ}{\underset{23}{\text{Rěvíah}}}$ with Géresh; Rěvíah is always on the tone-syllable, and Géresh carried as nearly to the beginning of the word as possible. But, when no other syllable remains, they are placed together, as, $\overset{\circ}{\underset{24}{\text{his name}}}$, and $\overset{\circ}{\underset{25}{\text{flee ye}}}$.

250. It will easily be conceived, that if the disjunctives here, as before, have been invested with various powers for the purpose of dividing and subdividing any given part of the Biblical context into its several members, and thereby to facilitate the discovery of its meaning; the order of consecution of these disjunctives may be exceedingly various, just as the different modes of construction may require. With the view of familiarizing the Student with the several powers of these accents, therefore, tables have been formed, first giving the order of consecution found among these disjunctives; and, lastly, of these with their several attendants.

When speaking of the prose accents, we gave a table, rather for the purpose of complying with custom, than for any thing else. At present we shall give a few examples only, and leave it to the industry of the Student to construct such tables for himself, should he think it necessary: believing it to be quite sufficient to make him acquainted with the principles, which, it is trusted, the following examples, in addition to what has already been said, will be sufficient to do.

2. The following is an abstract of the analysis, given by Ouseel, of the first verse of the first Psalm.*

עָמַד וּבַמַּשָּׁב לַיָּצִים לֹא יִשָּׁב :

3. This is to be divided, in the first place, into the two larger divisions, indicated by the greater distinctive accents, which are $\bar{\text{—}}$ Sillúk, and $\acute{\text{—}}$ Mercá with Mahpák (Art. 249. 3.). We shall have, therefore, for the first great division:

אַשְׁרֵי הָאִישׁ אֲשֶׁר | לֹא הִלְךָ בְּעֲצַת רְשָׁעִים. The blessings of the man, who hath not walked in the counsel of the wicked!

4. The division next to be taken, according to the importance of the accents, will be, first, אֲשֶׁר הָאִישׁ the blessings of the man! Or, considering these two words as constituting a nominative absolute,—(as to) the blessings of the man,—which is universally accompanied by a larger distinctive accent (Art. 247. 15.). Again, the two words, viz. אֲשֶׁר הָאִישׁ, will, on account of their close connexion, be coupled by a conjunctive accent; and here we have $\bar{\text{—}}$ Munákh for that purpose (Art. 247.).

5. The next portion will be, לֹא הִלְךָ | אֲשֶׁר who hath not walked. Here we have first אֲשֶׁר |, with Mahpák and Pésik; which is the least disjunctive in our table. And, according to our consecution in prose (Art. 247. 12.),—when the two last of the consecutive words are more immediately connected with one another, than either is with the preceding, the former will have a smaller disjunctive accent.

6. In the next place לֹא הִלְךָ, must be construed together (Art. 247. 4.), they are, therefore, connected by a conjunctive accent.

* Accentuatio Metrica, c. xvii. § 18—19, &c.

7. The next two words are, בַּעֲצַת רְשָׁעִים, in the counsel of the wicked; which, from their logical character, must be construed together. They are, therefore, connected by the conjunctive accent Yérakh. This concludes the first division, or parallel, of our verse.

8. Let us now proceed to the second.

: וּבְדֶרֶךְ הַטְּאִים לֹא עָמַד וּבְמִשְׁבַּ לַיָּצִים לֹא יָשָׁב. And in the way of sinners, hath not stood; and in the habitation of scorners, hath not resided.

9. The first larger division of this part of the verse, will end at עָמַד; where we have the next larger distinctive accent. This may, again, be subdivided into two smaller ones, the former of which will end at הַטְּאִים, having the distinctive accent $\bar{\text{—}}$ Tiphkhá anterior.

10. In this smaller division, viz. וּבְדֶרֶךְ הַטְּאִים, we have two words in construction; and this is marked by the conjunctive accent $\bar{\text{—}}$ Múnákh.

11. The next phrase, לֹא עָמַד, is connected in the same way, and for the same reason.

12. Our next subdivision will be, וּבְמִשְׁבַּ לַיָּצִים. Here we have Réviah with Géresh, for a distinctive, and Mercá for its preceding conjunctive, accent.

13. In the last place, לֹא יָשָׁב will be connected by the conjunctive accent $\bar{\text{—}}$ Múnákh; and Sillúk with Soph-pasúk will close the period.

14. We do not think it necessary to pursue this subject farther: enough has been said to point out the general doctrine respecting the accents, and this is all we proposed to do. With regard to the formulæ usually given, shewing the consecution of the accents, it may be remarked, that, generally speaking, they are sufficient to shew in what way this subject is taught; but, when we come to particulars, they are very inadequate. Even in the few examples here given, our own tables fail: and the truth is, as the forms of composition may be exceedingly numerous, so may those of the consecution of the accents.

Dedicated, by permission, to the Lord Bishop of London. By the Rev. J. R. PITMAN, A. M., alternate Morning Preacher of Belgrave and Berkeley Chapels. In Two Vols. 8vo, 21s. boards.

"There is no question which the clergy are more frequently asked, and to which they find it more difficult to give a satisfactory reply, than this—What sermons would they recommend for the use of a private family? There are so many circumstances which render the greater part of modern discourses totally unfit for the purposes of domestic instruction, and the old standards, unmodernised, are so little intelligible to common ears, that it is no easy matter to point out any set of discourses embracing a sufficient variety to excite attention, at the same time forcibly inculcating the pure doctrines and practical precepts of Christianity. We really think that Mr. Pitman's work bids fair to supply the deficiency which has been so much regretted."—Quarterly Theolog. Review.

. A Third Edition, revised throughout, of the FIRST COURSE, is just published, same size and price as above.

"To such readers as wish for an Ecclesiastical History, written on the model of Milner's, and animated by the same spirit, Mr. F.'s work will be highly acceptable, particularly as it is complete, and comprised within a single volume."—Eclectic Review.
